Attention All Jacks

Two attractive coeds wrote a letter to Tate Rogers who did a little piece about dogs and town laws in Carolina Style the other day.

These two weren't exactly happy with the item entitled "Attention All Coeds."

They wrote, "The law to keep horses off the sidewalks may have been effective; however, there should have been a clause to keep the jacks out of the DTH office. Such an oversight tends to create a bigger mess than dogs."

"If you (Rogers) and Mr. Freakley think coeds better watch their step, I suggest that both of you watch yours or else you will have more on your heels than tar."

Humm.

They Definitely Communicate

You think you have problems?

We got the most pathetic story yesterday that you ever heard. Some poor guy who doesn't care to be known by anything but Jeff tells us he got his phone bill for Nov. 15 through Dec. 15. Total — $228.00.

The most expensive of these calls ran about $11. Twenty-six calls were made to Queens, N. Y. Of course, on the receiving end was a little darling. Diane's phone bill for the same period came to $107.

Jeff said he thought the phone company should give him a discount. His bill for the month before was only $112.

"It wouldn't be so bad if they gave Green Stamps," Jeff said.

We suggest marriage — it's a lot cheaper. And who knows a better way to have fun?

The Final Word

One final word on this fertilizer business.

It sure doesn't make the campus smell any better. But it makes you think twice before walking across the grass.

Long And Blue In The Face

T-Sticker holders arise! That is, T-Sticker holders who haven't picked up their $2.50 refund from the Office of the Dean of Men.

Bob Kepner, assistant to the dean said yesterday students don't seem to care about their money. "We can put notices in the Tar Heel until we're blue in the face." Still they won't pick up their cash.

Dean Long still has 350 refunds to give out. That's $875 going to waste. So arise, you lazy students. Even if you can't park on campus, at least you can walk to South building and get paid $2.50 for it.

View From Ft. Jackson--Sand, Pines, More Sand

The following are excerpts from a letter written by a former Carolina student to his old dormitory friends. He is now at Fort Jackson, S. C., in basic training.

"Hello — House and Mr. P and Mr. V. P. of such and anyone concerned:

"I am writing this in green because I knew you all would be green from envy because you can't be here with me.

"Just to let you know what you are missing, I'll describe a few things.

"The view — it's great — sand, pines, and more sand.

"We have the finest of 30-year-old tents available. None of the holes in the roof of the tent is over the size of a 50c piece. This is army regulation size for the largest hole allowed. I suppose. The sides and ends of the tent almost reach the ground. The tents are set up on concrete foundations.

"Our company area has about 40 tents in an area about the size of the quad between Alexander and Winston. This gives you a great roomy feeling of great outdoors. We have stoves in the tents but they are not hooked up yet.

"We have all the modern conveniences of home, such as:

"Lights — We were without lights for five nights.

"Running water — Have plenty in the latrine, but it is cold at night when you want to shower and shave, and warm in the morning when we need some to put in our canteens.

"Thursday we got into trucks and moved into the training corner of the camp where we still are — with little chance of leaving. They don't appreciate AWOL's or at least they say they don't. We have had two or three so far, but all have been caught and are now in the stockade.

"Two guys have been sent to psychiatrists because they didn't appreciate being here and the sergeants didn't appreciate their not appreciating it. I haven't heard what has happened to them.

"The sergeants are great guys I'm sure. I know they are just waiting for us to give them a chance to be nice. And the day they are nice I'll be as shocked as if I had just found out that I aced Mod. Civ. II. I would figure out the odds on that happening, but I only have about 60 more pages in this tablet.

"My uniform is fatigues with those kangaroo pocket pants and a baggy fatigue shirt. My boots are size 13, and according to the guy who measured my feet they should fit. But they don't.

"I am supposed to go back Monday and get measured again, as my ankles have swollen and my toes cramp and go to sleep because they are cramped together. Anyway, I hope to get bigger boots or smaller feet.

"All in all this is a great experience if you happen to be all muscle, and especially all muscle in the head. "It is true that they tell you exactly what to do and when to do it. But they change the what and the when of the same instructions every time they give them; and no one could possibly keep up with what they mean when they don't mean when they say what they say.

"Well, at least it is only seven more weeks if I really want to get optimistic. But as sore as I am now from running I can't afford to strain another muscle thinking about it. It's a great life if you don't care how you live.

"Bye."

Blood Drive Gets Support

By ERNIE McCRARY
DTH Editor

Response to plans for the Carolina Blood Drive is "tremendous," according to coordinator Sonny Pepper. "The people who have contacted me are all very enthusiastic and I think we could easily collect more than 600 pints," he said.

The collection date of Feb. 16 and 17 was set by the American Red Cross because it is the only time bloodmobile equipment will be available. Red Cross officials say 300 pints per day is the maximum which can be collected under normal conditions.

All blood collected will be turned over to the Defense Department for use in Vietnam or at U. S. Hospitals which treat evacuated casualties. Senior Class President Armistead Maupin said yesterday that the class will offer engraved plaques to the men's residence hall, fraternity, women's dormitory and sorority which have the highest percentage of donors.

At the request of the DTH, Dr. Edward Hedgpeth, head of student health services will serve as faculty advisor to the Blood Drive Committee. Yesterday afternoon Pepper said two more organizations, Semper Fidelis and the NR-OTC, have asked to help staff the collection center and provide donors. Other groups wishing to participate should call Pepper at 929-5289.

East Carolina College and Duke University had campus blood drives early in December. ECC collected 1,219 pints in three days. Duke furnished 385 pints in two days.

The last blood campaign at UNC was held Nov. 18 and 19, 1953, for Korean War needs.

UNC Hangs On For Victory

Early UNC Surge Crumbles Wolfpack

By GENE RECTOR
DTH Sports Editor

North Carolina's Tar Heels rode a lightning-quick start and a nervous finish to an 83-76 victory over the Wolfpack of N. C. State last night in Carmichael Auditorium.

The Tar Heels, led by the hot shooting of sophomore Larry Miller and junior Tom Gauntlett, jumped on the defending ACC champion Wolfpack club—zooming to a 10-3 lead after the first three minutes of play.

Walkways Will Join Buildings

By PAUL BERNISH
Special to the DTH

Students living in Morehead College two years from now won't recognize it as just five similar buildings — if present plans materialize.

By the fall of 1967, Graham, Aycock, Lewis, Everett, and Stacy dorms might be connected by either covered walkways, a common building in the center of the quadrangle, or additional structures between the present buildings.

This plan, part of the reorganization of student housing, is envisioned by university officials, particularly James E. Wadsworth, the director of Student Housing.

It is hoped that the connections can be made between the dormitories by the beginning of classes in September, 1967, about the time when the Lower Quad will be converted to all-women housing.

"With the increase in the number of women students," says Wadsworth, "we must solve the problem of housing them all in unified sections of the campus. We feel that this idea will not only give the women a sense of identity on a large campus, but will also make it safer and easier for them to get to such places as the library and the dining hall."

But there are a lot of "ifs" involved in the plans. One is that the new high-rise men's dormitory planned for the Morrison Dorm area can be constructed on time.

A major problem will be money; although dormitory rentals pay for building renovation, money for such projects as connecting the five dorms will have to be authorized by the General Assembly, which does not convene again until 1967.

"Something will have to be done, however," adds Wadsworth. "Perhaps if these plans work out satisfactorily, we might try it in other areas of the campus."

Meanwhile, renovations in the Morehead College dorms will continue. Lewis, Stacy, and Everett are scheduled for renovation after the first term of this coming summer session. Eventually, the other dorms needing improvements will be worked on as time and money permit.

"One thing is certain," concludes Wadsworth, "we must implement these plans as soon as possible so we will be ready for the day when the men move out and the women move in."

With 13:10 to go in the half, a Bobby Lewis jumper gave the Tar Heels a 10-point lead at 18-8. A three-point play by Gauntlett with 11:30 to go made it UNC 25, State 12.

The Tar Heel lead was 15 with 10:34 remaining as Gauntlett struck again — 29-14 in favor of Carolina. The Tar Heel surge reached its summit seconds later as reserve center Mark Mirken hit a foul shot for a 30-14 Tar Heel lead.

But the Wolfpack, switching from a press to a zone, began to slow down the tempo—and cut the Tar Heel lead. With 6:48 remaining, a Pete Coker foul put the Wolfpack within 12 points at 34-22. Guard Billy Moffitt's field goal cut the lead to 10 at 34-24 with 6:06 remaining. With 4:50 to go, the UNC lead was eight points as Pete Coker hit again making the score 36-28, Tar Heels.

But Carolina did manage a 10-8 edge the remainder of the half—taking a 46-36 edge at intermission.

The Wolfpack outscored the Tar Heels in the second half—39-37—but were never able to get closer than three points.

Three straight baskets in the opening seconds of the second half by Billy Moffitt, Coker and Larry Worsley cut Carolina's lead to 52-46.

With 10:38 remaining, the Tar Heels were still on top, 65-59. With 9:40 to go, Worsley struck from the corner making the score 65-61 in favor of the Tar Heels.

The Wolfpack made their big 8-20 remaining. Guard Eddie Biedenbach hit a foul shot cutting the Tar Heel lead to three 67-64.

But the Tar Heels turned on the steam at that point. Field goals by Mark Mirken and John Pokley shot the lead to seven at 71-64 with 6:48 remaining. With 3:40 to go, a lay in by Lewis increased the margin to nine at 75-66 and the Tar Heels were home free.

State coach Press Maravich was disappointed with the Wolfpack showing. "We thought if we could hold Lewis and Miller to 40 points, we could win it. Well, we held them to 39 but Gauntlett and Yokley pulled up the slack."

Scoring totals for the Tar Heels found Miller and Gauntlett sharing top honors with 21 points each. Bobby Lewis, the ACC's leading scorer, checked in with 18 points. Guard Johnny Yokley hit for 11 points.

Leading the Wolfpack was Pete Coker with 23 points—the game's high scorer. Next in line was Larry Worsley with 21 points. Billy Moffitt and Gary Hale with 11 and 10 points respectively were next in line.

Tommy Matlocks, the leading Wolfpack scorer with a 15.2 average, failed to scratch.

The Tar Heels outshot the Wolfpack from the floor hitting on 33 of 58 shots from the floor for 56.9 per cent. State connected on 31 of 69 attempts for a 44.9 per centage.

UNC hit 17 of 29 free throws while the Wolfpack made good on 13 of 21. The Tar Heels led in rebounding 47-36.

Reedy Wins Fulbright

Dr. Daniel Reedy, a specialist in Spanish American literature at North Carolina, has received a 1966 Fulbright Fellowship for research in Lima, Peru.

Reedy is an assistant professor of Spanish in the DeWagues.

He will begin his research studies in Lima on Jun. 1 and be there until Feb., 1966.

He is the author of a book and several articles on colonial and nineteenth century Peruvian literature.

Greenbacker Elected

John Greenbacker was elected President of the Dialectic and Philanthropic Societies Tuesday night during an executive session of the Senate.

Greenbacker, who has served for a year as President Pro Tem of the Senate, will succeed outgoing president John Harrison in inaugural ceremonies next month.

Harrison was elected to the President Pro Tem's position.

Greenbacker was opposed by Jerry Monroe, who is currently serving as President of the Dialectic Senate.

The Di-Phi Senate is a union of the Dialectic and Philanthropic Societies, which were founded were in 1795.

They are the oldest debate and literary societies in the nation, and were the prototypes of Student Government on campus.

The Senate meets on Tuesday evenings to discuss issues of national and international interest.

Other officers include Miss M. S. Carson, Sergeant at Arms, Don Wilson, Parliamentarian, Ted Murphy, Treasurer and Baxter Linney, Critic.

Chancellor To Speak

Dr. Paul F. Sharp, who was resigned the chancellorship of North Carolina, will address the annual press dinner at Duke on Jan. 21.

Sharp will leave North Carolina on Feb. 15 to become the president of Drake University.

His talk will be on "The Ivy Towered Market Place." Sharp's speech is expected to be one of his last major ones in this area before he leaves.

The Duke Press Dinner is an annual highlight of the Press Institute conducted by the North Carolina Press Association.

Folk Singer Coming

Dave Jones, folk guitarist, singer and student at North Carolina will perform in Graham Memorial lounge Friday at 8 p.m.

Jones has toured the United States and Canada performing in nightclubs and lecturing and performing at colleges. He is known locally for his Mississippi Delta blues and Chicago blues music. Jones has appeared at the "Side-track" in Raleigh as well as having played for Luci Baines Johnson.

He was at one time featured at the famous night spot in Memphis, Tenn., "The Fatted Calf."

The guitarist amazes his audiences with his intricate finger pickings that produce a sound all his own. Jones also uses open "bottleneck" tunings at his informal concerts.

The senior anthropology major has only recently entered the recording field with an album named "Devil's Child" which is recorded on the Inner Records label.

Admissions Director

Mr. Charles Bernard, Director of Admissions at North Carolina will speak at a meeting of the In-Service Training Program for staff members of the Office of the Dean of Women and for associates on the Admissions Office on Jan. 20 at 4 p.m. in 105 Hanes Hall.

Late Hours Approved

Women students will be given late permission from Tues. Jan. 18 through Wed. Jan. 26, according to Dorothy Fulghum, assistant to the Dean of Women.

The Women's Residence Council made the recommendation on Dec. 14; it was approved by the Dean of Women on Jan. 11.

Going To Grad School? Here's What It Takes

By STEVE BENNETT
Special to the DTH

More undergraduates than ever want to go to graduate school, and according to the latest ratings, UNC grad schools are the best in the South.

What does it take to get into graduate school? The competition is keen, but every applicant must have at least the following qualifications for admittance:

—Have a bachelor's degree from a recognized institution.

—Have a strong overall record with a "B" average in his major.

In some cases, take the Graduate Record Examination.

—Supply two transcripts of all undergraduate work.

—Supply three personal references.

—Have a reading knowledge of one modern foreign language.

—File a completed application before the deadline.

If his application meet minimum Graduate School requirements, it is sent to the appropriate school for a recommendation.

There are 2,517 students enrolled in Graduate School at UNC, and 342 of these are graduates of Carolina. Duke graduates number second with 85. The remaining 2,090 graduate students are graduates of colleges and universities all over the world. No preference for admittance is given to a UNC graduate.

There are over one thousand North Carolina residents attending Graduate School at Carolina but many of them live in town. Other states with the largest numbers enrolled are S. C., Va., and N. Y. There are also 135 foreign students.

UNC boasts of 45 departments in its Graduate School. Over one third of the graduate students are enrolled in the departments of Public Health, English, Education, Library Science, History, and Business.

M. E. Woodard, university cashier said, "The tuition of graduate students is compiled on a semester hourly basis up through nine hours. The charge is $9 per hour for an in-state student and $32 per hour for an out-of-state student."

"If the student takes more than nine hours a semester his tuition is a flat rate of $87.50 for an in-state student and $300.00 for an out-of-state student. In addition every student is charged fees of $62 per semester."

There are many fellowships, assistantships, and other appointments available to help graduate students finance their studies.

Graduate students can take a maximum load of sixteen hours a semester. They can receive a full semester of residence credit if they successfully complete nine or more graduate credit.

Teaching fellows, graduate assistants, and instructors, whose time is partly devoted to service to the University, are limited to nine or twelve semester hours a semester.

Out of the 2,517 graduate students, 1,651 are men and 866 are women.

Director of Housing, James E. Wadsworth, said: "More than half of the graduate students live off campus in apartments or rooms. Very few live in fraternity or sorority houses."

Single men that live on campus live in Conner Dormitory and the fifth and sixth floors of Craigie Dormitory.

Single women live in Kenan Dormitory. Many of them also live in the privately owned high-rise Granville Hall which just opened this year.

There are about ten graduate men and seventeen graduate women serving as dormitory counselors.

The vast majority of married graduate students live in University Housing in Odum or Victory Village. There are 550 husbands and 150 wives living there that are graduate students.
