Re-Elections In Three Men's Districts Ordered By Constitutional Council

Perry Resigns As Dean

Chancellor Paul F. Sharp has announced Arnold Perry, dean of the School of Education, will retire from his deanship and return to teaching next August.

Perry, who has been dean of the school since 1954, said, "I asked to be relieved of the responsibilities of the deanship so I can go back to teaching, my lifework for 40 years. I want to do some writing, lecturing and research — educational research, largely connected with the education of school administrators, supervisors and teachers."

Perry said he had made arrangements to retire last summer, but had agreed to stay on during the first year of the Sharp administration.

School 'Reaches Out'
Under his direction, Perry said the School of Education has "reached out to meet professional needs of teachers and administrators by opening off-campus education centers in Charlotte, Winston-Salem, Greensboro, Raleigh and Kingston."

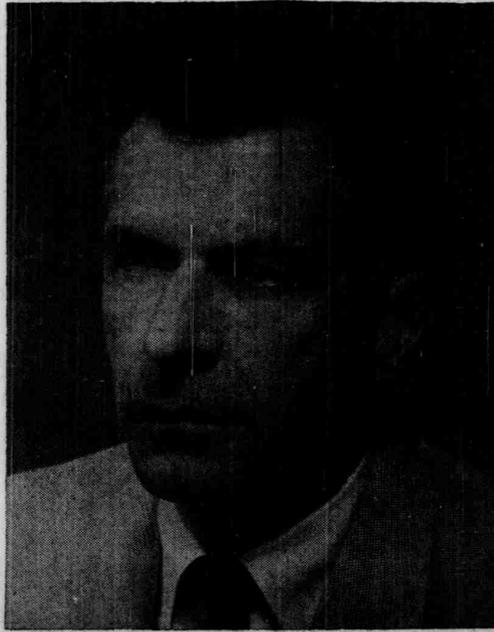

Enrollment in the school here has tripled since Perry took over in 1954. There are 1,308 students in the school now, including 483 Extension Division students.

An enlarged program in special education was recently started with a special state appropriation and a large federal grant. Perry said the school has received more than $1 million in special grants during his 11 years as dean.

"We've received grants from the Ford Foundation, DuPont and the research branch of the United States Office of Education which usually go to private institutions. But they have thought highly of our programs and been very generous."

Began In 1926
Dean Perry began his professional career in the North Carolina public schools in 1926 as a rural school principal. He moved on to posts as supervisor and state curriculum coordinator, college teacher and administrator. Prior to going in to college work, he served for 10 years as a state supervisor of schools in the State Department of Public Instruction.

After the 1941 General Assembly, he lead the state-wide air humid and heavy, and induced the volume "A Suggested Twelve-Year Program for the North Carolina Public Schools," which served as a basic course of study for 15 years.

Run-Off Balloting Set For Next Week

By JOHN GREENBACKER
DTH Staff Writer

The Constitutional Council ordered the Elections Board yesterday to hold re-elections for legislative seats in men's districts I, II, and VI. They will be held April 6 from 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

The council originally met to reach a decision on the District II race, which was marred by election tampering, but it also called for re-elections in the two other districts.

The Constitutional Council is a special committee which acts as the final authority on questions involving the Student Government constitution or laws.

Three of the four legislative seats in district II were declared won by Hugh Blackwell (SP), Jim Brame (SP) and Lanny Shuff (SP) after unofficial returns counted election night showed them ahead of five other contenders.

The same returns showed Steve Hockfield (SP) and Phil Kirstein (UP) tied for the fourth seat, with Craig Wardlaw (UP) a few votes behind.

Last Wednesday, the day after the elections, the Elections Board recounted the ballots and found that Kirstein had received 10 extra votes than the previous night's tabulation had credited him with.

Suspecting ballot tampering, board chairman Bill Schmidt examined the ballots and found 10 "bullet votes" for Blackwell had additional marks on each of a different color ink beside Kirstein's name.

A "bullet vote" is any ballot cast on which the person has voted for one candidate rather than for the maximum number allowed.

Schmidt said the ballots must have been tampered with during the night, but added he had no proof in the matter.

The board decided to hold the run-off election between Hockfield, Kirstein and Wardlaw because of the uncertainty of the vote.

Kirstein was cleared of any responsibility in the matter.

He later petitioned the council to change the board's decision and hold the run-off either between himself and Hockfield alone or between all of the candidates originally in the race, as the elections laws prescribe such a process in the case of tie or uncertainty.

Kirstein said he wanted Wardlaw's name removed from the ballot because the election laws prescribed it and since Wardlaw was endorsed by the same party, the vote would be possibly split.

The council decided to call for a re-election in the district because of the vote discrepancy, and said Kirstein's citations of the election laws were correct.

"The council was appalled at the fact that someone had tampered with the ballots," council chairman Van MacNair said. "A lack of security in counting the ballots was also in evidence," he said. "We would suggest in the future that more caution be used by the Elections Board."

The decision to have a completely new legislative election in district II brought complaints from at least two of the unofficial winners.

Blackwell said the special re-election would not attract most of the voters who backed him and some of the other candidates because it was not an important election in the all-campus sense and fewer voters would cast ballots.

"We had no way of telling how many ballots had been tampered with," MacNair said, "so we had to call for a complete re-election."

"This was the only legal way of solving the problem," he said.

Candidates in the April 6 re-election will be Blackwell, Brame Hockfield, Shuff, Kirstein, Wardlaw, Marshall Karro (UP) and Mike Tonry (UP).

A run-off election was called district I, where Julian Busby (UP) and Bill Whichard (SP) tied for a seat.

The Council also called for a re-election in district VI after a defeated legislative candidate submitted a petition which

Rough Weekend! 13 Are Arrested

It was a rough weekend around the Hill.

According to Capt. C. E. Durham of the Chapel Hill Police Department, 13 arrests were made Saturday and early Sunday morning after a rash of complaints were filed reporting

Arrested were Samuel G. Williams, Jr. of Jacksonville, Fla., 200 W. Cameron, disorderly conduct; Alexander W. Worth of Greensboro, 192 Grimes, driving on the sidewalk; Martin Jennings III of N. C. State, public display of whiskey;

Durham told the DTH that he and two other plainclothesmen went to the area of the reported disturbance and found it to be "the worst public use of profanity I have ever seen here."

He explained that the arrests were made after the men involved refused to cooperate when officers asked them to quiet down and to move their cars, which were blocking the sidewalk along South Columbia Street from the DKE house to University Baptist Church.

Campus Chest To Kick Off Money Drive

The annual Campus Chest fund-raising drive will be kicked off tomorrow.

Tickets will entitle holders to admission to the Campus Chest Auction-Fashion Show to be held April 7. Winner of the car will be announced at the show.

The major event of the chest campaign will be a carnival to be held in the intramural field from 1 to 6 p.m. Friday.

The five charities which Campus Chest funds go to are North Carolina Heart Association, Murdoch Center for mentally retarded children at Butner, O'Berry Center for mentally retarded children in Goldsboro, Cerebral Palsy Hospital at Greenville, S. C. and World University Service.

Nero Plays Tonight

(See other festival stories on pages 3 and 4.)

Chancellor Paul F. Sharp will officially open the 1965 Fine Arts Festival at 4 p.m. today with a short statement in Carroll Hall auditorium.

Immediately after Sharp, Pulitzer Prize-winning poet Karl Shapiro will read from his work and make comments about his poetry.

Graham Memorial will present pianist Peter Nero in a concert of light music tonight at 8 in Memorial Hall in collaboration with the Festival.

The festival, entitled "Encounter — Arts and the University," will continue through Monday. It is planned to be a biennial affair to alternate with the Carolina Symposium on odd-numbered years.

Henry Aldridge and Jim Meredith, co-chairman of the Fine Arts Festival committee "hope that 'Encounter, Arts and the University' will set a precedent in the culture of Chapel Hill.

Provide Focus
"A biennial Fine Arts Festival would provide a focus for a lot of cultural activity in Chapel Hill," they said.

"We have an extensive and knowledgeable format planned for festival week and we urge every student to take an active part in as many of the proceedings as possible."

Karl Shapiro is one of two Pulitzer Prize winners to be featured during the week. He won the prize during World War II for his collection "V-Letter and Other Poems" and is dubbed by some critics "the most sensitive of the Alan Ginsburg school of beat verse."

Composer William Schuman, historian Jacques Barzun, and New York Times critic Bosley Crowther will be here later this week.

The University Chorus, Glee Club and Symphony will present a concert of Schuman's works tomorrow night after he addresses the festival audience.

Crowther will participate Thursday in a panel discussion concerning "Contemporary Trends in Motion Pictures."

Barzun Here Friday
Barzun will speak at 8 p.m. Friday on "Cultural Explosion of Cultural Erosion."

Playwright Robert Chapman, author of the stage version of Herman Melville's "Billy Budd," will speak Saturday and then attend a production of the play by the Carolina Playmakers.

"Billy Budd" will be presented nightly during the festival.

Sculptor Seymour Lipton will use his own film "Archangel" to illustrate a talk on the position of the artist in society. A special showing of his work will be offered at Ackland Art Center.

Symposium Monday
The festival will be climaxed when Arnold Gingrich, publisher of Esquire Magazine, presents the Esquire Literary Symposium.

A panel of four contemporary writers will discuss "The Novelist as Journalist" in two sessions in Memorial Hall.

The festival will be a revival of the Fine Arts Forum held here before 1942 and 1944. It was the outgrowth of meetings of Paul Green (then a faculty member), Richard Adler and interested students. It was sponsored by Carolina Workshop Council.
