ANOTHER LINE. For those who have stood in line to drop-add, to buy books, to eat lunch, to buy basketball tickets—now there's another line. This time it's in Y Court, for buying notebooks, pens and pencils. Actually lines are nothing new to Y Court. Did you ever try to cash a check or buy a ham and cheese on rye?

Vice President, Javits To Speak On Campus

HHH To Answer Questions

Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey will participate in a panel discussion here March 1 in Memorial Hall.

Robin West, head of the Carolina Forum, which invited Humphrey, said two students and two faculty members would be on the panel.

West said that quite likely one of the persons to take part in the discussion will be Student Body President Bob Powell, a strong critic of Administration Vietnam policy.

The Forum head, a junior from Unionville, Pa., said Humphrey will not give a speech.

West said the panel discussion format would allow Humphrey to be "more candid."

West will moderate the discussion, expected to last about an hour.

Humphrey is expected to meet with the Carolina Political Union while in Chapel Hill.

Arriving in North Carolina February 28, the Vice President will speak to a farmer's group in Raleigh—where he will spend the night—before coming here.

West said Gov. Moore and the state's two senators asked him to come to UNC.

West says the Forum had attempted for more than a year to bring Humphrey here. No definite time has been set for Humphrey's UNC appearance, although it probably will take place in the early afternoon.

West says the Forum has also invited Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield to appear. No definite date has been set, but, according to West, Mansfield has expressed ed "a definite interest" in coming.

George Wallace, segregationist governor of Alabama, has been asked to come here, but has not formally accepted an invitation.

Vietnam Is Topic Of N. Y. Senator

Senator Jacob Javits of New York, one of the prime contenders for the 1968 GOP vice-presidential nomination, will discuss the Republican Party's future in the South Monday.

Javits, a liberal Republican, will speak at 8 p.m. in Memorial Hall under the sponsorship of the Carolina Forum.

Javits will hold a brief press conference at the Raleigh-Durham Airport Monday afternoon before coming to Chapel Hill.

The senator's appearance in Chapel Hill will be the first stop on a nation-wide tour which will test his support for the 1968 vice presidential race.

The son of immigrant parents, Javits was born in a New York lower east side tenement in 1904. He attended night classes at Columbia University and was graduated from New York University Law School in 1926.

Sen. Jacob Javits

His political career began in 1932 when he joined the Ivy Republican Club in Manhattan's 18th Congressional District. He was active in 1937 and 1940 in the reform movement of Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia.

His first run for public office in 1946 as the Republican Liberal for the House of Representatives in New York's traditionally Democratic 21st District. He was elected the first Republican representative from that district since 1923, and was re-elected three times.

After eight years in Congress, he ran for Attorney General of New York State in 1954 and defeated Franklin D. Roosevelt Jr. (Democratic-Liberal candidate) by a plurality of 172,899 votes making him the only Republican on the state ticket to win that year.

In 1956 he was elected United States Senator, defeating Mayor Robert Wagner (Democratic-Liberal) by a plurality of 458,774; carrying all but four of the state's 62 counties.

Senator Javits was re-elected to a second term in the U. S. Senate in 1962, defeating James B. Donovan, the Democratic-Liberal candidate, by a plurality of 983,094 votes. Not only was he the biggest winner in the nation in the 1962 elections, but he accomplished the unprecedented feat of carrying New York City by 137,409 votes the first candidate in modern times to win a majority of votes in the city while running alone on a Republican ticket.

Javits was also chairman of John V. Lindsay's successful campaign for mayor of New York City in 1965.

During his service in the House of Representatives, he was a member of the Foreign Affairs Committee.

In the Senate, he is ranking Republican on the Committee on Labor and Public Welfare, and a member of the Judiciary, Government Operations, and the Select Committee on Small Business. He is also ranking Republican senator on the Joint Economic Committee.

He has been chairman for seven years of the Economic Committee of the NATO Parliamentarians' Conference, and is now chairman of a Special Committee on the Economic Development of Less-Developed NATO Nations and Rapporteur of the Political Committee of NATO.

Javits is best known in his legislative career for his work in civil rights, civil liberties, health, education and welfare, and foreign economic policy. He has been active also in legislation dealing with housing, transportation, immigration, labor, travel, small business and the arts.

Powell Meets Rusk

Student Body President Bob Powell and other student leaders met with Secretary of State Dean Rusk Tuesday, with Powell and Harvard's student government president acting as official spokesmen for the group.

Details of the 4 p.m. meeting could not be published in today's Daily Tar Heel because of an early deadline. However, Eric Van Loon, one of Powell's aides, said the meeting most likely took place off-record anyway.

Powell and Gregory Craig, the Harvard president, were selected as spokesman Monday night.

In other developments:

ONE HUNDRED additional student leaders have joined the original group of 100 who signed a Dec. 29 letter to President Johnson in formally protesting U. S. Vietnam policy, Powell told reporters. Among the newcomers is the president of Davidson College, Rusk's alma mater.

AT THE MONDAY news conference where Powell discussed the addition of the 100, he said the students are "terrified" by a growing mood of "increased resistance" among college youth to U. S. Vietnam policy.

Powell and his group asked for administration assurance that the Vietnam war would not be unnecessarily escalated.

He said he hoped the administration would reaffirm "its desire to negotiate a settlement."

Most student protests against Vietnam policy now do not involve dramatic acts like draft card burnings, Powell said. But, he continued, there will be "widening non-cooperation at home" should the Vietnam conflict continue as it has in the past.

Few students would refuse military service, he declared, but warned that few would volunteer.

Powell said that student dissatisfaction with administration policy is "much more widespread" than he believed when he helped draft the Dec. 29 letter. The letter said that more students than ever will seek to avoid military service if the gap between their opinions and the administration's is not narrowed.

Powell's group yesterday was not the only one in Washington protesting the war, the Associated Press reported.

Two thousand persons, later joined by 1,000 others, demonstrated quietly in front of the White House.

Among the protesters were clergymen of the Protestant, Catholic and Jewish faiths. The picketing, in which at least 200 members of the American Council of Christian Churches participated, lasted about one hour.

Students Organizing Group To Support Textile Strike

By DON CAMPBELL
DTH News Editor

Several Carolina students are organizing a group to support strikes by the Cone Textile Mills workers against seven Cone plants in the Greensboro area.

The students have been invited by the workers to assist the Cone locals of the Textile Workers Union of America in attaining redress of grievances.

The support will be in the form of picketing, attending a strike vote meeting, and meeting with the workers to discuss their grievances.

The Students and Faculty for Cone Workers Rights, led by Chuck and Ann Schunior, will have a booth in Y Court during the week to provide information about the union.

Buttons, bumper stickers and literature will be available at the booth. Proceeds from the sale of buttons and stickers will be donated to the workers' strike fund, Schunior said.

Schunior said yesterday that the National Labor Relations Board has issued a complaint against the Cone Management for refusing to bargain in good faith, as well as for intimidating workers to prevent their joining the union and for unlawfully firing nine workers.

It is therefore legal, Schunior claims, according to the National Labor Relations Act, for the Cone workers to strike.

Organization of the group will continue throughout this week, Schunior said.

Cone workers and a TWUA organizer will meet with students and faculty at Wesley Hall on Thursday afternoon to discuss the situation and answer questions.

On Sunday at 5:30, there will be a meeting at Y Court for students who are inter-

Student Book Co-op Sales End Today

Today will be the last chance for students to bring their books to the Student Co-op to be sold.

The Co-op will continue to sell books for the remainder of this week.

As of 2:30 p.m. yesterday, the Co-op had sold $4,000 worth of books. About 2700 books had been handled at the Co-op by Monday night.

Don Duskie, chairman of the Student Co-op Committee, feels that the Co-op's success has qualified it to be a permanent service.

"At this point it is safe to say that the Co-op is here to stay at Carolina. The student body has enthusiastically supported it and made its success possible.

"The service provided by the Co-op is another example of the Student Government's continuing concern with the individual student on the campus.

"I feel that the students at Carolina have emerged into a new era of co-operation. They have now seen that by working together they can save money. The Book Co-op is probably only the first step on the road to better prices for the student."

The Book Co-op is located in the Naval Armory, and is open from 8:30 a.m. until 5 p.m.

CHAPEL HILL'S fourth weekly peace vigil, held one week ago, got too peaceful for at least one of the 200 persons participating. This little fellow, wearing a cowboy outfit, went to sleep on the sidewalk. Today will be the fifth vigil in as many weeks while a similar protest in Durham will go into its third week today.

Campus Briefs

Dr. Rahman To Teach

A native of Pakistan and expert on Asian affairs, Dr. Abu Taub Raffiqur Rahman, will teach a course of "Backgrounds in International Conflict: Asia" at UNC this month.

The course will be non-credit and no exam will be given. Dr. Rahman is a professor of Public Administration at the Rural Development Academy, Cumilla, Pakistan.

The course will pay special attention to a survey of the reaction of Asian countries to the Vietnam war, current issues and problems surrounding the conflict, various peace moves, and prospects of a peaceful settlement.

The course will be taught on Tuesday nights from 7:30 to 9:30 from February 7 to April 11. Application for enrollment should be made to UNC Extension Division, 209 Abernathy Hall.

Mrs. Burris Wins

Mrs. Marilyn Burris, UNC graduate music student, was selected Singer - of - the Year from contestants representing every region of the United States at the National Association of Teachers of Singing Conference held recently in Washington, D. C.

Mrs. Burris, an Albemarle native, is a lyric soprano and the voice student of Dr. Wilton Mason, acting chairman of the Department. She is an active member of the Opera Theatre group he directs.

She attended the national contest as regional winner from the Southeastern Division of NATS. Besides her award, she received a check for $1,000.

Mrs. Burris will be presented throughout the nation in a concert tour and will appear in a solo recital at next year's annual NATS convention in Chicago. She has also been invited to audition for the New York City Opera.

Art Exhibit Entries

Entries are now being accepted at the Schol of Public Health for its 1967 Art Exhibition to be judged February 11. A purchase prize of up to $400 will be awarded the winning piece.

About 50 artists have already entered works—the art show is open to all practicing artists in North Carolina and adjoining states.

John Brady, Owen Lewis, and William Tazewell will comprise the judging team.

Brady is a painter, teacher and art dealer from Blowing Rock, and operates the John Brady School of Art and Gallery there.

Art critic and collector of Chapel Hill, Lewis is a Mark Ethridge Fellow of the Southern Regional Educational Board working in the field of arts at UNC.

Tazewell, also an art critic and collector at UNC, is on leave of absence as associate editor and art editor of the Norfolk-Virginian-Pilot.

HERE WE GO . . . again. It's called drop-add, for those of you who haven't been through it. This is how it looked yesterday in the basement of Hanes Hall. That's how it looked Monday, and that's how it will look today and tomorrow. After that, people will mostly drop, without adding.
