LBJ Speaks Tuesday At N.C. State

Dan Moore Pledges 'Cordial Welcome'

RALEIGH — President Johnson will speak on the campus of North Carolina State during his appearance in Raleigh next Tuesday.

State Democratic Chairman J. Melville Broughton said Thursday the President will speak at William Neal Reynolds Coliseum at about 8 p.m.

Mrs. Johnson will arrive in Raleigh Tuesday on her train, the "Lady Bird Special," and will meet with her husband for the day's campaigning.

Johnson is expected to arrive in Raleigh at 5:30 p.m. and return to Washington after his address.

Democratic gubernatorial candidate Dan Moore said in a statement he would extend "a cordial and respectful welcome to the President of the United States."

"We already had planned a similar welcome to Mrs. Johnson," Moore said, "and now that the President has decided to come for a brief visit on the night of Oct. 6 we will, of course, do our best to make their combined visit a pleasant one."

Gov. Terry Sanford expressed pleasure on hearing of the President's planned visit. He will introduce Johnson at Reynolds Coliseum.

WORLD NEWS BRIEFS

Hurricane Hilda Heads For La.

NEW ORLEANS — (AP) — Mighty Hurricane Hilda, mushrooming to a savage 150 miles an hour, crawled through the Gulf of Mexico yesterday as wary Louisiana coastal residents moved inland.

Civil Defense officials ordered everyone living in the low-lying sections of Cameron Parish to evacuate by midnight. This is where Hurricane Audrey hit in 1957, killing 430 people.

Hilda became the season's most powerful storm at midday Thursday. Its 150 mile an hour winds surpass those of Hurricane Cleo which slashed through the Caribbean and lower Florida with winds of 140 miles an hour in August.

Taylor: Viet Cong Far From Victory

SAIGON, Viet Nam — (AP) — U.S. Ambassador Maxwell D. Taylor said yesterday South Viet Nam's governmental crisis is a serious factor in the war, but the Communist Viet Cong has never been so far from a military victory.

The soldier-diplomat, former chairman of the U.S. Joint Chiefs of Staff, said, however, the counterinsurgency program developed with U.S. aid cannot be used effectively unless the projected switch from military to civilian rule develops a strong and popular government.

If it does, he said, the military problem may take care of itself.

De Gaulle Gets Rousing Welcome

VALPARAISO, Chile — (AP) — President Charles de Gaulle got a rousing welcome Thursday from cheering crowds in this teeming port city in central Chile. Looking fit and dapper after a restful two-day sea cruise, the 73-year-old French leader stepped ashore in warm, sunny spring weather for a 48-hour stay.

This is the sixth country he has visited on his fleeting tour of 10 South American Republics. He stopped previously in Venezuela, Colombia, Ecuador, Peru and Bolivia.

Thresher Found

WASHINGTON — (AP) — The Navy said Thursday that underwater search operations this summer located the tail section of the sunken submarine Thresher and the sub's sail bearing her number, 593.

This was the most conclusive evidence yet of the location of the remains of the nuclear submarine, which went down with 129 men aboard in April 1963, during deep-dive tests off the New England coast.

Youth Arrested In Thefts

A New York City teenager previously convicted for theft in Chapel Hill has been charged with 129 recent robberies on the University campus.

Willie Lovett, 17, was arrested Friday by Chapel Hill police after having been linked to the robberies through fingerprints on a car from which he had taken a television set.

The thefts occurred since August in parking lots at Woolen Gym, the Bell Tower, and other locations, according to police. Some of the stolen goods, including a television set, electric razor, clothing, a camera, and a 22 caliber revolver, have been recovered at a Durham pawn shop.

Lovett was convicted in August of breaking into a car parked near the Carolina Inn and taking about $250 worth of cameras and clothing. He was placed on probation for that offense. According to police, he has no permanent local address.

Unregistered Vehicles May Be Towed Off

Scooters, Cycles
Require Stickers

By ALAN BANOV
DTH Staff Writer

Calling all cars—and motorcycles! Campus officials are cracking down on unregistered motor vehicles.

Students who do not register their cars, scooters and cycles risk having their UNC registrations canceled.

Campus police will begin conducting daily checks of motorcycle registrations. This is the first year in which cycles have required registration, and the Dean of Men's office has reported many violations of the rule. Anyone is eligible to operate a cycle or scooter, but the vehicles must be parked at the official parking areas.

The seven lots which are designated by signs, are:

- 1) At the west end of Emerson Field (by Lenoir)
- 2) At the east end of the Library parking lot (behind Venable)
- 3) In the rear of the YMCA building
- 4) In the alcove between the old and new buildings of Phillips
- 5) At Craige
- 6) In front of Ehringhaus

Police will tow away cycles and scooters if they are not registered or parked in the proper area. Several violations of the rules will result in the cancellation of the owner's school registration.

These rules are effective immediately, according to Assistant Dean of Men Larry McDevitt. He said that the very large number of cars on campus necessitated police strictness in making sure that only properly registered vehicles utilize the valuable parking areas.

No Parking!

The following areas will be closed to traffic and parking tonight at 11:

1. Area between Woolen Gym and Tin Can.
2. Bell Tower Road between Bell Tower and Parker Residence Hall.
3. Ram Varsity Parking Lot behind Kenan Field House.
4. Area behind Nurses' Dormitory adjacent to Southside Gate No. 6.

Spearman Is Invited To White House Party

Cheerleaders Stage Pep Rally Tonight

UNC's CHEERLEADERS WHOOP IT UP as they prepare for tonight's pep rally which will feature a funeral march for Michigan State. The march will start shortly before 9 in the GM parking lot and proceed to Emerson Field, where the band will assist in services for the departed.

Student Leaders To Attend

By HUGH STEVENS
DTH Co-Editor

Bob Spearman, UNC student body president, will be the guest of President and Mrs. Johnson at a special White House conference on Saturday which will bring together top administration officials and more than 200 student leaders from America's colleges and universities.

Consolidated University President William Friday received notification of the conference early this week, and the White House issued an official invitation to Spearman yesterday.

The schedule for the meeting calls for student leaders to hear the President and three top administration officials at 5 p.m. Saturday at the White House. Following the addresses, daughter Lynda Byrd will host a buffet dinner with entertainment for the group.

Administration officials sharing the program with the President are Willard Wirtz, secretary of labor; Adlai Stevenson, United Nations ambassador; and Robert McNamara, secretary of defense.

"Hear Student Views"—LBJ White House sources said the President invited the students because "he is interested in the student leaders of the country and wants to get to know them and learn their views."

The students, who will come from all over the country, were selected on the basis of their academic achievements and leadership ability, as well as their interest in public affairs.

Other North Carolina students who will attend are John Atkins, student body president at N. C. State, and Pamela Dickson, UNC student president. The three will go to Washington Saturday morning and return Sunday afternoon.

Indications were that the students attending the meeting would have time to chat informally with administration officials.

Spearman said yesterday he was "delighted" by the opportunity to visit the White House.

"This is indeed an honor," he said in reference to the invitation, "and I am certain that I will benefit greatly from this opportunity to discuss matters of student interest with our national leaders."

INFORMAL RUSH

Coeds interested in participating in informal sorority rush should sign up at the Dean of Women's office, 202 South, by Tuesday.

Workshop To Meet Tonight

UNC's Opera Workshop will hold its first meeting of the year tonight at 7:30 in Hill Hall. Singers who are interested in performing with the workshop may audition for membership at that time.

"An opera workshop requires the services of many interested persons," said director Wilton Mason. "We will be happy to see not only singers interested in starring roles but also those who wish to be chorus members and spear-bearers."

"We will need technical helpers, costumers, scene designers, lighting assistants, and the like. They need only have an interest in opera and in what we are trying to do in these productions," he said.

Singers who wish to audition should bring an operatic or musical comedy selection which they think displays their voice. An accompanist will be available.

The first production scheduled for the year will be Puccini's masterpiece "La Boheme."

Civil Rights Trials Off Until Next Year

None of the 416 remaining cases stemming from civil rights demonstrations here last winter will be tried in the December term of Orange County Superior Court.

District Solicitor Thomas D. Cooper said Wednesday he does not "intend to place any of the civil rights cases on the calendar. There are enough other cases to fill the December term," he added.

Trespass, resisting arrest and obstructing traffic charges now pending in the Hillsboro court total 416 cases against about 150 people.

Cooper said he would "take another look" at the cases after the State Supreme Court rules on several appeals from earlier convictions by civil rights demonstrators.

Four Duke University professors and one UNC professor have appealed trespass convictions.

Several other cases involving students convicted of obstructing traffic, resisting arrest and one revocation of probation case also will be heard by the State Supreme Court. These appeals are scheduled for the high court's December term.

"I couldn't say now what we will do about these cases," the solicitor said.

"We will have to look at them after the Supreme Court makes a ruling. If the court sustains the convictions, we will take another look at them then. If the cases are thrown out, I suppose the remaining cases probably would not be prosecuted," he said.

The cases could be calendared for the Feb. 22 regular term of Orange Superior Court, Cooper said, but the Supreme Court might not have handed down a ruling by that time. Both the December and February terms are one-week sessions.

A special one-week session has been scheduled for Nov. 9 but that will deal solely with the murder trial of Frank J. Rinaldi.

About 1,100 civil rights cases involving about 300 persons already have been disposed of in Hillsboro. Ten cases were tried before juries. "No contest" was pleaded in about 200 cases involving about 100 persons. About 900 additional cases were not processed.

Durham Stripper Likes Her Work; Sipe And Blackwell Like It Too

By MICKEY BLACKWELL and KERRY SIPE

Her pink tongue flitted out and licked a mouthful of peanut butter from the edge of her sandwich.

Her act was over for the night. She very attractively wore a pair of powder blue slacks and a bulky pull-over sweater. Her feet were bare.

Just a few minutes before, so was the rest of her.

"I've been stripping for the carnies now for almost four years. What I do is not all that unusual. It's just like any other damn life."

Candy, who is no more than 24 years old, works as an exotic dancer for one of the shows appearing now at the Durham County Fair. Candy is not her real name. "My name is my business," she said.

She had been on stage since 7 p.m. It was just past midnight. Relaxing in the quiet of her house trailer, parked outside the carnival, Candy ate a snack and talked about herself.

"We stay on the road for about six months out of the year. The season is going to end next week and the whole show will be pulled south and parked until March or April. That's the rough part about this job—that six-month vacation every year. Most of us have regular winter jobs we go to.

"My husband," she said, emphasizing the word 'husband' to make sure we got the message, "owns the show where I dance, so I'm better off than most of the girls."

"There's lots of families that travel around together on the county fair circuit. Husband and wife teams are not unusual.

"Would you believe me if I told you I had four kids?" she said as she brushed a lock of bleached-white hair from her forehead. Her hair was long, teased high on her head, and about the color of cornsilk.

It seemed impossible that she was a mother at all. We didn't believe her. She didn't expect us to.

We asked the ages of the children.

"Four, five, seven, eight, and nine," she said.

"That's five ages. You said there were four kids." She looked embarrassed at first and then angry.

"This is the first time anyone has come knocking at my door just to ask me questions," she said.

We looked at each other not knowing what to say next.

There was a large green parrot in a cage beside where she sat. He made noises like he was trying to talk.

When we looked at the bird, Candy started to smile, again.

"His name is Polly," she told us.

Draining the last drop from her glass of milk, she started to talk again. She seemed reluctant to reveal a great deal about herself personally.

She finally admitted she was from Atlanta, Georgia.

"I joined the carnies to be with my husband. We met in Atlanta. I wanted to work, so I got up an act and started dancing. I don't mind stripping. After I'd done it once, it almost got to be fun."

We tried to get her to talk about her act. We had paid our dollars along with everyone else at the fair and had seen her in operation earlier in the evening.

The memory of the scratchy recording of Bill Doggett's "Honky Tonk," the colored lights and the motion of Candy's derriere on the tiny stage was enough to leave our eyes smoky.

We asked her to describe her act.

"You ought to know what I do," she said with a sly grin on her lipstick-coated lips. "You were there on the front row. We looked at each other again, embarrassed.

"Do you remember everyone who comes in to see your act?" we said.

"That doesn't matter," she said as she showed us out and locked the screen door behind us. "What matters is that they remember me."
