

Carolina Forum Speaker Foreign Policy Expert

John Kenneth Galbraith will speak at noon Thursday in Hill Hall on "A Modern Foreign Policy," sponsored by the Carolina Forum.

Galbraith is a distinguished scholar, author and diplomat.

Currently a Paul M. Warburg Professor of Economics at Harvard, he claims a Bachelor's degree in Agriculture from the Ontario Agricultural College and an M.S. and Ph.D. in Economics from the University of California.

He was a Social Science Research Council Fellow at Cambridge in 1937 - 38, and prior to World War II he taught at California, Princeton and Harvard.

He is an LL.D. of California, Toronto, Massachusetts, Bard, Brandeis and other American universities and a Doctor of Letters of the Universities of Annamalai and of Mysore.

As an author, Galbraith is best known for his book "The Affluent Society." This is a study of the economic and social problems of the high-income community with special attention to the problem of maintaining balance between the public and private sectors of the economy.

"American Capitalism," another of his publications, is a widely-discussed analysis of the problem of market regulation and power in the modern capitalistic society. The phrase "countervailing power" comes from this book.

His account of the stock market crisis, "The Great Crash: 1929," is a standard work on the great financial collapse.

All three of these books have been translated into many languages.

He has also written "The Liberal Hour," "Economics and the Art of Controversy," "Economic Development" and "The Scotch."

From the spring of 1961 to mid-1963 Galbraith was U. S. Ambassador to India. During this period he had an active part in American assistance policy as related to Indian economic development.

During this time of numerous and varied problems, culminating in the attack by the Chinese of India, the policy of calm but prompt support to India, with which the ambassador was closely identified, was warmly received in India and was widely credited with helping limit the hostilities and bringing about the Chinese withdrawal.

On his departure, the late Prime Minister Nehru took the unusual step of publicly thanking Galbraith for his help and counsel during the years of crisis.

During World War II, Galbraith was Deputy Administrator of the Office of Price Administration in charge of prices and played a leading role in organizing the wartime system of price control.

He was later a director of the U. S. Strategic Bombing Survey, and, following the war, he was briefly the head of the Office of Economic Security Policy in the State Department.

He was awarded the Medal of Freedom for his wartime services.

Singing Group Has 'Different' Sound

The Serendipity Singers will be in Memorial Hall Wednesday, Apr. 21, at 8 p.m.

Serendipity means "an unexpected discovery of a new and happy event." The group tries to live up to the name by providing a different kind of sound.

Three University of Colorado students, Bryan Sennett, Brooks Hatch and Mike Brovosky, formed the nucleus of the group when they got together as a trio.

They added bass player Bob Young, 12-string guitarist John Madden, and tenor guitarist Jon Arbenz and began performing at University parties and for local civic and social groups.

Spit 'n Polish

The Carolina Women's Council will sponsor a shoe shine this week to raise money for Campus Chest.

Shoes will be polished at 25 cents per shine in Y-Court and outside Lenoir Hall by CWC members from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. April 7 and 8.

The final two members of the group were added six months later when Tommy Tieman, tenor and guitarist from the University of Texas, and Lauree Berger, Pittsburgh, Pa., singer, joined the other Serendipities.

Their first major nightclub appearance was as headliners at New York's Bitter End coffee house. Other now-famous groups, including Peter, Paul and Mary, got their start at the Bitter End.

The Serendipity Singers' first recording was an album which was an instant national hit. "Don't Let the Rain Come Down," a single from the album, rose to fifth place in popularity charts within a few weeks.

The Singers have appeared on the "Hootenanny" television show six times and were at UNC last year for Jubilee Weekend.

Tickets go on sale Tuesday in Graham Memorial at 1 p.m.

Extracurriculars Urged By SG Shop

Student Government President Paul Dickson announced yesterday that Student Government will sponsor a leadership workshop in an effort to interest undergraduates in extracurricular opportunities on campus. The workshop will be held Saturday, April 24.

"It is part of our job to provide for future leaders who can follow in the traditions of strong student autonomy and responsible administration," Dickson said. "It is my hope that this leadership conference will help bring this about."

The conference will be open to any student who wishes to apply. Sign-up sheets will be at the GM Information Desk beginning Monday.

The morning session will feature a lecture by Dr. Eugene R. Watson. Dr. Watson is a specialist in management training at the University's Extension Division.

In addition, there will be a lecture and question period in which the structure of student activities will be discussed.

In the afternoon there will be seminars on fraternities, residence halls, Student Legislature, executive committees, and other special areas of student activities.

Participants will also attend a banquet that evening at which a member of the University Administration will speak.

It was also announced that
