ROOMMATES: THEIR CAUSE AND CURE

You'd think that with all the progress we have made in the education game, somebody would have found a cure for roommates by now. But no. Roommates remain as big a problem today as they were when Ethan Mather founded the first American college.

(Contrary to popular belief, Harvard was not the first. Mr. Mather started his institution some 100 years earlier. And quite an institution it was, let me tell you! Mr. Mather built schools of liberal arts, fine arts, dentistry and tanning. He built a lacrosse stadium that seated 200,000. Everywhere on campus was emblazoned the stirring Latin motto CAVE MUSSI—"Watch out for moose." The student union contained a bowling alley, a weighing machine, and a sixteen-chair barber shop.)

(It was this last feature—the barber shop—that, alas, brought Mr. Mather's college to an early end. The student body, being drawn chiefly from the nearby countryside, was composed almost entirely of Pequot and Iroquois Indians who, alas, had no need of a barber shop. They braided the hair on top of their heads, and as for the hair on their faces, they had none. The barber, Tremblatt Follicle by name, grew so depressed staring day after day at 16 empty chairs that one day his mind gave way. Seizing his vibrator, he ran outside and shook the entire campus till it crumbled to dust. This later became known as Pickett's Charge.)

But I digress. We were exploring ways for you and your roommate to stop hating each other. This is admittedly difficult but not impossible if you will both bend a bit, give a little.

I remember, for example, my own college days (Berlitz '08). My roommate was, I think you will allow, even less agreeable than most. He was a Tibetan named Ringading whose native customs, while indisputably colorful, were not entirely endearing. Mark you, I didn't mind so much the gong he struck on the hour or the string of firecrackers he set off on the half hour. I didn't even mind that he singed chicken feathers every dusk and daybreak. What I did mind was that he singed them in my hat.

To be fair, he was not totally taken with some of my habits either—especially my hobby of collecting water. I had no jars at the time, so I just had to stack the water any-old-where.

Well, sir, things grew steadily cooler between Ringading and me, and they might actually have gotten uglier had we not each happened to receive a package from home one day. Ringading opened his package, paused, smiled shyly at me, and offered me a gift.

"Thank you," I said. "What is it?"

"Yak butter," he said. "You put it in your hair. In Tibetan we call it gree see kidstuff."

"Well now, that's mighty friendly," I said and offered him a gift from my package. "Now you must have one of mine."

"Thank you," he said. "What is this called?"

"Personna Stainless Steel Razor Blades," I said.

"I will try one at once," he said. And did.

"Wowdow!" he cried. "Never have I had such a smooth, close, comfortable shave!"

"Ah, but the best is yet!" I cried. "For you will get many, many smooth, close, comfortable shaves from your Personna Blade—each one nearly as smooth, close, and comfortable as the first!"

"Wowdow!" he cried.

"Moreover," I cried, "Personna Blades come both in Double Edge style and Injector style!"

"Sort of makes a man feel humble," he said.

"Yes," I said.

We were both silent then, not trusting ourselves to speak. Silently we clasped hands, friends at last, and I am proud to say that Ringading and I remain friends to this day. We exchange cards each Christmas and firecrackers each Fourth of July.

The makers of Personna® Stainless Steel Blades who sponsor this column—sometimes nervously—are also the makers of Burma Shave.® Burma Shave soaks rings around any other lather and is available in regular or menthol. Be kind to your kisser; try some soon.

Symposium Coming World Of Ideas Will Open

By CAROL GALLANT DTH Staff Writer
 Remember the date April 17. Imagine that on this day someone will approach you and present you with a five-day pass to explore the world of ideas with the help of experts, and a key to a door leading to a greater degree of understanding of your society, and perhaps yourself.

"Someone" will make such an offer—the Carolina Symposium—the combined effort of students, faculty, administration and Chapel Hill residents to bring to the campus a program of debate, discussion, and new ideas on important topics.

The wise student will not pass this off as "something else I won't have time for," or with an "I get enough ideas in class" attitude. The Symposium offers a unique opportunity to listen, learn and express opinions. It is a tremendous undertaking and has much attention focused on it due to state press, radio, and television coverage of it.

Since its inception in 1927, the Symposium has been held every two years. It brings outstanding men in various fields to the campus. All symposium topics are related to one main theme and panel members are invited from the surrounding Southeastern area to serve in supplementary fashion.

During the Symposium week, unscheduled informal dormitory student-faculty discussions often occur.

The 1966 Carolina Symposium, under the leadership of George Butler, will deal with the topic, "Man, Mind, and Myth." It is concerned with the genesis and function of myth; a myth being defined as a story which "explains" some institution, natural phenomenon or belief.

Myth? Why devote a week to the study of myths? The importance of exploring such a topic is apparent when one realizes that the myth, according to this year's Symposium workers, because of its simplicity, justification, and wide acceptance, helps shape society's pattern of operation in many areas. The myth becomes a powerful force perpetuating the pattern it has shaped as well as the thought and values of members of society.

If society, and its members, are interested in attaining any degree of intellectual self-awareness, it, and they, must understand the structure of the mythology, and the manner in which it affects society as a whole, and its members.

The purpose of the 1966 Carolina Symposium will be to conduct the university community in such an examination. Myth will be examined primarily as it serves the individual in his society.

In recent years topics covered have been: "Dimension of Survival: American Culture in World Focus"; "Image of Man: the Individual in an Accelerating Culture." Such well known persons as the late Eleanor Roosevelt, James Reston, Richard Harkness, and Senator Gale McGee have spoken.

The 1964 topic, "Arms and the Man" was extremely successful, and its speakers included Senator J. William Fulbright, Hans Morgenthau, and David Brinkley.

Some of the speakers who have accepted for this year's Symposium thus far are Thomas Wolfe, Morris K. Udall, and Dean Alan Richardson, and Nelson Algren.

Mexican Students Visit UNC

Ten student leaders from the University of Mexico got a real taste of some of the problems of an American during a six-day stay at the University.

They were on a 30-day United States Information Agency tour and UNC was their first stop.

Henry Coe, a graduate student at UNC and one of the coordinators for the visitors, said, "while they were here we wanted to bring about a frank interchange of opinion on such current topics as voter registration, tutoring and freedom of speech."

Coe noted that many of the visitors are active in student politics and in development of the rights and privileges of their own people. Thus they became very interested in many of the current programs and problems here.

"The main theme of the conferences was that of solving one's own problems in one's own highly specific way," said Coe.

This idea was brought out by one of the visitor's comments on the current "right to speak" controversy on campus.

Jose Luis Garcia, who was president of the student association at his preparatory school, said of the situation, "I hope you at the University achieve the freedom of expression that you're after—through your own ways."

He indicated that the University of Mexico is completely autonomous from the state even though it is tax supported, and he felt that while they might approach such a controversy in a slightly different manner, they would still fight for this principle of free speech.

He felt that it was "very good that a large student reaction came in defense of a fundamental principle."

In a talk at a Latin-American seminar that the Mexicans attended, Heberto Sein, advisor for the American Friends Service Committee which is sponsoring the Mexicans while at UNC, pointed to the same need for respect of each country's means of expression.

Mexican democracy is different from American democracy, he said, and the type of democracy that Mexico employs, though different from that of the United States, is nevertheless what it feels is the solution for its problems.

Sein said that Mexico's type of democracy has consolidated Mexico.
