Astronauts Made University Alumni

Astronauts Virgil "Gus" Grissom and John Young are now official Tar Heels and alumni of the University.

The two were in Chapel Hill this week for final sessions at Morehead Planetarium before the Project Gemini space shot scheduled for March 22. They will be the first two Americans to orbit together in the same capsule if all goes as planned.

Chancellor Paul Sharp presented them framed certificates citing them "for academic diligence under the classroom dome of the Morehead Planetarium in quest for orbits of higher achievement."

The certificates, carrying the great seal of the University, were validated by signatures of Sharp and A. F. Jenzano, director of the Planetarium.

"We're very proud of our new status," said Grissom. "He has more tar on his heels than I have," Sharp quipped. Grissom has received special training at the Planetarium many times since 1960. Sharp has been chancellor at Chapel Hill since last September.

All U. S. astronauts receive training in mock-up space capsules under the Morehead Planetarium dome. The planetarium instrument simulates the sky as it will appear during all proposed orbits. After training the astronauts are able to tell by looking at the stars whether their capsules are in the proper attitude during actual orbits.

"We have certificates for all 29 astronauts who have studied here," Sharp said. "We will forward them to the NASA Manned Spacecraft Center at Houston for individual distribution."

Jenzano commented, "All the astronauts who have orbited so far have, in a sense, been Chapel Hill alumni. I am glad to see it made official."

Roush Ranks In National Math Contest

A 17-year-old sophomore has been named one of the five highest ranking students in the 25th annual William Lowell Putnam Mathematical Competition.

He is Fred William Roush, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Fred Roush of Manteo.

Roush was one of 1439 contestants from 219 colleges and universities to participate in the mathematical competition held in December.

Roush is ranked with two Harvard students, one from the University of California at Berkeley and one from California Institute of Technology.

Each will receive a check for $75 and one of the five will be awarded a William Lowell Putnam Scholarship to Harvard.

A UNC senior, Victor Wayne Daniel of Liberty, ranked 14th in the competition and received honorable mention.
