Desk-Top Philosophy Popular Sport

If you're bored and looking for something to do you might try entertaining yourself by looking over the scribbles found on desk-tops in the classrooms of our university as Art Latham did the other day.

He found the traditional obscenities and the ubiquitous "Carolina, UNC," various and sundry Greek letters and "dedicated to the unfortunate souls who died waiting for the bell in Monkey wrench appreciation 101 scratched on the ageless desks.

But as he went on he observed that the recent unrest at Berkeley and other places have focused the attention of desk-top scratching on political and social change.

The desk-tops produced the following graphitic gems:

Beware the Rising Tide of Conformity.
The Great Society: Ever had the feeling that somebody was putting you on?

Johnson is a fat, ugly bear. LBJ is a socialist. LBJ is a warmonger. (Some days you just can't please anybody.)

From the left side of the desks came:
White man listen.

No political compromise. Down with the Speaker Ban. Down with the Britt Commission.

And from the right side:
War, war and more war (scrawled in boldface caps across the entire face of one desk).

The hopeful suggestion — Nixon in '68.
Then there were two real classics:

Down with Chapel Hill nuns, to hell with liberals, pinkos, civil rights workers, Catholics, Reds, perverts and South Building, to which someone had added: and bigots.

But neatly printed on one desk is the refutation of all the arguments that contemporary students are too serious. "Budweiser — Breakfast of Champions.

Santa Trades Beard For Bandages

The Pi Kappa Phi house had a red-hot Santa Claus at their Christmas party Saturday night in the form of Junior Class vice president Bill Nucciarone.

Nucciarone broke tradition and put aside Santa's pipe for a cigar.

A few ashes dropped into Nucciarone's flowing white beard turning it flaming red.

Santa's quick thinking brothers tossed the fiery beard to the floor (minus Nucciarone of course).

Santa came out with a few minor burns and now his beard has been replaced with white bandages.

Painful? Probably, but Nucciarone says he was feeling no pain.

Lights Burn, Burn, Burn and Burn

They did it again.

"They" is the Christmas decorations and "again" is caught on fire. Yes sir, that's the fourth time so far that Chapel Hill's wonderful new decorations have threatened Franklin St.

This time it was a group of lights in front of Suttons' Drug Store. The fire began about 10:45 Sunday night but the trusty fire engine showed up and squirted a beautiful stream of water on the hot wires.

The Chapel Hill Fire Department says it was the overheating of the lights that cause the material to catch fire. The fire was the worst of the four.

Panty Raid Fizzles

BY ANDY MYERS
DTH News Editor

About 400 yelling men students stood outside Winston dorm Sunday night from 8:30 to 10 p.m. They just stood there.

Three campus police broke up the gathering, but not before Winston residents had pulled their shades and turned off their lights.

An occasional flicker of light from the windows prompted some healthy cheering from the men outside: (W-I-N-S-T-O-N: SEX!)

When a policeman showed up he was followed by two more. "Damn good cop! Damn good cop!" they chanted.

A shade suddenly rose before the mob's eyes. "More! More!" they chanted, but that was all. They just chanted.

Winston residents displayed mixed feelings yesterday. Here are some of their comments:

"How would the boys feel if we did it to them?"

"I didn't think they were going to come over."
"Are they going to do it again?"

"We figured if they tried to get in we'd all get in trouble."
"It was all in fun."

"It was a nice warm night for it."
"I tried to study, but it kept getting louder and louder."

"From the looks of Sunday night, it looks like they need some encouragement."
"One (girl) almost jumped out the window."

"No one got any studying done."
"A few girls were mad."
"It caused a lot of excitement."

"I was disappointed in them."
"I thought they were going to start up again."

"We're not very pleased with the boys."
"I don't even know what was going on!"

Alas, there was no panty raid.

Crash Kills One; Injures 5

A UNC student died and five other persons were hospitalized after a two-car collision Saturday night about 11:45 on N. C. Highway 86, one mile north of Chapel Hill.

A UNC freshman, Kathleen Browning Lafferty, 17, of Concord, was charged with reckless driving and involuntary manslaughter.

James Richard Hammett, 20-year-old junior Business Administration major of Concord, N. C., died at North Carolina Memorial Hospital of head injuries at 11:15 Sunday morning. He never regained consciousness.

Brenda Woodard, 21, a student at UNC at Greensboro, was reported in special care in "fair" condition late yesterday. She had been on the critical list since Saturday night, with a neck injury and a fractured arm.

Treated at the hospital and taken to the student infirmary were Miss Lafferty; Richard Lynn Starnes, 20, Charlotte; Salem Robert Suber, 19, Charlotte; and his wife, Barbara Elaine Suber, 19, Charlotte.

Suber, UNC sophomore, sustained slight lacerations on the back of his head and was described by his doctor as "diffusely sore."

Mrs. Suber who is not a student, received facial injuries and a fractured jaw.

Starnes, UNC junior, suffered burns on both hands and his left leg when he smothered a fire on Miss Woodard's clothing. Flames from the burning Ford had followed a trail of gasoline to the spot where he was lying.

Miss Lafferty had superficial lacerations of the hands and a slight injury to her left ankle.

All six persons were riding in the death vehicle.

Occupants of the other car — Jimmy Roberts and Charles Lawrence, of Route 2, Chapel

Hill, and Doretta Council, Julia Ann Rigby and Dela McMillan, of Durham — were treated at Memorial Hospital and released.

Investigating highway patrolman T. J. Hines said a 1957 Ford, driven by Roberts and traveling toward Chapel Hill, slowed to make a left turn onto rural paved road 1750 (intersection of Airport Rd. and Estes Dr.)

A Volkswagen, which belonged to Hammett but was being driven by his date, Miss Lafferty, slammed into the rear of the Ford, knocking it into a ditch on the right-hand side of the highway where it burst into flames.

Hines said occupants of the Volkswagen told him they were traveling about 45 m.p.h.

Chapel Hill policeman Tommy Snipes who witnessed the accident through his rear-view mirror, said he saw the Ford signalling to turn and realized the Volkswagen would not be able to stop.

He called for help, and he and other Chapel Hill policemen assisted with traffic until the fire was extinguished by the Chapel Hill Fire Department and the injured persons and their cars were removed from the highway.

Miss Lafferty will go before Chapel Hill Recorder's Court for her preliminary hearing Jan. 8 and 9 a.m. She is charged with reckless driving and involuntary manslaughter in a warrant signed by Hones.

The men in the Volkswagen were all members of Chi Phi social fraternity. They were returning from a Chi Phi-Chi Psi party at Maltby's Cabin, off Highway 86, about seven miles north of Chapel Hill.

Hammett is the second UNC student to be killed in an automobile accident in the Chapel Hill area this year.

Junior Roger Davis, Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., died after a one-car crash on Highway 15-501 near Glen Lennox Shopping Center in October.

Funeral services for Hammett will be held today at 3:30 p.m. at Epworth Methodist Church in Concord.

Georgia Congressman Charles L. Weltner last night called on the people of North Carolina and the South to cease their support of the Ku Klux Klan and "organizations that drive our people apart," in a speech before 1,700 students in Memorial Hall.

Weltner, a liberal Democrat from Atlanta, Ga., is the member of the House Un-American Activities Committee who called for the recent House investigation of the Klan and its activities.

He participated in a panel discussion of the Klan which was also composed of Major L. P. McClendon, an attorney from Greensboro; Floyd McKissick, Chairman of the Congress of Racial Equality; and WRAL television newsman Peter B. Young.

Only one Klansman attended the meeting and identified himself to the panel.

A spokesman for the Klan contacted the Carolina Forum Chairman George Nicholson last week and reserved 60 seats for Klansmen expected to attend.

The Forum co-sponsored the discussion with the YMCA Human Relations Committee.

The audience viewed a CBS documentary film on Klan history and terrorism entitled "The Ku Klux Klan: The Invisible Empire" before the panel discussion.

"The Klan is an un-American organization," Weltner told the audience at the film's conclusion. "It deprives citizens of their rights by use of force and violence."

He called for the passage of "remedial legislation" which would "teach the Klan to make its decisions openly without accompanying acts of violence."

Citing the Klans 100-year-old history of violence, Weltner said, "The time has come to sever the long chain of terrorism which was begun in 1865."

Young defended Klansmen as members of a "mocked, expointed, deprived white ghetto."

He claimed the First Amendment rights of the Klansmen had been deprived by the recent HUAC investigation.

He praised Klansmen as the "leaders" of the "white ghetto," who were investigated a "federal secret police apparatus of paid informers." "This investigating unit can turn against any group," Young said.

"Who will it be the next time, Mr. Weltner," he asked. "Will it be the Black Muslims, whose mosque in Los Angeles was riddled by police bullets, or maybe even the Congress of the United States."

"There are now 204 regular Klan units and 70 women's auxiliaries active in 'variety vacationland,'" Young said.

"Klansmen ask, 'How come there's so much action for niggers and none for us,'" he said.

He called on Weltner and the audience to answer a "message of help coming out of the white ghetto."

"Problems are not solved by figuring out tricky things to say," Weltner said.

"I would be shocked to find that the best people of our country have come before our committee during the recent investigations.

Best Bargain Still Old Victory Village

JEAN ROBERTS
Special to the DTH

Not only UNC married student housing rents remain steady, but by this summer 50 to 70 units in Odum Village will be furnished James Wadsworth, UNC Housing Director, says.

Wadsworth blames higher taxes and increased dormitory rents as the cause of the current rent increases by many units of the commercial developments in Chapel Hill. Comparable housing to that now available in the new Odum Village (which rents for $72 to $82), costs $85 to $150 per month elsewhere. The old pre-fabs in Victory Village are still the best bargain with rents from $20 to $40.

Even with its low rents, Victory Village grosses about $98,500.00 per year reports James A. Branch, UNC business manager. The cost of maintenance are reverted a separate reserve fund. Odum Village rents are set according to the federal government's debt repayment schedule.

The University Trustees have allotted all of the land in Victory Village for long range expansion of the hospital complex. Bids will be let on January 10, 1966 for the first nine million dollar stage of the expansion. As soon as this building begins Victory Village will come down unit by unit.

Branch believes that since there is no suitable place to move the old wooden barracks and UK house they will probably be torn down — and with money from their reserve fund.

Presently, the University provides about 250 units in Victory Village and 300 units in Odum Village for a married student population of approximately 2200. Both Wadsworth and Branch expressed hope that at least this many units would continue to be provided.

Branch stated that the University hopes to include plans for additional permanent married student housing in the capital improvements budget for the 1967 General Assembly. While the state supplies no money for housing, it must authorize plans for building housing. The federal government will loan money for such self-liquidating projects.

Branch added "That with the present cost of building, housing comparable to Odum Village could not be built and rented at the same figure."

The present community center, which also houses the Day Care Center for children, is considered part of Odum Village and therefore will not be replaced by hospital expansion. The new community center for married students is now in the planning stages and is expected to be placed near the present playground area.

Phi Sigma Kappa Kidnaps Housemothers For Charity

By BOB HARRIS
DTH Staff Writer

Housemothers from all seven sororities were "kidnaped" Monday afternoon as Tau Epsilon Phi's annual "Christmas House" drive got under way.

TEP's "Christmas House" is a drive to collect food and toys for needy families.

Phi Sigma Kappa fraternity "kidnaped" the housemothers at 3:45 p.m., leaving the following note: "We have kidnaped your housemother and are holding her for ransom. Show your housemother how much you appreciate her by being the first to ransom her with either a box of canned food or a box of toys."

The housemothers had previously agreed to the "kidnaping."

In car and on foot about 110 girls descended on the fraternity house, bringing food and toys and singing rival rushing songs.

Six boxes of canned food and one large box of toys were collected.

The housemothers were well-treated. Each was given a corsage and a tour of the house.

By 5:15 p.m. the last of the housemothers had been ransomed.

"The role of the reporter in the political arena" will be the topic of an address by Jerry Elliot, Gov. Dan Moore's Press Secretary, before the UNC Young Democratic Club tonight at 5:30 in the private dining room of Chase Cafeteria.

The former news director for WPTF radio in Raleigh, Elliott served as a reporter for WTVD television in Durham before assuming his present position.

Elliott's address is part of the "Politics Backstage" lecture program sponsored by the YDC.

Club members and interested students are invited to bring their trays to the private dining room and hear the speech.
