

Strike Makes N. Y. 'A Small Town'

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The situation had a strange muffling effect to many, as if the clamor of life had suddenly subsided, the peace slowed and the dimensions shrunk to neighborhood size.

"It's like being in a small town," a Manhattan office worker remarked. "It's a curious feeling."

As some sensed it, the surface impression was that nothing much was going on in the world, or so it seemed, judging from the silencing damp- ing which had descended over most major news circuits in this metropolis.

Feel Lost

"I feel lost," a midtown executive said. "Completely out of touch."

Such were reactions to the closing of most newspaper outlets here, as if the local scene had become oddly muted and insulated, without the stir of events-at-large.

"It's sort of peaceful," a young secretary said. "I know it's not real, and that all the fuss and happenings in the world are still going on, but without seeing the papers, it doesn't seem like it."

Newsstands were mostly at the stoic skyscrapers. You just don't read about it. To try to fill the void, broadcasters had greatly expanded their news programs. WNBC-TV yesterday devoted an hour to "The New York Times" featuring top staff members reading their stories and columns.

"You had to listen to the fashion and women's news and other stuff. I don't read to get the rest of it," a suburbanite said. "I keep the set on all morning before I get any news."

Radio station WINS even aired summaries of the Sunday comic strips, to help keep fans up with Steve Canyon, Lt. Abner and Rex Morgan, MD.

But to many working men, and the more industrious housewives, the day's schedule leaves scant chance for sitting down to radio or television until nightfall, and they ordinarily catch the day's news on the run.

Lonely Subways That means while riding the train, at the lunchcounter, or in slack time at the office desk or store, where it's easy to have a newspaper at hand but not electronic equipment.

And the absence of that ready news fare left an unfamiliar gap in the population's preoccupations.

Eyes of subway riders wandered uncertainly, bereft of their usual refuge in the morning newspaper. Finding themselves staring at someone across the aisle, people would look uncomfortably to the ceiling, to panel posters, or down at their feet.

Others found substitute absorption in books or magazines. You could spot even some dignified elders perusing comic books and "authentic" romances, grabbed from the denuded newsstands.

It's almost as if the town had changed all at once and the usual round of activity had stopped," observed one citizen.

"Of course, things are bound to be going on out there just the same," he waved a hand

Radio and TV

Unless you tuned in the radio or television set at breakfast, you were out of contact with affairs in general.

The atmosphere — on the subways, in the hotel lobbies, on park benches — was of something lacking, a missing link with the every-day routine, a vague sense of being cut off from things.

A tense commuter complained that it made him nervous. "I can't stand all these people staring at each other on the train."

It also upset special sectors of society, the stock market investor trying to learn the day's quotations, the horse player anxious about track results.

Newstand Dealer A newsstand dealer said he was frequently asked about most anything he had in print. "Does it have the results?"

To many people, however, even though their own particular pursuits went along as usual, there was a sort of illusion of quietude, of nothing going on. It was all the more noticeable because of its incongruity in New York.

In this communications citadel, with its endless flow of news columns press agency, celebrity stunts, cultural promotions and advertising, it's simply not normal to get no word of doings of the moment.

INTERVIEWS Interviews will be held for student legislature committee investigators and assistants this afternoon at 3:30 in the Publications Board Office in Graham Memorial.

Capable of speeds better than 2,000 mph, the YF-12A is the hottest aircraft around. Now Maj. Walter F. Daniel, test pilot for the YF-12A, answers your questions about the world's fastest manned airplane and America's Aerospace Team.

(Maj. Daniel, a test pilot since 1954, is a member of the Society of Experimental Test Pilots. He received a B.S. degree in Aeronautical Engineering from the University of Oklahoma. In February 1962, he set world class time-to-climb records in a T-38 jet trainer.)

Is the YF-12A the world's fastest manned aircraft? It certainly is. On May 1 of this year the YF-12A (formerly known as the A-11) reclaimed the world absolute speed record from the USSR. It was clocked at 2,062 mph over Edwards Air Force Base.

How big is the YF-12A? The exact dimensions of the YF-12A have not been released yet. But it's approximately 100 feet long, with about a 50-foot wingspan. That's half again as big as our present interceptors!

Is the Air Force training many men as pilots these days? Yes, very definitely. In spite of all you hear about unmanned vehicles, the human pilot is still very much in the picture. As a matter of fact, the Air Force pilot quota is on the increase.

What other kinds of jobs does the Air Force offer? Since it's one of the world's foremost technological organizations, the Air Force has plenty of openings for scientists and engineers. There are also many challenging and varied administrative-managerial positions.

What do I have to do to become an Air Force officer? Air Force ROTC is the best way to get started as an Air Force officer. The new two-year Air Force ROTC program makes this method available to men who have already completed a year or two of their college education. For college graduates, if you did not take advantage of ROTC, you can still get started through Air Force Officer Training School (OTS), a three-month course open to both men and women.

Can I keep up my studies while I'm in the Air Force? The Air Force encourages its men and women to continue their educations. For instance, you may qualify to study for a graduate degree during off-duty hours, with the Air Force paying a substantial part of the tuition.

What kind of future do I have in the Air Force? A bright one. As we move further into the Aerospace Age, the Air Force is going to grow even more important. And you can grow with it!
