

Chapel Hill Votes 'Yes' For Library

In the unlikely event that students can't find the volume they want in Louis Round Wilson Library, they will soon have another library to search through.

Chapel Hill voters gave sound approval to plans for a new town library Tuesday when they passed a library bond issue by a vote of 1,079 to 65.

The bond issue of up to $150,000 will be used to finance new facilities, including land acquisition, construction and furnishing costs, for the Chapel Hill Public Library. The library will be built at the corner of Boundary and East Franklin Streets.

Preliminary plans for the new building will be drawn up now and a preliminary application for federal funds will be submitted. Up to 38 per cent of the total cost, estimated at $165,000, is available from the federal government.

Local funds, however, must be on hand before an application may be filed. The library already has about $15,000 in building funds for the new library.

Representatives of the library are expected to meet with the Town Board of Aldermen Monday night to discuss the library's plans and to select an architect.

Attack Charge Not Pressed

Walter Francis Freeman, 30-year-old New Yorker accused last week of attacking a 17-year-old coed, pleaded guilty Friday to the lesser charge of using a room for immoral purposes and was fined $25 and costs in Recorder's Court.

The coed did not prosecute the attack charge.

According to Chapel Hill Police Chief William Blake, the woman told police last week that Freeman had forced her into his room and attacked her on the night of June 28.
