Tigers Growling

er that same foot put Carolina back out in front following a Clemson TD. This time it was a 26 yard field goal.

Talbot came back in the fourth quarter with a darting 35-yard scamper for UNC's final tally. He also added the point after.

The Carolina air arm was stopped for the most part yesterday. They only got 68 yards on the ground against a strong Clemson line.

Pass defense wasn't very sharp as Clemson quarterback Tom Ray rewrote the ACC record book, picking up 342 yards via the airways. Clemson and Ray also set more than 12 other records.

The Tar Heel secondary came up with four important pass interceptions to help hold back the Tigers. The most impressive was Jack Davenport who returned one 51 yards to the Clemson 20.

The defensive line had a hard time rushing the Clemson quarterback and he had plenty of time to pass. But the line also held the supposedly strong Tiger running attack to 141 yards.

Hickey said, "It was a big one for us. We took on the ACC leader and beat them and that's a pretty good day's work anywhere."

It was Carolina's last home game of the season and the 38,500 fans seemed to think it was a real good ball game.

Clemson not only has a hard hitting and tough football team, but also have the number one band in the conference. Throughout the game they never stopped playing and the strains of "Hold That Tiger" brought many cheers, even from the UNC side.

The Marching Tar Heels, as Fauntleroy said, didn't have a very good day. During their halftime show it appeared that five or six of them got a little lost wandering around out there.

But it wasn't all bad. The music was pretty fair and the majorettes were... well, they were nice(?).

On to Notre Dame. And then hopefully we can get over to Durham.

Five Will Vie For Running Title

By BOB ORR
DTH Sports Writer

Who is the best cross country runner in the ACC?

The answer will have to come in the conference championship meet Nov. 15. Any one of five individual runners could conceivably win the title.

The three most likely candidates for the crown are Carolina's Jim Meade, Paul Starnes of Duke and David Starnes of Maryland. They have performed best during the season.

Meade, UNC's senior captain, was second in the ACC last fall. He's won every meet but one this season. His only loss came at Maryland. Most people will concede that it was an off day for the Tar Heel star.

Rodgers defeated Starnes at Duke this fall. The win labeled the Blue Devil sophomore as the man to beat. Meade did just that, beating Rodgers by seconds at UNC. The Duke star owns all the cross country records at Duke and is definitely a threat to win.

Top Terp
Starnes moved into the number one position for Maryland by consistently beating teammate George Henry. Henry placed third in the championship meet last fall. Starnes' biggest victory came over Meade. However, the Terp sophomore described his loss to Rodgers as, "He just outran me."

South Carolina's Bob Crombie is the defending champion. He is a serious threat to win — is he is in shape. The Gamecock ace was soundly beaten in the opening meet with UNC. Whether he's ready to go 4 miles with Meade and company remains to be seen.

Maryland's George Henry must be considered an outside threat to the title. He's a good runner and if he's at his best he could make "Bride's maids" of the others.

Meade, Starnes, and Rodgers

ers won their BIG race at home. The race for the conference championship should be all the more interesting since the meet will be held at Wake Forest — a neutral course is four miles long. It is composed largely of a grassy dirt surface over rolling hills. There are few if any large hills for the runners to climb.

The course is narrow in places resulting in difficult passing. With the large number of entrants, the leaders must get out in front early.

Strategy and mental attitude should play a big part in the meet. Meade and Rodgers will profit most from a very fast pace. They're the type that must run every one into the ground, then "out-gut them."

Crombie needs a relatively slow pace to win. He's a 4:06 miler with an excellent kick.

Chances are Meade and Rodgers will never give him a chance to use it.

The two Maryland stars will probably try to set an even pace. If he's not too tired Starnes can out kick the others at the finish. A steady pace will benefit him most.

Maryland, the defending champion, is the favorite to win the team title. Besides two of the top runners they have considerable depth. However, don't count Duke and UNC out. Both have good teams.

There is no clear cut favorite for the individual title. The man who wins will be the one who runs the "smartest" race. All are in top shape and want to win. Four miles is a long way. It will take a supreme effort to be number one in the ACC.
