

Jackson Refuses Blame For Mix-Up

NSA Coordinator Neal Jackson struck back at his critics in Student Legislature in a statement yesterday and refused to accept full responsibility for not filing a report on last year's NSA national congress to SL.

A Student Government budget appropriation to send alternates to this summer's national NSA congress was stricken by the legislature Thursday after Clark Crampton (UP) told the body that a report on the last congress required by Student Government statute to be submitted to SL was not submitted.

Jackson said it was standard procedure for all delegates and alternates to the congress to submit reports, and these evaluations would be included in a printed booklet with a forward written by the coordinator.

A copy of such a booklet was offered to SL last year.

Jackson sent a memorandum to each of last year's alternate delegates on Sept. 22, 1964, calling on them to submit reports to him by Oct. 5.

"Those of you who do not have them to me by then will find me raving mad," the memorandum read in part.

Jackson, who himself was one of the alternates, did not write a report, as he was anticipating writing a forward to this year's proposed delegates' booklet to serve as his report.

This has been the procedure of NSA coordinators in the past.

This year's booklet was never published, as no response was received from four of the alternates and at least one of the elected full delegates.

Jackson said the DTH misquoted him in yesterday's edition, and that he did not submit a report, not because he was too busy, but because he had received no response from the alternates to the last congress.

He also said the responsibility for seeing that the report to SL was received was in the hands of the speaker of the Legislature.

A bill passed by SL in 1964 said reports of alternates to the 1964 NSA congress are "required by the speaker" to be submitted to the legislature.

The camp is held annually for about 200 freshmen at Camp New Hope during the week preceding orientation week.

tions on the "publish or perish" bromide.

Quality education "depends on teaching," he said, and called for an "appropriate balance between research and teaching in the classroom."

Only incidental reference was given to the Ku Klux Klan rally scheduled at the same time as Humphrey's speech.

Duke President Douglas Knight, who introduced Humphrey, said: "You must realize this evening that you are competing with another event. A fair number of our students are out monitoring certain nameless wanderers of the night."

Humphrey replied later that he "hoped they didn't lose their shirts."

of just and lasting peace."

Humphrey talked of adequate medical care as one part of the Great Society, and predicted the passage of the Medicare bill by the Senate. This bill, he asserted, will make "a healthier, better, richer, stronger country, not because of any socialism, but because people have a sense of humanity."

He predicted the recently passed Elementary and Secondary Education Act will be followed by congressional approval of a higher education bill.

Humphrey digressed from his topic to make a few observa-
