

"I GIVE UP": Those modern civ books are pretty dull, and anyway, what better place is there for a nap than the undergraduate Library. The library, replete with air conditioning, is one of the coolest spots on this hot campus. However, coats and beds are strictly forbidden. — Photo by Ernest Robl.

Special Education Expert To Visit Second Session

The president of the National Council for Exceptional Children will be a visiting professor here during the second term of the summer session. Dr. Maynard C. Reynolds will lecture in the field of special education at the School of Education. He is a professor and head of the Department of Special Education at the University of Minnesota. He is author of 20 professional and scientific publications and he has served on a number of national committees set up to plan and carry through extensive programs for education of exceptional children.

At present, Reynolds is a member of the U. S. Office of Education Advisory Committee on Fellowship Programs for Training Personnel for programs designed to improve learning opportunities for mentally retarded children.

Pickrell, an associate professor in the Department of Dramatic Art at Emory and Henry College, will appear in the role of Amanda's husband. He has appeared as Doolittle in "My Fair Lady," as the boy's father in "The Fantasticks," in "The Wizard of Oz" and a number of Nashville theater productions.

Gisele Lamarque of Nice, France, will appear as a French maid. Miss Lamarque has been seen in a WUNC television production of Tennessee Williams "Moony's Kid Don't Cry."

Peace Corps Test Set For Saturday

The next area Peace Corps Placement Test will be given Saturday morning at the Main Post Office in Durham.

To be eligible for the test, students must have completed a Peace Corps questionnaire, available at any post office.

Plan Under Preparation For Campus Post Office

Plans for a post office on campus are now being drawn up, according to regional post office official C. B. Gladden of Atlanta.

The report was made yesterday by the Chapel Hill Weekly.

In a letter to North Carolina Sen. B. Everett Jordan, Gladden said: "We are now in the process of coordinating our projected space requirements and preparing a site utilization plan. As soon as these are completed, we will again meet with University officials."

The text of the letter:

"Some time ago, the Post Office Department, recognizing the need for improved facilities at Chapel Hill, approved the acquisition of a new facility on a leased basis. Under this original plan, the present quarters would cease to be used as a post office and would revert to General Services Administration for disposition.

"We have diligently attempted to acquire a site that would be suitable for construction of a new postal facility at Chapel Hill. Our real estate representatives have found property values in desirable areas to be extremely high. If, as it now appears possible, we may have to consider the establishment of a postal station to relieve the space situation at the Main office, we will retain possession of the present quarters. We are exploring all possible avenues to alleviate the space condition at Chapel Hill.

"With reference to the proposed station on the campus of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, Regional officials, including our Director of Engineering and Facilities Division and Chief of our Real Estate Branch, met with Dr. William Friday, President of Greater North Carolina Universities, on April 29 and reviewed the possibilities of a suitable station on the campus, which would be accessible also to the public in the nearby area for their postal needs.

"We are now in the process of coordinating our projected space requirements and preparing a site utilization plan. As soon as these are completed, we will again meet with the University officials. Your interest in this postal matter is appreciated."

Chapel Hill Postmaster Paul Cheek said such a proposal was made some time ago but had been put aside because the University said adequate space was not available. There is a general feeling now, however, Cheek said, that there should be a station on the campus.

The proposed station would be operated by the Post Office Department in addition to the Chapel Hill Post Office and would be the first step toward providing more adequate facilities for the Post Office Department here, Cheek said.

Student Government has studied the establishment of a post office unit here.
