Russia Pledges More Aid To North Viet War Effort Committee Adopts Speaker Policy

RALEIGH (AP) — The executive committee of the UNC Board of Trustees adopted regulations Friday governing visiting speakers on the four campuses of the university. The regulations will be presented to the full board of trustees for action at a meeting on Feb. 24.

1. All statutes of the state relating to speakers and the use of facilities for speaking purposes are to be obeyed.
2. Only recognized student, faculty and university organizations are authorized to invite speakers.
3. Non-University organizations authorized through official channels e.g., extension division to meet on the campus are to be routinely informed that the use of facilities must conform to state laws.
4. Student attendance at campuswide occasions is not compulsory.

5. The appearance of speakers on campus does not imply approval or disapproval of them or what is said by the speaker.

6. As a further precaution and to assure free and open discussion as essential to the safe-guarding of free institutions, each chancellor, when he considers it appropriate, require any or all of the following:

- A. That a meeting be chaired by an officer of the university or a ranking member of the faculty;
- B. That speakers at the meeting be subject to questions from the audience;
- C. That the opportunity be provided at the meeting or later to present speakers of different points view.

Long Investigates UNC Chain Letter

By GLENN MAYS
DTH Staff Writer

An investigation into a ring of chain letters that have been received by University students here is being conducted by the Office of the Dean of Men.

Fred Schroeder assistant to the Dean of Men, said the chain letter ring was discovered recently when a student turned in one of the letters he had received.

He pointed out that it is against Federal law for a chain letter to be sent in the mail. And he added that it is against University regulations as set by the trustees for any solicitations as in this letter to be conducted in the University residence halls.

Schroeder said also, that chain letters have been classified as a lottery by law and therefore, are a violation of North Carolina law.

Schroeder said there are at least 64 letters circulating in Chapel Hill if the six persons listed at the bottom of the letter have "sold" the letters as the letter explains.

Thus far only one copy has been turned in to Schroeder but he said he has heard about three or four others. He said there could be more of the letters in the area than is indicated by the number of names on the letter.

Schroeder said that one stipulation in the letter, which explains a money-making scheme by selling two of the letters, is that the letter not be mailed.

He said it is explained in the letter that it began at another southern university and is circulating on the campuses of several other colleges and universities.

The investigation is being made in order to stop the letters before they go any farther, Schroeder said.

"We want to warn students not to get involved in anything like this," he said.

Nurses Working For BS Degrees

By WILSON JARVIS
Special to the DTH

Everyone has heard about the stray dogs and stray Greeks on campus, but few have heard of UNC's stray R.N.s.

That's right. UNC has 28 registered nurses attending classes who have completed their training and passed their state boards.

But these R.N.s are not satisfied with just a nursing education. They've come back to school to receive their bachelor of science degrees in nursing.

"As you get older, you become more aware of the need for a general education," explained Linda Ward, of Richmond, Virginia, Miss Ward plans to go into public health work after getting her degree.

Another young R.N., Georgia Marshall, of Winston-Salem, added, "All you know after a three year program of nursing is nursing." Miss Marshall needs a more general education because she wants to teach nursing after she receives her bachelor and master degrees.

Another nurse, a French-Canadian Nun, is attending classes just to increase her knowledge to enable her to make better contacts with the people she meets in her work.

Since they have already taken many of the required courses for a B.S. degree, they have only five semesters of work to complete before they receive their degrees.

But those five semesters can seem mighty long, because they have a problem.

They are misfits. Academically they are classified as juniors; socially they are classified as graduate students, and live in graduate dormitories. But the biggest problem of the un-married R.N. is meeting males, who don't know just how to classify them.

"You tell them that you're a nurse and right away you see a 'mother image' come over their faces," said one young nurse.

Almost, We Almost Do

Almost exam time. Almost sweat time. Almost worry time. Almost hurry time. Almost finesse time.

But it's only almost. We can put all that almost out of our minds for this weekend and have one final good time before the grind begins, can't we?

Sure we can. And we can almost come back next semester 'cause we almost passed. We almost do a lot of things.

But we almost never do.

No Birthday Party For Benny

It must have been too cold yesterday or maybe it's too close to exams. On second thought they might have had a change of heart about the war in Viet Nam.

At any rate we didn't see one SPU'er out celebrating Benedict Arnold's birthday yesterday.

Bats In Our Belfry?

The Batman craze is quickly spreading all over the campus. It took me 10 minutes last night to find a television set I could get close enough to in order to see the picture.

Also noticed that some enterprising fan of this new hero has erected the Bat symbol in his window Vance Residence Hall.

It also gives me an idea. No one objected to getting rid of the ram, but on the other hand no one seemed to really like the idea of the Tar Baby.

So why don't we join the modern times and become the University of North Carolina Bats. I'm serious.

Can't you just picture it. The basketball team, instead of wearing warm-up jackets and those long pants, would come out on the court in long Carolina blue capes with a white bat on the back.

The cheerleaders could throw bat boomerangs to the fans during intermission. We could paint the bat symbol in the center of the floor in Carmichael.

Then when we beat Dook next game the headlines could say: Carolina Bats Dook, or Cape Caper Batfolds Dookies.

Baptist Preacher Quits Klan

Rev. B. H. Ingle questions at a Carolina Forum panel discussion, Dec. 13.

Rev. B. H. Ingle, the Ku Klux Klansman who questioned Rep. Charles Weltner at a Carolina Forum panel discussion last month, has quit the Klan.

The elderly lay Baptist preacher told reporters his ideas were "no longer compatible" with those of the Klan.

Weltner, a liberal Democratic congressman from Atlanta, Ga., is a member of the House Un-American Activities Committee.

The committee conducted hearings into the Klan's activities this summer, and cited seven Klan officials for contempt of Congress two days ago.

Ingle told students after the Forum meeting that God punished the Negro race "by making their skin black."

"But when they enter the Kingdom, they'll be white," he added.

Ingle could not be reached for further comment yesterday.

Morrison To Sell Books

Morrison Residence College will sponsor a book sale immediately at the beginning of next semester.

The college will act as middleman for students wishing to sell or buy textbooks and study materials.

The program is being established mainly to benefit the residents of Morrison, according to Governor Byron McCoy. However, students from other residence halls may also bring books to be sold.

The student himself will place a price on the book. If the book is not sold it will be stored until claimed.

McCoy feels that this will result in a saving to both the purchaser and seller.

Anyone wanting to participate in the program should contact Dick Levy, 158 Morrison, or Byron McCoy, 412 Morrison.

King For A Day

Carolina Gentlemen, have you ever dreamed of owning your own plane and being "King For A Day"? Coeds, have you ever dreamed of giving your guy such a present? The Kappa Delta pledges will give you the chance, or rather, sell you the chance.

The KD pledges from the Chapel Hill campus are busy selling wooden toy planes at Duke, State and North Carolina. Along with the purchase of a plane goes the chance to be "King For A Day."

All names of purchasers, or names of the people they would like to give the chance, are placed in a huge box. A drawing the first week in February will determine who the fortunate fellow is.

The "king" will have "servants" to wash and iron clothes, polish shoes and wash his car. Along with the work will go a Gant shirt and a steak dinner for two.

This is the second year in a row the pledges have had such a project.

It was a success last year, and the Kappa Deltas say sales are going extremely well this year (planes sell for 25c). Money earned from the project will go for improvement of the house.

Grade Competition

Freshmen in Craige Residence College are competing against freshmen in Morrison to see which group improves their grades the most.

Craige President Otto Reich says the idea, which was originated by Craige housemaster Frank Hall, is to compare freshmen grades at mid-semester with those at the end of the semester.

Hall and Chuck Longino, housemaster at Morrison, are compiling the quality point averages of each freshman in the two colleges. The college with the greatest improvement will receive a plaque. Reich hopes to see the plaque presentation become a tradition each semester.

At Craige, in addition to the residence college plaque, an award will be given to the student in each class with the highest average.

Friday Taps Taylor

North Carolina Consolidated University President William C. Friday, state Heart Fund chairman, announced the appointment of Dr. Isaac M. Taylor, dean of the North Carolina School of Medicine, as a co-chairman of Physicians-for-Heart.

Merrill To Speak

Dr. Halcolm H. Merrill, an official for the Agency for International Development, will address a student-faculty seminar at the North Carolina School of Public Health on Monday. The seminar will be held at 3 p.m. in the auditorium of the School of Public Health.
