Dean Carmichael On Career Women

Dr. Katherine Kennedy Carmichael, University Dean of Women spoke on Saturday evening at the annual inaugural banquet of the Durham Eta Chapter of Delta Kappa Gamma Educational Society in the Duke University Ballroom. Her topic was "The Professional Woman: Some New Insights."

Despite increased educational opportunities and increased numbers of women who have entered the labor force, talented American women are not advancing in either the professions or in management at the rate which was predicted in the 1930's. Many cliches now apply to the American women - feminism, demifeminism, the feminine mystique. "I find women pretty much just people," said Miss Carmichael. Some are born to careers (like Queen Elizabeth I and II), some achieve careers (like the abbesses of the Middle Ages), and some have careers thrust upon them (like many drifters among the female population).

In any language, the going's better when you fly.

For one thing, flights operate on schedules to meet your travel needs (which eliminates finding a ride, enduring long trips). For another, you enjoy complete comfort—modern F-27 prop-jets and 404 Pacemakers are radar-equipped, air-conditioned and pressurized.

So get going. Call Piedmont or your travel agent for service that's fast, convenient and economical.
