

The weatherman says "maybe." However, the light showers predicted for today shouldn't interfere with the Jubilee preparations.

SNEAK PREVIEW — Members of the Modern Folk Quartet and the Platters play on the Graham Memorial Jubilee stage in Polk Place, in this composite photograph by DTH Photographer Jock Lauterer. Workmen began the stage and backdrop yesterday in preparation for the weekend of entertainment beginning Friday night. Jubilee this year will feature the Modern Folk Quartet, The Platters, The Four Preps and Johnny Cash. Jubilee officials have announced that if the clouds in the sky turn to rain, the concerts will have to be moved to Memorial Hall. Let's hope the carpenters in this picture are not working in vain.

SPU President Denies Responsibility

Campus Buildings Defaced By Painted 'Peace' Signs

Messages calling for U. S. withdrawal from Viet Nam and "jobs and freedom for all" were found painted on steps and doorways of buildings across campus yesterday morning.

According to campus police chief Arthur Beaumont, replicas of the "chicken's foot" Student Peace Union emblem and messages calling for freedom and equal employment were discovered on the Old Well, Manning Hall, Louis Round Wilson Library, the steps of South Building, the south door of Lenoir Hall, both sides of the doorway at Y-Court, the Air Force ROTC and the campus police scooter.

The vandals even left their mark on the front door of Consolidated University President William Friday's home.

On the AFROTC building there was a "chicken's foot" and an inscription in black letters: "Department of Murder."

Chip Sharpe, chairman of the SPU, issued a statement to the DTH yesterday:

"The Student Peace Union does not condone the recent acts of defacing of University property with signs pertaining to U.S. aggression in Viet Nam. Although we may agree with the opinion expressed, we cannot participate in or approve of this method of dissemination of information.

"We also have doubts as to whether the persons involved are in sympathy with the inscriptions or are merely attempting to discredit the SPU."

Dean C. O. Cathey said yesterday, "I'm sorry to see that kind of procedure used in delivering a message."

He pointed out the availability of various media of communicating messages, such as the "free pages of the Tar Heel and meeting places" on campus.

"I personally do not like this sneakiness of going around like a vandal marking on university property," Cathey remarked.

He said that the administration would be pleased to offer a platform for the airing of any student opinions.

Similar "write-in" campaigns urging U. S. withdrawal from Viet Nam have been made in the past week on the doors of Gardner Hall and the Pine Room and on the five-inch gun mount beside the Naval Armory.

Workmen were busy all day yesterday trying to remove the marks, but abrasive cleaning compounds and paint remover were reportedly not sufficient to clean the Magic Marker ink from the porous marble. The black smudges will probably have to be removed by sandblasting, Beaumont said.

Marchers Refute Immorality Claim

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Selma to Montgomery, Ala., civil rights marchers were disciplined, orderly and dedicated and they did not engage in widespread sexual immorality and drunkenness, some of them said yesterday.

This was the reply a group of clergymen who participated in the march fired back at Rep. William L. Dickinson, (R-Ala.), Dickinson, in a house speech Tuesday said he has 30 sworn statements to support his accusations of drunkenness and immorality.

The clergymen, including a nun and two theological students, held a news conference near the Capitol to denounce Dickinson's statements.

Rev. Dom Orsini, a Pittsburgh Episcopal priest who hiked the full 54 miles, said Dickinson is reminiscent of the late Sen. Joseph McCarthy, (R-Wis.), who made charges of communism in government a decade ago.

"He (Dickinson) forever cries 'I have proof,' but he has no have proof. We were there. We saw, we admired, we loved," he called Dickinson "A little Rev. Richard F. Dickinson, a United Church of Christ Missionary, described the conduct of the Negro and white marchers this way:

Friendly Conversations

"You wouldn't find more friendly conversations between boys and girls at a church camp than on the march. These people were deeply conscious of the high purpose of their undertaking."

Rev. Dickinson said the group called on Rep. Gerald R. Ford, (R-Mich.), house minority leader, and other Republicans, to enlist support against Rep. Dickinson's speech.

"I was extremely disappointed that no Republican stood up after Dickinson finished," the missionary said, noting that he too is a Republican. He said he hoped Republicans would not let the speech go unanswered.

Within His Rights

Ford told newsmen later Dickinson was within his rights in making the speech and "the comments he made are his responsibility."

The group said tight security measures were taken at each night's encampment. Men's and women's tents were separated and 40 men patrolled the camp all night, even entering the tents periodically to make sure everything was all right, they said.

"It is virtually impossible to imagine anyone being able to go into the bushes for any kind of activity such as Mr. Dickinson described," said James Martin.

He is student body president at San Francisco Theological Seminary and headed a 60-man security and clean-up crew on the march.

The nun, Sister Mary Leoline, B. V. M., Kansas City, Mo., who also went the entire route, said she and other members of the group called on Rep. Dickinson the day before he made his speech.

Sees Photographs

Rep. Dickinson has said he has photographs to prove his charges. Sister Mary Leoline said she asked to see them.

"I looked at every one," she said. "None was identified or dated. I saw nothing offensive to me. If it hadn't been a racially mixed group, if they hadn't been weary, and if they were not engaged in civil rights activities, no one would pay any attention to the pictures."

Humphrey May Have Mumps Thanks To Moore

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice-President Hubert Humphrey breakfasted with the President and went about his duties as usual Tuesday, jesting about his exposure to the mumps while in North Carolina.

Humphrey showed reporters the reddened patch test for the mumps he had on his left forearm and said he was waiting for the results.

The vice-president and his wife were exposed to the mumps while staying as overnight guests in the North Carolina Governor's Mansion last Saturday.

Gov. Dan Moore developed the mumps early Monday and Humphrey was immediately notified.

Humphrey said he never had mumps in childhood but his wife had.

Medical authorities say the period in which a person exposed to the mumps may contract the disease ranges from 14 to 21 days. Mumps are infectious, they said, about 24 hours before the symptoms develop.

Moore, meanwhile, was reported "fine" but still confined to the Governor's Mansion. Mrs. Moore has not been infected.

MORE COMMITTEES

Student Government is still looking for students to interview for the 23 SG Committees. Interviews will continue through the week from 3 to 4:30 p.m. in SG offices.

Speaker Program Features Professor

"The United States is not serving the cause of freedom in Viet Nam, and has not been doing so since we arrived there in 1954."

This is the argument of Dr. Lewis Lipsitz, political science professor here, who will speak for the Dorm Speaker Program at 8 p.m. in Joyner Dorm.

Lipsitz feels that our present Viet Nam policy is "disastrously wrong," according to Y Dorm Speaker Committee Chairman Sandy Hobgood.

Hobgood said that everyone is welcome to attend the Joyner program.

Tickets Will Be Free

Students will not have to pay the usual $1 for date tickets for baseball games during Jubilee weekend.

The matter of the charge was brought to the attention of the athletic department Tuesday, and it has been arranged for students to get free date passes upon presentation of ID Cards at the ticket booth at Emerson Stadium before gametime.

Friday's game pits UNC against Clemson, starting at 3 p.m. Saturday afternoon the Tarheels take on South Carolina at 2:30.

Venice Scholar Here And At Duke

The first of the two lectures will be presented in Italian tonight at 8 in the Faculty Lounge in Dey Hall on "Dante e la Controriforma in Spagna e Portogallo."

Tomorrow at 4 p.m. Meragalli will speak in Room 139 in the Social Sciences Building at Duke on "De Clarin a Una Muno." This lecture will be in Spanish.

Meragalli is known internationally for his work on Espano-Italian literary relations.

Last Day For Interviews

Today is the last day for students to be interviewed for the YMCA-NSA-sponsored Seminars Abroad program to be held this summer.

The 66-day trip will take college students on an 11-country tour of Europe at a cost of $1,300.

According to Anne Queen, who is in charge of the UNC segment of the seminars program, emphasis will be placed on allowing the participants to meet and talk with as many college-aged persons as possible in each country.

Members of student groups similar to NSA will serve as guides and interpreters.

SG Revisions Explained

The Entertainment Co-ordinating Committee, the Dance Committee, and the Traffic and Safety Committee of Student Government will not be active next year.

In fact, they only exist on paper. They haven't been active in Student Government since 1960.

Situations like this one will be eliminated by the Special Legislation Commission, created by Student Body President Paul Dickson and headed by former Student Party floor leader Arthur Hays.

"We're trying to completely revise the permanent statutes of the Student Government," said Hays. "The present ones are outdated, and often contain needless duplication.

"For instance," he said, "the functions of the Traffic and Safety Committee have been taken over by the Committee on Campus Affairs."

According to Hays, Student Government "grows like an octopus whenever a new administration takes power."

"Presidents," he said, "often establish new committees which supposedly last only one year, but they often return the following fall."

"Student leaders are not too eager to do away with what's already there," he said.

What's the result? According to Hays, these "temporary" groups in effect become standing committees.

The Special Legislation Commission will clearly define the position of the "year-by-year" committees or eliminate them, Hays said.

Another proposed function of the new commission will be the formalization of departmental powers, but to do this they will need new members to work over the summer.

Women's Dean Staff To Meet

The seventh meeting of the in-service training program for Dean of Women staff members and associates today at 4:30 p.m. in Hanes Hall will feature a panel discussion led by four senior women leaders.

The panel will discuss their views on student counseling, existing problems and needs which should be met by administration, faculty, residence hall staff and counseling services.

The panel, composed of senior women who have been leaders in their fields includes: Chairman of WRC, Sylvia Shields; CWC Chairman, Gayle Raulerson; Woman's Honor Council chairman, Sara Anne Trott; and Panhellenic Council president, Jean Dillin.

Mrs. Connor Is Foe Of Pre-Marital Sex

By JOHN GREENBACKER
DTH News Editor

Otelia Connor proved a strong foe of pre-marital sexual relations at a Di-Phi Senate debate Tuesday night.

A crowd of over 100 UNC men and women heard Mrs. Connor ask: "Why should a girl give everything she's got for nothing?"

Mrs. Connor, UNC's unofficial guardian of student etiquette, told the audience, "We're not like rabbits or animals.

"There can be no such thing as privilege before responsibility."

When asked to comment on the growing number of students engaging in pre-marital sex, Mrs. Connor replied: "It's up to them. They can try it and find out; let them learn through suffering."

Charles Allard condemned pre-marital sex because of the number of abortions and the misery it causes.

"Fit To Be Tied"

Mrs. Connor prefaced her comments by saying she was "fit to be tied" when she saw a story and cartoon about her Di-Phi appearance in Tuesday's DTH.

"My daughter called me long distance and told me she didn't approve," Otelia said. "She told me to stick to my manners."

Her ultimate word to the women in the audience was: "I can't see how any man could respect a woman who would do it."

UNC sociologist Dr. Hollowell Pope said young people must consider a number of factors before indulging in pre-marital sex.

Guilt Cited

Citing numerous possibilities for guilt arising from such relationships, Pope said, "If one party in the relationship forces the other into compromising his or her standards, then both are apt to end up feeling guilty."

Pope also said that in spite of modern methods of contraception, many persons engaging in pre-marital sex do not avail themselves of these devices.

"Persons must be aware of the possibilities and responsibilities involved," he said.

Because sex is such an important factor in life, and society links it with love, courtship and marriage, Pope said: "Society does have a right to view sex in a moral context."

Students Comment

Student comment on the subject covered a wide area.

Jerry Munro said that although a sex revolution was occurring in the U. S., one of the biggest dangers it presents to young people is "the tendency to make sex a goal in itself."

"Society cannot dictate moral standards," Lane Ferris said. He urged students to "learn through pleasure."

Charles Gowan condemned pre-marital sex relations, citing a case in South Carolina where three high schools were forced to close because of a tremendous outbreak of venereal disease.

"People are just going to do it more and more," Chuck Neely said, and called for the establishment of birth control and abortion clinics.

Over 200 Foreign Students Now Attending University

There are over 200 foreign students enrolled at UNC for the spring semester. In addition, there are over 40 visiting professors, research scholars and post-doctoral fellows on the campus.

It is estimated that the foreign colony in Chapel Hill, including families, numbers almost 400. Through efforts of the International Student Board of Student Government, the Hospitality Program operated through the United Church Women and the Cosmopolitan Club, these visitors are afforded many opportunities to learn how Americans live and to become vital parts of the University community.

A. C. Howell, adviser to foreign students at UNC, has been appointed chairman of the Southeastern Region of the National Association for Foreign Student Affairs for the current year.

The region includes North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi and Tennessee.

As chairman, Howell is now attending a workshop for regional chairmen and the annual conference for Foreign Student Affairs in Philadelphia, Pa. The conference opened Tuesday and will continue through Saturday.

Today, Howell will preside as discussion leader at a conference on Emerging Obstacles to the Education of Foreign Students.

Honor Code Said 'Feared'

By EDWARD VICK
DTH Feature Writer

"I think more people have a fear of the honor system than a respect for it."

This is the opinion of John Ingram, UNC's Attorney General. "Many students are ignorant of the court system here. Some students who apply for positions on the Attorney General's staff don't even know what goes on in the various councils," he said.

Ingram said this ignorance hurts both the students and the reputation of the courts.

"The honor system is fairly well stressed, but no one really knows what would happen if he should be turned in.

"The Honor Council is not a bunch of blood-thirsty people. They give each defendant every chance to prove his innocence."

Ingram said he does not think the ignorance of court procedures is a result of the system used.

"I think the honor code system works better than any other system we could have here. It may not always be right, but it still gives the student the right chance to turn himself in, to show his initiative and responsibility."

The number of cases handled might be some indication of the system's effectiveness. "We have had 88 cases dating from the first summer session, 1964," he said. This number comes from the residence, honor and fraternity councils.

"Most students are turned in by their professors," he said, "but no one man seems to turn in more than the rest."
