

Screen: Battling Tar Heels Taught Us They Won't Quit

By BOB SAMSOT
Editor's note: Bob Samsot, a senior journalism major, was a teammate of LSU quarterback Pat Screen and end Kenny Vairin at Jesuit High School in New Orleans.

PAT SCREEN

LSU's All-American quarterback candidate, flashy Pat Screen had kind words for the fighting Tar Heels after he led the Bayou Bengals to a 20-3 victory Saturday night.

"I'll say one thing for them, they weren't afraid to come across and hit," he said. "I'd say they hit as hard as anybody we've played this year and they didn't quit. They kept going after you right up to the end.

"Their style of playing is like nothing we've ever seen before. We figured on a strong offense and a weak defense before the game, but the defense proved stronger than the offense.

"The hardest place to run was outside, but the middle wasn't easy either. I'd say they were end-conscious. It seemed like they used linebackers to contain. Every time we'd start a roll or a pitch-out, a linebacker would move with the play, making it rough to clear out a path for the runner."

The LSU star, suffering slightly from a knee injury received midway in the second quarter said the game "couldn't be classed as my best. I played O.K., but I really couldn't say which of the games I've played was my best."

White team end Kenny Vairin, a teammate of Screen's in high school, joined Pat in expressing concern for Tar Heel quarterback Danny Talbott, who suffered separated ribs in the second quarter.

"He shows a lot of potential along with his sophomore tendencies," Vairin said, "but give him a couple of years and when he gets to be a senior, he'll be really great."

"The Tiger team, happy and noisy about their victory, mirrored the sentiment of the football-minded colony in Baton Rouge, La.

Passing by Screen, they asked "how's the knee," showing the anxiety about his welfare as the focus in the LSU future.

When Screen had gone out of the game earlier, the packed stadium, of which about 67,000 were rabidly for LSU, had fallen silent and the team lost its pep. Upon his return to the game, the noise was deafening.

"I wouldn't be ashamed of the loss if I were playing for North Carolina," Screen said. "They had a lot of bad breaks while playing in a foreign and hostile stadium. They had good breaks, too, but they couldn't seem to use them to advantage."

"Our brand of football is pretty tricky to someone who hasn't played S.E.C. (Southeastern Conference) teams before. A guy will think he's got a good block, but they teach us to roll and pursue. It's pretty hard to take when you get a good block and your man jumps up and makes a tackle.

"Good luck in the rest of the games," Screen said. "I think your ball club should do O.K. for the rest of the year. If one thing, they taught us they won't quit."

Talbott Sidelined

Sophomore quarterback Danny Talbott was released from the student infirmary yesterday morning, but will be out of action for at least a week.

Talbott suffered a possible rib separation in the second quarter of Saturday's game with LSU. He was taken to a Baton Rouge hospital, but was released in time to return home with the team.

Sophomore Jeff Beaver, who Coach Jim Hickey had hoped to hold out this year, will back up Gary Black in Saturday's game with Maryland at Norfolk, Va.

McCarver HR Wins

NEW YORK (AP) — Superb pitching by Bob Gibson and a mighty tenth inning home run by his batterymate, Tim McCarver, gave the St. Louis Cardinals a 5-2 victory over the New York Yankees today and sent them home with a 3-2 lead in the World Series.

McCarver's homer, with Bill White and Dick Groat on base, came only moments after Tom Tresh had thrilled a crowd of 65,633 in Yankee Stadium by hitting a homer with Mickey Mantle on base and two out in the ninth to tie the score at 2-2.

It was the first extra-inning game in a World Series since 1958, when the Yankees and the Milwaukee Braves played two 10 inning games.

Gibson, the loser in the second game of the series, gave up only six hits and struck out 13 but for a moment it looked as if the fifth hit had spoiled his day.

But Pete Mikkelsen, third Yankee pitcher, walked White and let Ken Boyer reach first when he failed to make the play on Boyer's bunt past the mound in the 10th. Then with one out McCarver drove a home run into the lower right field stands and saved the game.

The Cardinals scored their first two runs in the fifth inning against Mel Stottlemire, 22-year-old Yankee rookie pitcher. Gibson started that rally with a single. He took second when Bobby Richardson fumbled Curt Flood's grounder and scored when Lou Brock hit a single. Flood reached third on that play and came home when Bill White forced Brock out at second.

There was no more scoring until the ninth as Gibson continued to mow down the Yankee batters. Then Mantle reached first when Groat let a hard grounder bounce off his chest for an error. Gibson made Elston Howard his 12th strikeout victim and made a brilliant fielding play for the second out. Joe Pepitone's line drive hit the pitcher on the hip, but Gibson grabbed the ball and threw to first just in time to put Pepitone out. Tresh hit the next pitch into the center field bleachers for the game-tying homer.

The series now returns to St. Louis where the sixth game will be played Wednesday after a day off for travel. The seventh game, if necessary, will be played there Thursday.

Hamburger Cream Of Linebackers

At the end of each football season members of the Atlantic Coast Conference Sports Writers Association tackle the problem of selecting the best player for All-Conference honors from a group of outstanding young men who play the same position. Last fall prognostication centered around quarterback, where Junior Edge of North Carolina, Scotty Glacken of Dook, Jim Rossi of N. C. State, Jim Parker of Clemson and Dick Shiner of Maryland made the decision extremely tough.

An identical situation exists today, though it involves a different position and though the season is only three weeks old. Three linebackers, two of whom also play offensive center, have proven that they will present a difficult choice come November.

The players in question are Chris Hanburger of North Carolina, Lou DeAngelis of NC State and Ted Bunton of Clemson. They have three things in common: they are team captains, they call defensive signals and they are good.

Football enthusiasts hereabouts, of course, are most familiar with Hanburger. For four consecutive Saturdays No. 55 has led the defensive charge of the Tar Heels, and for four consecutive Saturdays UNC opponents have watched in awe as Hanburger ramps up and down the field.

"Chris is plenty big for college," UNC Coach Jim Hickey remarked. "He's as lean as a greyhound, but all the pro people keep hoping he'll put on about twenty more pounds."

Hickey said that Chris, a 6-2, 205-pound senior from Hampton, Va., has tremendous speed for a linebacker and diagnoses plays very well. "You notice him more on defense, but he is a fine offensive blocker. If we get a long run going, he'll be down there blocking."

Edwards: DeAngelis Best We've Had

Earle Edwards, the State coach who is currently enjoying first place in the conference, made the following statements about Lou DeAngelis, a bruising 6-foot, 220-pound senior:

"DeAngelis is the best we've had. He is fierce, a good tackler, has great speed for a linebacker and generally gets to the spot where he belongs. He gets to the ball carriers up front, at the line of scrimmage, where tackles must be made.

"In reviewing the films of the Clemson game we saw some pileups where Lou came from the off side to make the tackle. His pursuit is very good."

Clemson's Bunton was the second team All-Conference center last year. Another six-footer who weighs over 200 pounds, Bunton anchors Coach Frank Howard's defensive secondary.

"I ain't saying he's the best center I ever had," quipped Howard, "but he's one of the best. He plays offense and defense, he's a good leader and likes to win.

"I guess his strong points might be defending against passing and red-dogging. He can go through the line and get that quarterback, and anytime you've got a man who can red-dog like he can, you're ahead of the game in that position."

Because Hanburger, DeAngelis and Bunton could back the line for any college team in the nation, the choice of one for All-Conference honors will be, to repeat, a difficult choice to make. In the meantime, though, the writers will be glad they're around. They make good copy.

Ohio St. Notre D. Covet Texas Rating

By The Associated Press
Texas still is tops but Ohio State and Notre Dame have their eyes on the Longhorns.

That's the opinion reflected Monday in the votes of 40 sports writers and broadcasters in The Associated Press weekly football ranking poll.

Texas, which resumed the No. 1 position it held last year as soon as the 1964 season started, consolidated its position so strongly with last Saturday's televised 28-7 victory over Oklahoma that 30 of the 40 experts cast first place votes for the Longhorns. The others put them either second or third.

As a result Texas polled a total of 387 points on the basis of 10 for each first place vote, nine for second, etc.

But Ohio State, which walloped Illinois 28-0, jumped from fourth in the rankings to the second spot vacated by the Illini. The Bucks drew seven first place votes and 344 points.

Alabama, 21-0 victor over previously unbeaten North Carolina State, clung to third with two firsts and 307 points. But Notre Dame which made the Air Force its third victim by a convincing 34-7 score, jumped from sixth to fourth with 281 points, followed by Michigan with 233.

Notre Dame drew the 40th first-place vote, but it was notable that nearly half the voters put Notre Dame fourth and Michigan fifth.

Illinois, Kentucky and Michigan State, all thumped last Saturday, dropped out of the top 10 to make room for Syracuse, the comeback-bound 39-0 winner over UCLA; LSU, which downed North Carolina 20-3, and Florida State, which knocked off upstart Kentucky 48-6 after the Wildcats had beaten Mississippi and Auburn in consecutive games.

1. Texas 30 (4-0)	387
2. Ohio State 7 (3-0)	344
3. Alabama 2 (4-0)	307
4. Notre Dame 1 (3-0)	281
5. Michigan (3-0)	233
6. Nebraska (4-0)	142
7. Syracuse (3-1)	89
8. Arkansas (4-0)	86
9. Louisiana State (3-0)	59
10. Florida State (4-0)	56

EDWIN OKOROMA, UNC wing, fights off two Navy defenders in Saturday's game won by the Middies, 7-2. The booters today face Pfeiffer at 3.

Booters Play At 3

Marvin Allen's booters will be trying to amend for last Saturday's loss to Navy when they face Pfeiffer this afternoon.

Despite the crushing defeat the Heels feel they can still put together a strong season and get back on the right track today. Against the more experienced Middies they just couldn't get started and never got any breaks.

But Navy is one of the best teams in the country and were able to pick apart the nervous and inexperienced Tar Heels. The fact that they got only 18 shots off shows that the score wasn't a true indication of the game. UNC blasted VPI 9-1 in the first game and there is no doubt that it can be a good team.

The lineup probably will be the same, although there is a chance that Jim Hammer may switch from halfback to fullback. He played there Saturday in the second half and was impressive. Wing Drew Murphy, plagued by injuries, may be ready to play, releasing Captain Jim Talbot to play halfback.
