

Only Dental School Dean

Brauer To Resign Deanship

Dr. John C. Brauer, the first and only dean of the School of Dentistry since it was established 15 years ago, has announced his plans to retire from the deanship effective next July 1.

He will remain on the dental faculty here as professor of pedodontics.

Brauer, who will reach his 60th birthday in September, has asked that he be relieved of the deanship for reasons of health. Relinquishing the deanship has been under continuing consideration since a serious heart attack in 1956, he said.

He has requested a one-year leave of absence to become effective immediately after stepping down as dean. His plans are incomplete, but they will include the revision of textbooks he has co-authored and co-edited and a continued interest in serving as consultant to several federal agencies, foundations and other dental schools.

Brauer was dean of the dental school at the University of Southern California when he was called upon to help develop a new school here.

He arrived here in January, 1950. N. C. Memorial Hospital was under construction, the General Assembly had appropriated funds for a new dental school and the University had decided where the building would be erected.

"Our objective was to activate our first class of students in the fall," Brauer recalls. This allowed eight months to reach an objective which deans normally are given three or four years to reach.

...to step down

The original faculty included Brauer and three others. The four-member faculty designed, developed and approved a four-year curriculum for the new school.

Two quonset huts were erected on the site now occupied by the medical school's research wing.

The first class of 40 students began instruction on schedule in September, 1950. The first class graduated in 1954. The 12th class received its D.D.S. degrees in June.

One of the big questions facing the new dental school was whether it could attract enough patients to accommodate its student needs.

The first patient arrived in the fall of 1952 — for the junior class.

Brauer, who never doubted that patients would be available, now says, "We have had — and still have — a very adequate number of patients for our educational needs."

During his deanship here, the concept of intramural practice has been a major factor in attracting and keeping a high-caliber faculty. His idea of allowing faculty members to engage in private practice in order to provide additional funds to the University for salary considerations has become a model for other dental schools throughout the nation.

"Eventually," Brauer predicts, "the pattern will be adapted by all dental schools."

He was the recipient last year of the Distinguished Service Award of the N. C. Dental Society for his many contributions to dentistry as "an educator, orator, gentleman, civic and Christian leader."

Brauer was honored in 1963 with the O. Max Gardner Award, given each year to "that member of the University of North Carolina faculty who has contributed the most to the good of the human race" during the past year.

Brauer considers the establishment of the Dental Foundation of North Carolina in 1950 as one of the most significant contributions to the national stature attained by the UNC School of Dentistry.

He was a co-founder of the foundation and has served as its secretary-treasurer since its establishment.

The foundation provided funds so the dental school here could have one of the first closed-circuit television systems in a U. S. dental school. It made possible one of the first dental research laboratories with humidity and temperature controls.

The Dental Foundation also provided about one-third of the funds for the Dental Research Center building to be constructed on the campus here beginning this fall.

"I know of no single activity we've had which has brought the dental profession of the state and our dental school closer together in a solidarity of purpose than the dental foundation," Brauer says.

15 Will Attend NSA Conference

By LYNNE HARVEL

Fifteen UNC students will travel to Madison, Wis., for the National Student Association annual congress Aug. 2 through Sept. 2.

The congress "provides a meeting place for students from every area of the country to discuss mutual problems and ideas, and it is the official decision-making body for the policies and programs of USNSA."

Student Body President Paul Dickson will attend the Student Body Presidents' Conference Aug. 17 through Aug. 21. Eric Van Loon will attend the NSA Coordinators' Conference. Three additional students will attend the congress as observers.

Carolina has been represented as a voting delegation since the founding of the Congress in 1947. Dickson said UNC has become a powerful voice and a leader at the congress. The political background, the two-party system, and the active interest in campus politics has prepared the University for its major role in the congress, he said.

Dickson said UNC's leading participation in the Congress places UNC in the role of a diplomat and moderator. He also said the Congress is "largely idealistic," and "a place to shop for ideas and ways to improve UNC." The congress is an ideal place to "see what everyone else is doing," and "see how other colleges are handling our mutual problems."

The congress passes legislation which becomes the laws and policies of NSA for the following year. "Carolina is not obligated to adopt the policies of NSA which are not congruent with Carolina's policies," he said.

Students attending as delegates from UNC are: Dickson, Sandra Burden, Wright Doyle, Jeff Davis, Roger Davis, and Karen Rawling.

Alternates are Van Loon,

NSA coordinator, and Phil Kirstein, Kathy Cannon, Bob Powell, Mary King.

Delegates will debate questions of campus, national and international student concern. They will attend educational seminars, sub-committee and committee sessions, panel discussions, workshops, and an exhibit of representative student governments.

Funds for the trip are appropriated for NSA by the Student Legislature, the summer school budget, and supplemented by the student body president's discretionary fund.

All fees, travel expenses, and room and board are provided for the student body president and full delegates. Fees, travel expenses and partial room and board are provided for the alternates.

Newspaper Circulation On Upswing

North Carolina's daily newspapers had the sixth fastest circulation growth per capita in the nation from 1950 to 1964, according to Journalism School Professor Ken Byerly.

Their weekday circulation jumped 280,190 (32.7 per cent) a day from 1950's 856,612 to 1,136,802 in 1964, he said.

The state's population increased 790,071 (19 per cent) at the same time from 4,061,929 in 1950 to a 1964 Census Bureau estimate of 4,852,000.

"So the per capita circulation of North Carolina's dailies grew at an 11.1 per cent faster pace than its population," Byerly said.

"The only states to exceed this were Mississippi, 32.1 per cent, Alaska 21.5 per cent, Arkansas 20.5 per cent, North Dakota 16.7 per cent and South Carolina 14.6 per cent.

"This does not mean these states led in total circulation increase," Byerly said. "Burgeoning ones like Nevada, Arizona, Alaska, Florida and California were far ahead, but the rapid circulation gain of their daily newspapers did not keep pace with their population surge."

Special Term Granted Rinaldi

A special session of Hillsborough Superior Court, to begin Oct. 11, has been approved for the second murder trial of former UNC graduate student and part-time instructor Frank Joseph Rinaldi.

The session was approved by the Board of County Commissioners Monday after being requested by District Solicitor Thomas D. Cooper.

Rinaldi, 35, is charged with the slaying of his pregnant wife on Christmas Eve of 1963.

He was convicted last fall, but the conviction was overturned by a 5-2 ruling of the State Supreme Court in June. Improper evidence was given as the reason for the reversal.
