Holiday Now Happy Days

The joyful news that Spring Holidays have been extended by five days will no doubt be greeted with whoops of enthusiasm from Carolina students and employees who have been grappling with the problem of cramming a real "vacation" into a long weekend.

It became obvious some weeks ago that the spring calendar, which was drawn up several years ago, simply was not equitable. It called for the longest possible academic semester (Feb. 1 to June 7) with the most minimal of holi-

Students faced with the prospect of a long drive to their homes or favorite springtime playgrounds had resigned themselves to class cutting, short visits and little or no rest. Now, however, the long February to March stretch will be broken by a more reasonable vacation, and we certainly speak for the entire Carolina student body in offering our gratitude for Chancellor Sharp's announcement.

In addition to creating a more favorable spring calendar, the decision represents an outstanding example of cooperation between students, faculty and administrators.

The Campus Affairs Committee of Student Government, headed by Faryl Sims and Lanny Shuff, tackled the problem first, including the research which revealed that several more class days than the minimum had been included in the schedule.

The committee conveyed its findings to the Calendar Committee of the faculty, which in turn consulted with the Chancellor.

Thus the final decision is the result of some excellent work by the Campus Affairs Committee and fine cooperation on the part of both faculty and administration.

It is this type of joint effort that has long set this University apart from similar institutions, and we hope that every student will take time to express his gratitude to those concerned with correcting this situation.

Hamburgers

In response to a large number of requests from the town of Chapel Hill and the student community, we offer the following address to which may be addressed letters of protest concerning the construction of a hamburger stand on the corner of Franklin and Columbia Streets by Bell's Inc. of Charlotte:

Robert W. Hanna
President
Bell's Inc.
725 Providence Road
Charlotte, N. C. 28207

We believe that many of our readers will want to express their concern in this matter, and we urge all whose aesthetic sensibilities have been offended by the proposed stand to make their feelings known.

Duke's Dollars Should Inspire Us

The Raleigh Times

Duke University's trustees feel that the University must have $187,000,000 in additional funds during the next decade to meet the challenges facing it.

That is a great deal of money. But, the trustees of Duke are hard-headed businessmen, and they most surely wouldn't embark on any such venture if they weren't sure that the challenges are at least bigger than the money. The needs cover the entire range of the University: New buildings, more endowment funds for strengthening the faculty, more fellowships, scholarships, a stronger library.

The Duke need is very real. If Duke is to rank with the best in the nation, this vast sum of money must be found. And, undoubtedly it will be found.

What the Duke trustees have decided must be done for this university has a very special meaning for the 1965 North Carolina General Assembly. For, Duke's needs and the needs of the public institutions of higher learning in North Carolina are similar. The similarity is especially true when the comparison is with the Consolidated University of North Carolina. Both are universities. Both have high ranking in the nation. Both have very special jobs to do in the very special task of leading the region and the nation in higher education.

Duke has frozen her enrollment, to a figure around 5,000. On the other hand, the Consolidated University cannot freeze enrollment, and the three campuses now have a total enrollment of 25,000.

The Duke needs are concentrated on the one campus. The Consolidated University needs are now to be found on three campuses, and in the not-distant future, there will be growing needs on a fourth campus.

During the next decade, the Consolidated University must face as wide a diversity of challenges as Duke must face. And, somehow the Consolidated University must help meet the needs of at least five times as many students as will Duke.

All this isn't said with the thought of minimizing the Duke need. It is simply said with the thought of reminding the people of North Carolina and their legislators that their duty to the many thousands who will attend the Consolidated University is as great as is the duty of the Duke trustees to the needs of that university. For, in effect, the people of North Carolina are the real trustees of their Consolidated University.

If Duke must have an additional $187,000,000 during the next decade, the needs of the Consolidated University will be even greater. And, it is even more important that the Consolidated University needs be met as fully, for the Consolidated University is more than an institution, it is a real part of the heart and mind and soul of this State.

The Duke trustees and the Duke officials, able and resourceful men, will see to it that Duke's needs are met. The real trustees of the Consolidated University, must see to it that her needs are as fully met.

It is vital that this meeting be begun adequately during this session of the legislature. This will take a lot of doing, for there are other great needs, but it must be done.

One way to do it would be for the legislature to authorize an election on an adequate bond issue for higher education needs.

You're Welcome, Already

Winthrop College Incident

Russell Considers Gag Law

By TIMOTHY RAY
Fifth in a Series

In previous articles of this series it has been pointed out that the public forum for the discussion of issues of current importance which was begun in Chapel Hill by James Gardner and others under the title of Free Speech Movement, or Forum, is not under the sponsorship of the campus YMCA, and everyone was encouraged to attend this public forum, especially considering that a person's attendance is not taken to signify that he holds any particular viewpoint on the topic of discussion.

This Saturday at noon the Forum will be held in Y Court, or, in the event of inclement weather, inside Gerrard Hall. Representatives of both student government and fraternities, including the President of the Student Body, will address the question of the role of fraternities in the life of the University.

It now appears that there may be more fraternity members than independents present at this meeting. In order that the discussion be a lively one, I urge that any person who wishes to raise questions about the role of fraternities at Carolina be present, as well as those who believe strongly in the value of this form of social organization.

In the next few days, a blue-colored informative pamphlet, dealing with the war in Viet Nam, will be distributed on the campus. I hope that each student, faculty members and staff person obtains a copy of this pamphlet, which consists of a collection of photographs and descriptions obtained from prominent newspapers and other publications, on the topic of the ethics of treatment of prisoners by the Vietnamese Army.

In fighting an evil enemy, the Viet Cong, the nationalist soldiers whom we are supporting have resorted to practicing their heinous, though usually unsuccessful, methods of obtaining information from captives. It is a questionable position to oppose the forces of political subversion and, in the process, support the subversion of the time-honored standards of military decency in the treatment of enemy forces and civilians alike.

Last week an interesting problem in campus morality occurred. A sign advocating the candidacy of Norwood Pratt for editor of the DTH was surreptitiously removed from the front of the YMCA building. Subsequently, a sign favoring another candidate, one having the support of both political parties, was fastened in that place.

Now I have no knowledge of whether there was any connection between these two acts. But if there was, one might reasonably have doubts concerning the sportsmanship, not to mention the honor, of some of our fellow students.

Parts III and IV of this series explained Gardner's questioning of the value of basing our opposition to the Speaker ban on the position that the University is capable of self-regulation. Such regulation, whether administered by the State or by University leaders, is a violation of academic freedom and of the ideals of education.

The argument that the Ban is not "needed" begs the question of what it would mean for it to be needed and, in addition, opens the University to future censure should the much desired freedom ever be exercised through the hiring of a teacher eyes of those of our legislators might seem dangerous in the eyes of those of our legislators whose patriotic zeal has led them to the honest error of failing to realize fully the aims and ideals of true education.

A clear example of the weakness of the approach which Gardner has criticized has recently occurred. Governor Donald Russell, a South Carolina statesman who has been aware of the inappropriateness of the proposal of such a Ban for that State, has made a statement to the effect that Winthrop College, which has been criticized for sponsoring an address by the eminent historian, Dr. Stringfellow Barr (also a critic of the House Committee on Un-American Activities), should "screen its speakers more carefully" and he questioned "the need for this type of legislation in our state" (DTH, March 12).

I hope it is superfluous to point out that, in a great nation which had its origin in opposition to existing authoritative institutions and which has historically insisted upon its own heritage of the right of its citizens to criticize, and to insist on limitations of the power of national government, opposition to a noted scholar on the ground that he has expressed the opinion that a governmental agency has threatened the liberty of free men ought never to be uttered.

This event is evidence that, even in the absence of a Speaker Ban, men often misunderstand the nature and the value of education and that the removal, at any price, of such a Ban cannot guarantee the sanctity of the search for truth. Eternal vigilance continues to be the price of freedom.

Endorsements

SP Candidates

In light of the referendum held this past fall on UNC's affiliation with NSA, the present contest for delegates to the National Student Congress should attract considerable attention.

Having attended the past two congresses, I think that I can recognize some of the characteristics which help make a responsible and influential delegate. It is my opinion that the slate of candidates endorsed by the Student Party displays an abundance of these characteristics.

These four candidates, Wright Doyle, Jeff Davis, Bob Powell, and John Shelburne, are all accomplished debaters with experience in a variety of student activities. Three of the four are Morehead Scholars. If labels are demanded, two of them can be considered "conservatives" and two can be considered "moderates." All four are pledged to bring back to the campus next year the knowledge they gain at the congress and to increasingly publicize the activities of NSA.

There can be no doubt in my mind that the SP candidates for NSA delegates are eminently qualified to represent UNC. I heartily endorse their candidacy.

- Neal Jackson, NSA Campus Coordinator

Teddy O'Toole

We support Teddy O'Toole for NSA because he has the courage to rise and say what he thinks and the ability to do something about it. He revealed these character qualities as a legislator, chairman of the Talent Show, and an alternate at the NSA Congress.

We recognize incumbent RICK KRAMER to be the best candidate for Carolina Athletic Association President. His hard work and originality in planning the Homecoming Weekend, organizing the Carolina Sweethearts, sponsoring DTH "Athlete - of the - Week," helping obtain new band uniforms, and other projects throughout the year made the position for the first time a service to the entire student community. We strongly urge RICK KRAMER's re-election.
