Ranger Photos On Display

Photos of the moon taken by the Ranger 7 spacecraft are currently being displayed at the Morehead Planetarium.

Through direct contact with the Audio-Visual Department of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) in Washington, the pictures, taken two weeks ago were quickly made available for display here, faster than they were in other areas.

The Ranger 7 pictures, the first ever taken which show craters as small as three feet in diameter, have been incorporated into the Planetarium's summer science program "Spaceship to the Moon." A representative sample of the pictures is also on display in the Planetarium building.

Honor Councils Hear Cases

Men

A student was given a one semester definite probation by the Men's Council Monday night after he was found guilty of throwing two firecrackers at another student. In addition, two other students were given official reprimands after they were convicted of being accessories to the firecracker throwing.

All three students had entered pleas of indefinite to the charges, according to the Council. The student at whom the firecrackers were thrown was not injured.

Women

A student was given an official reprimand and two weeks campusment by the Women's Council in a case tried August 5, after she pleaded guilty to charges of failing to reach her destination and staying in Chapel Hill overnight.
