

Frosh Face Duke For Big 4 Title

By PETE GAMMONS
Asst. Sports Editor

The UNC Tar Babies try to take the Big Four Freshman title and capture the season series with Duke as they host the Blue Imps tonight at 7:30. Coach Ken Rosemond is hoping that Woollen Gym will be packed for this, the season's finale, with only an identification card required for admission.

The Tar Babies beat Duke three times last year in coasting to the Big Four crown, but must win tonight to recapture it. In the first meeting of this year the Blue Imps won 100-90 but UNC took the second, 67-62, both in Durham.

Beating Duke will be no easy task. Despite the loss of 6-8 Joe Kennedy and 6-5 Tim Kolodziej, they still boast more scholarship boys (five) than the Tar Babies. Six-seven forward Mike Lewis is the leading scorer and rebounder with 22 and 17 a game respectively. In the forecourt with Lewis are 6-8 Warren Chapman and 6-8 Phil Benedict. Although Lewis has gotten most of the publicity, Rosemond warns that Chapman is "about the best big man I've seen coming out of high school." He scored 31 points against Carolina in their first meeting.

Ron Wendelin and 5-8 Tony Barone will be at the guards. Wendelin is a fine ball-handler and shooter while Barone, who has been sick most of the year, is a good ball-handler and defensive player.

Despite Duke's strengths, Rosemond feels his team should win. "I don't think people realize how good we are. Virginia didn't look too impressive, but they were undefeated and we beat them easily and we should have won up there.

"We hope to get Duke to play our game. They will play a zone, as all teams have, and we must force our tempo and our type of game.

"Since our outside shooting isn't that strong we see a zone in every game—that is the only way anyone can stop Larry Miller. One encouraging thing is that Greg Campbell showed signs of busting out of his shooting slump against the Cavaliers."

Campbell and Jimmy Shackelford will be starting at the guards, with Jim Frye and either Dickson Gribble or Ralph Fletcher joining Miller in the forecourt.

"Fletcher has improved more than anyone on the team," said Rosemond. "He has really helped us under the boards and I don't know whether he or Gribble will start at center.

"The team as a whole has really pleased me with its improvement. We now have become a good all-around team, with seven semi-regular players. Willie Cooper has done a good job coming off the bench and working under the boards. Our best rebounding team is with him at forward and Larry Miller at guard."

Even though there has been good team play, Miller has been the heart of the club. He has shone on defense and under the boards while scoring 32.5 points a game. He has shot 51.5 per cent from the floor and has grabbed 204 rebounds in 15 games.

According to Rosemond, there is no one who can handle him one-on-one, and other teams have to play a zone to hope to stop him. But no one has held him to less than 21 points. Against Virginia, who worked an effective zone, he poured in 44.

"Larry hasn't gotten the publicity he deserves, but in the long run it will help him," said Rosemond.

Frosh Game Should Be Thriller

Tonight at 7:30, Larry Miller will close out his first basketball season for Carolina when he leads the Tar Babies against the Blue Imps of Duke.

Miller, who at 6-4, 215, looks more like a football player, was the most sought-after high school player in the nation last year. The "Big Cat" from Catasauqua, Pa., has led the Tar Babies to a fine 11-4 record thus far with his 32.5 average. However, the frosh have beaten every team they have played as they own wins over each team that defeated them.

Carolina fans who haven't seen Miller and his teammates perform are in for a treat tonight. Some things Miller can do with a basketball are unbelievable.

Against Virginia Tuesday night, time was running out in the half, when Larry captured a defensive rebound. As he dribbled out, he was fouled and heaved the ball toward the basket 80 feet away. As a loud "Oh" went up from the crowd, the ball hit the front of the basket and fell off.

Admission is by ID card only, for students and faculty. So if you want a real treat come cheer the frosh on tonight.

33 Right, 3 Wrong, .917 Percentage

Another perfect week, 8-0, brought my season's percentage to .917 with 33 right and only three wrong.

With the regular season coming to a close this weekend, three teams, Carolina, State and Maryland, are still battling for second place. Maryland has two games left while the Tar Heels and the Wolfpack wind up their season tomorrow.

Maybe I should quit while I am ahead, but here are this week's guesses.

DUKE AT CAROLINA—After losing to Maryland Tuesday night, the Blue Devils have been made a favorite to bounce back big against the Tar Heels. They'll be out to avenge their earlier defeat, but the Heels could pull another big upset. Carolina, by 8.

WAKE FOREST AT N. C. STATE—The Wolfpack want a tie for second. State, by 15.

CLEMSON AT MARYLAND—The Tigers have come on strong, and the Terps are ripe to be knocked off, but I'm not that brave. Maryland, by 2.

CLEMSON AT VIRGINIA—If both teams play like they did against the Heels it could be quite a game. Clemson, by 6.

SOUTH CAROLINA AT VIRGINIA—After watching the Gamecocks at Charlotte, I can sympathize with Frank McGuire. Virginia, by 11.

SOUTH CAROLINA AT MARYLAND—Unless the Terps choke, it shouldn't be a contest after the first three minutes. Maryland, by 23.

Maryland Favored In Conference Meet

By PETE CROSS
DTH Sports Writer

Carolina's track team, which completed the regular season undefeated, travels to Raleigh on Saturday for the 12th annual ACC Indoor Games, starting at 10:30 a.m.

Maryland's thinclads have dominated the track and field scene for the past decade, and they have claimed the indoor crown every year since 1955. Carolina has defeated every team in the conference in dual or triangular competition with the exceptions of Virginia and the Terps whom they have not faced.

"Maryland's strength should prevail," commented UNC Coach Joe Hilton, "but there should be real good competition all the way." When asked about Carolina's potential, the graying coach noted, "our depth is not real good, and we will probably lose important points to individuals from weaker teams." However, Hilton is optimistic about UNC's performance due to the basic determination and desire of his pupils.

"Maryland's strength will be displayed in the field events and weights," predicts Hilton, "and exceptional depth will carry them through the races." He noted their outstanding potential in the pole vault, high jump, broad jump and hurdles. Terps' coach Jim Kehoe will bring an elite field of competitors to the meet. Pole vaulter Ed Bennett, jumper Mike Cole, and hurdler Paul Davis should excel for Maryland.

Duke's Rod Stewart is a nearly unchallenged favorite in the shotput. Hurdler Bob Fogle and distance runner George Flowers are both proven competitors who should shine for the Blue Devils.

The hosting State Wolfpack will be well represented by Stupart Corn, a versatile performer who broad jumps, pole vaults and hurdles. Broad jumper Carter Leland and 440 specialist Cecil Huey should spearhead Clemson's effort.

South Carolina, who almost defeated UNC last week in a dual meet, will bring the defending conference champion in the 600, Mike McGuinness. Other notable Gamecocks are shotputter Walt Christensen and undefeated 1,000-yard runner Bob Crombie.

Two defending conference champions are among those who will represent Carolina. Art Maillet, who copped the mile last year, will probably enter the 1,000-yard run to challenge SC's Crombie who he nearly upset last weekend. Dale White is the undisputed conference champion in the dashes as he swept all competition as a sophomore.
