Hodges Heads Commission To Examine UNC Trustees

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Dan Moore announced today the appointment of former Gov. Luther H. Hodges as chairman of a nine-member study commission to probe the workings of the University of North Carolina Board of Trustees.

The commission was created by the 1965 General Assembly after Moore suggested the move in his legislative message last February. The legislature directed the commission:

"To make a detailed and exhaustive study of the manner in which the trustees of the University of North Carolina are selected, the number which should constitute the board, the terms of office, the relationship between the trustees and the General Assembly, the relationship between the board and other agencies of the state."

The study commission consists of five members appointed by the governor, two by the Senate president and two by the House speaker.

In addition to Hodges, Moore appointed Brodie S. Griffith, associate publisher of the Charlotte News; Dr. D. Grier Martin, president of Davidson College; Miss Naomi Morris of Wilson, and Dr. Robert S. Rankin, department of Political Science, Duke University.

Lt. Gov. Bob Scott, as president of the Senate, named ex-Lt. P. McLendon Jr. of Greensboro and Roy Rowe of Burgaw.

The two House members appointed by Speaker H. P. Taylor were Reps. Neill L. McFadyen of Raeford and Hugh A. Ragsdale of Richlands.

The study commission will report its finds to the 1967 General Assembly.

Lyon Exchange Applicants

Applications are now being accepted for the 1966-67 "UNC-Year at Lyon."

The program, now entering its third year, is primarily for juniors, but is also open to anyone who has qualified and can adapt the year into his academic curriculum.

Requirements include a B average in all French courses, and an overall B-average. However, these requirements are flexible.

Applicants must have completed at least the equivalent of French 21, and they must carry the recommendation of one language instructor, his advisor and his academic dean.

In addition, a physical examination by a UNC doctor or by the candidate's family physician is required.

This year's brochure will soon be available in the main office of the romance language department, 216 Dey Hall. For applications and more information see Dr. Frautschi in the French Department.

Back U-Day Says Dickson

Student Body President Paul Dickson urged students not to boycott today's University Day proceedings because he was not invited by the faculty to represent the student body at the ceremonies.

The faculty voted last month to have Senior Class President John Harmon represent the student body at the event rather than Dickson.

Dickson has been criticized by members of the faculty and student body since his conviction for a Campus Code violation last summer.

"It has come to my attention that some students plan to boycott the convocation to protest the fact that the students will not be represented by the President of the Student Body," Dickson said in a press release issued yesterday.

"While I appreciate the feeling which has motivated such a decision," Dickson said, "I would hope there would be no such demonstrations as would mar the celebration.

"I am planning to attend and I hope the student body would do likewise," he said. "Today is not a day of disunity and despair, but one of celebration and new resolve."

Plans For Air Force Unit

"There's Gonna Be a Change In Me" is the tune being sung by the 235-man AFROTC cadet corps here this year.

Lt. Colonel Kenneth W. Slaker, new Professor of Aerospace Studies, told cadets at their first drill period of the year that he hopes to eliminate the old four-year program in favor of the new two-year program.

Two-year cadets will receive an intensive six weeks of training at summer camp and the complete AFROTC program during their last two years of college. There are presently six two-year cadets in the program.

Slaker, who succeeded retiring Lt. Col. Gordon D. Kage last spring, also announced that there is a quota of 36 juniors who can be enrolled in the Professional Officer Course each year. The program has become more selective, and applicants with less than a 2.0 grade point average will not be considered.

Slaker said in order to give cadets more time for their studies, there will be no more intramurals or rifle team matches for AFROTC. He also said the Mitchell Aerospace Flight, an honorary organization for freshmen and sophomore cadets in the four-year program, will be abolished.

He said that any rising junior in the corps could apply for AFROTC scholarships worth about $2,200 for the last two years. There are currently seven cadets in the program holding these scholarships.

Finally he said the present cadet group commander, Cadet Lt. Col. Ellis J. Harrington, will remain in command for both semesters. In the past the command has changed at the beginning of the spring semester.

'My Mother's Old Bible Is True' Says U. S. Soldier

GARLAND, N. C. (AP) — A North Carolina mother rejoiced with renewed faith and prayer yesterday when told the Bible she gave her soldier son saved his life in a Viet Nam ambush.

A sniper's bullet pierced the tiny New Testament that PFC. William Donald Parker had stashed in his helmet, remembering the instructions of his mother always to keep it with him.

"I told him to read it and it would help him," a proud Mrs. William T. Parker said. "I sure am glad I gave it to him."

Her son, William, who was 19 years old today, is the oldest of seven children, including 12-year-old triplets. The Parker family lives on a farm in North Carolina's Sampson County, 80 miles south of Raleigh. They raise corn and tobacco.

Mrs. Parker, who also works in a clothing manufacturing plant in Garland, said her son had written only two or three letters since joining the 173rd Airborne Brigade six months ago and being sent to Viet Nam.

"In all of them he was telling me to pray for him," she said. "He's not too religious really but he believes in prayer."

Mrs. Parker said the family attends Smith's Chapel African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church near their farm home and she does "a lot of praying by myself."

Not only does young Parker have his mother's prayers but also those of his 18-year-old wife, Rosalee, who is expecting a baby in late December. She lives with the Parker family but is visiting relatives this week.

Parker's father, a carpenter as well as a farmer, served in World War II. He received the Purple Heart and five Bronze Stars before being discharged with the rank of staff sergeant.

"I didn't have a Bible with me, but I prayed," Parker said. "The Lord was with me, I know, and my mother was back home praying too."

Parker said any man who carries the word of God with him in battle can count on faith to help him.

The sniper's bullet hit young Parker's helmet, plunged through the New Testament, and spun out the side, saving his life. All he got was a slice of skin taken off his skull.

Two other soldiers received minor wounds in the ambush in the "Iron Triangle," long regarded as one of the toughest stretches of terrain in South Viet Nam.

Not the least surprised that the New Testament saved his life, Parker said he knew God would protect him and "that's why I wore it up there."

His mother is making plans to send him another New Testament if he cannot find a replacement in Viet Nam.

Parker's younger brothers and sisters included Harry, 17, and Mary Louise, 16, who attend Clear Run High School where he graduated in 1964. Amos, 14, and the 12-year-old triplets — Larry Lee, Jerry Lee and Perry Lee — attend elementary school.

Southern Assn. To Hear President, Chancellor

Consolidated University President William C. Friday and UNC Chancellor Paul F. Sharp have been invited to testify before an executive session of the Southern Association of Schools and Colleges Nov. 28.

Friday announced yesterday that he and Sharp, along with the chancellors of other UNC campuses, received letters from the association asking them to testify in a closed session on the effects of the speaker ban.

The commission will hear these testimonies at their annual conference in Richmond, Va.

Friday refused to predict what action the council would take after his appearance, but added that final action was due on the accreditation question.

"You don't know yet," Friday said, "but the decision to continue accreditation would be their next move."

David M. Britt, chairman of the Speaker Ban Study Commission, said Sunday the group hopes to complete its report and submit its findings to Governor Dan K. Moore and the General Assembly.

"It is hoped that commission members will be able to get together in the not too distant future for purpose of deliberation and discussion," Britt said.

"After a decision is arrived at, it will then be necessary for us to prepare a report to be submitted to the governor and the General Assembly."

Britt said he hopes to make his report by mid-November. However, the Southern Association on Schools and College plans to decide on the accreditation question after Nov. 28.

Symphony Selects Pianist As Soloist

Pianist Jayne Winfield Reich has been chosen to appear as soloist with the North Carolina Symphony during the Orchestra's 21st annual tour in 1966.

North Carolina Symphony Director Dr. Benjamin Swalin announced that Mrs. Reich was selected from among five applicants in the instrumental division of the State Symphony's annual young artist auditions held recently at St. Andrews College, Lenoir.

Wesley Building To Be Completed

By RAY LINVILLE
DTH Staff Writer

Contemporary design is one of the features of the Wesley Foundation's new home at 214 Pittsboro Street which will be completed this week.

The building combines brown-gray brick and white concrete slabs with crystal quartz. It was designed by Albert Cameron of Charlotte. Cameron has been given the contact to design the new undergraduate library and student union and book store.

The building costs $298,000. Furnishings and other accessories will raise the cost to $350,000.

Methodist Chaplain Bob Johnson said gifts from private foundations and three annual conferences of North Carolina Methodists paid all costs.

The building is two stories. On the first floor are offices, a library, a chapel and an art gallery - coffee shop.

The library will house reference books for the Wesley teaching program and those that will aid University religious majors. Adjoining the library is a periodical reading room.

The chapel will be used for worship, drama and music. It is highlighted by a tangerine-red carpet and a pipe organ. The organ which takes two years to complete will not be installed until April.

"The chapel is designed like an amphitheater. The congregation will sit on three sides of the speaker," Johnson said. With two balconies the chapel will seat 250.

The art gallery will display various collections throughout the year. It merges with the coffee shop where pastries and several brands of coffee will be served. The shop with 12 white tables and yellow chairs will seat 40.

"Throughout the year films, music and readings by students and faculty of poems and other literature will be presented," Banks Godfrey, associate Methodist chaplain, said. The coffee shop opens next week and will be available to student use until 1 a.m. Upstairs are rooms or visiting lecturers, an apartment for the secretary, rooms for five students who will be servers in the coffee shop, a TV lounge and seminar room.

Behind the building is an enclosed garden and parking spaces for 40 cars. Godfrey said the coffee shop might expand to the garden during the spring.

The formal opening of the Wesley Foundation building will be Sunday, Nov. 7, at 4 p.m. when Dean Robert W. Cushman will speak at the worship service.

MRC Court Reports Rise In Number Of Offenders

Residence hall violations have been running rampant this fall.

In five cases tried this semester by the MRC Court, 14 defendants have received sentences ranging from official reprimand to indefinite probation, according to Court

Chairman Bob Hunter. Disorderly conduct and destruction of residence hall property have been among the most frequent charges, Hunter said.

The first case to come before the court involved two students charged with destruction of residence hall property, disorderly conduct and excessive consumption of alcoholic beverages.

One of the students was acquitted of all charges. The other was found guilty of the last two. He received official reprimand and a $10 fine.

Indefinite residence hall probation was given to a student charged with disorderly conduct and destruction of dormitory property — specifically, pulling a sink from a bathroom wall.

He was also charged for damages.

The third and fourth cases involved gambling.

Seven defendants in the two cases were all found guilty and received a court reprimand.

Four students were charged with violating quiet hours — two of them charged with possession or use of an exploding device — in the last case to come before the court.

Three were found guilty. Their sentences ranged from a $5 fine and residence hall probation to a $5 fine and official reprimand.

Hunter told the DTH that MRC representatives have been instructed to report all violations of residence hall rules to the Attorney General for trial by the court.

Traffic Study Set

Dean of Men William G. Long will meet Friday with the University Traffic and Safety Committee to discuss rezoning of part of the Bell Tower parking lot.

About half of the 180 spaces now zoned for "E" (staff) sticker holders are being used daily. It is expected that part of that area will be considered for use by students.
