

CIA Recruiting On 100 Campuses

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's super spy agency, the CIA, confirmed yesterday that it has recruiting teams visiting about 100 college campuses interviewing students as prospective analysts and agents.

"We want good people," said Col. Stanley J. Grogan, "We are out looking for them."

At present the CIA is particularly interested in students, especially graduate students with basic scientific training which would qualify them for photo interpretation work. That is a high priority field of intelligence which was brought to public notice in the U2 spy plane sensation of six years ago, and in the aerial photographs that uncovered Russia's secret rocket installations in Cuba in 1962.

Grogan, an assistant of the CIA director, Adm. William F. Raborn, said the Central Intelligence Agency probably has more employees and officials with advanced academic degrees than any other agency in government. It is a rare claim for any outsider to check against the record. Grogan said that under the law even the CIA total employment is secret.

But he also reported that it is known that CIA has about 600 "senior people" — apparently meaning officials of some importance — of whom 53 per cent have advanced academic degrees such as doctorates in science and philosophy.

The CIA's recruitment program was propelled into national prominence when a small group of students at Grinnell College in Iowa picketed a CIA man on campus. The students displayed posters asking what the CIA is doing in Viet Nam, Indonesia, and the Dominican Republic. One poster said: "Where there is an invisible government there is no democracy."

A Grinnell spokesman said the college didn't mind the picketing which had been "orderly . . . pretty peaceful."

The CIA here was obviously unperturbed also. In fact an inquirer gained the impression that the agency is not adverse to getting a big of publicity for its talent scouts.

North Carolina News Roundup

Outer Banks Project OK'd

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The House passed Wednesday by voice vote a bill to authorize establishment of the Cape Lookout National Seashore along North Carolina's lower outer banks.

The 58-mile barrier reef extends along the Atlantic coast from Ocracoke Inlet to Beaufort Inlet. It would be the nation's seventh national seashore.

The bill goes back to the Senate, which passed a similar measure last year. The House bill has some minor and technical amendments which the Senate must agree to before the measure can be sent to the White House for President Johnson's signature.

Chairman Wayne N. Aspinall, D-Colo., of the House Interior Committee said the cost of land acquisition to the United States would be very small because North Carolina has acquired and donated most of the land.

Rep. John P. Saylor, R-Pa., senior Republican member of the committee, estimated that by the end of five years the area would be visited annually by one million people. He commended North Carolina for donating the land, as did Rep. Rogers, C. B. Morton, R-Md., who said the State has set an example for other states to follow.

Jonas Pledges CPCC Aid

CHARLOTTE (AP) — North Carolina Congressman Charles R. Jonas Wednesday pledged strong action to aid the fund-plagued basic adult education program sponsored by Central Piedmont Community College.

Calling the federal government's action in the matter "a shame," the 8th District Republican promised to do what he could "to straighten these people out."

His pledge followed a decision Tuesday by Dr. Richard Hagemeyer, college president, to shut down the program after Thursday night's classes because all available funds have been exhausted.

Dr. Hagemeyer said he had no choice but to shut down the four - county program because all the money will be gone after teachers are paid Thursday.

Drunks Can Drive Legally?

DURHAM (AP) — The North Carolina Association of ABC Boards was told Wednesday that motorists in North Carolina might sometimes be driving drunk, and still be within the legal blood-alcohol ratio.

Dr. Fred W. Ellis of the School of Medicine of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill said the legal level of blood-alcohol ratio in a driver should be lowered.

He spoke at the midwinter meeting of the association in Durham.

Under present law, a blood-alcohol level of 0.1 per cent or 0.15 per cent may be reached before a driver is considered to be driving drunk.

Noting that a number of surveys on drinking people involved in accidents have been conducted recently, Dr. Ellis said there are indications that the "actual driving ability of a high percentage of drivers is impaired significantly over the wide range of 0.03 to 0.07 per cent blood-alcohol level."

"When a blood-alcohol level of 0.06 per cent is reached, the estimated probability of causing an accident is double that of a driver with no alcohol," he said.

"Drivers with a 0.1 per cent blood-alcohol level are more than six times as likely to cause an accident as one with no alcohol," Dr. Ellis said.

He called for the North Carolina law against drinking drivers to be changed to make it "illegal to operate a motor vehicle if the blood-alcohol level exceeds 0.05 per cent."

Murder Trial Begins

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Three defense motions were denied this morning by Forsyth Superior Court Judge George M. Fountain in the first degree murder trial of Robert E. Porth 57-year-old missile engineer charged with killing his wife.

Attorney James J. Booker moved first to quash the first degree murder indictment against his client, who pleaded innocent Monday in the death of his wife, Mrs. Hilda Borchardt Porth. Mrs. Porth's body was found on a mountainside near Pulaski, Va., last August.

Booker then made a motion for a bill of particulars. When that failed, he asked permission to record the proceedings of the trial, presumably on a tape recorder or other electronic device. The trial, is being recorded by an official court reporter.

The defense motions came after a twelfth male juror was selected following 30 minutes of questioning of veniremen.

Viet Nam Bill Debate Begins In Senate

WASHINGTON, (AP)—The Senate embarked on a historic Viet Nam debate yesterday with Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., saying the body should affirm President Johnson's Asiatic policies.

Up for debate was a bill to authorize $4.8 billion of the $12.3 billion of emergency military funds Johnson asked for Viet Nam fighting.

Even before the formal speeches began, Long, the acting Democratic leader, told an informal news conference that "some people would like to pull the rug out from under our boys" by attaching restrictive policy riders to the bill.

Because of this, Long said he personally favors an affirmative statement supporting the President's policies. He said, however, he would not offer it if Chairman Richard B. Russell, D-Ga., of the Senate Armed Services Committee objects.

Russell has said he opposes tying any policy statement to the bill.

Sen. Vance Hartke, D-Ind., spokesman for a group of Senators who opposed resumption of North Viet Nam bombing, said in a separate interview that a rider opposing escalation of the war may be offered.

Long said he regards a vote on the bill — expected to be passed overwhelmingly after several days of debate — as offering support for "both our fighting men over there and our President."

But Hartke said a vote for the bill can't be construed as endorsement of the President's policies.

Savings Bond Rate Of Interest Hiked

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government raised the interest rate today on U. S. Savings Bonds by four - tenths of one per cent in a three - pronged effort to strengthen the economy, fight inflation and help meet mounting costs of the Viet Nam war.

President Johnson announced the increase from 3.75 per cent to 4.15 per cent at a White House ceremony. It was raised from 3.52 per cent.

The new rate will apply to all Series E and H bonds, the type sold to the public, as of last Dec. 1.

This means that Series E Bonds bought on Dec. 1 or afterwards will mature in seven years, instead of seven years, nine months. Series H bonds will continue to mature over 10 years but will yield the higher interest rate.

Laser Operation Brings No Blood

NEW YORK, (AP) — Surgeons have successfully used a laser beam to remove a tumor from a man's leg bloodlessly, the New York Times reported yesterday. Although it cut through blood vessels like a knife it cauterized them so that no blood flowed.

"I'm absolutely jubilant," said Dr. Thomas E. Brown, one of three doctors who performed the surgery at children's hospital in Cincinnati, according to the Times.

"There's no apparent reason," Brown said, "why we cannot use the same laser to cut into the liver, the spleen or even the brain without fear of hemorrhage."

He said the laser also might be used to cauterize wounds of hemophiliacs, whose blood doesn't clot properly.

The laser is a sharply focused beam of light, up to one billion times brighter than ordinary light.

Brown said that for the tumor operation he used a gas laser known as argon or "green" laser, developed at the Bell Telephone laboratories in Murray Hill, N. J., by Eugene I. Gordon and Edward F. Labuda. Unlike some other lasers, it emits a steady, high powered beam, easy to control.

Lasers were used shortly after their discovery in 1960 for certain kinds of eye surgery. But other techniques proved as effective and less hazardous, so laser surgery fell into disuse.

Savings bond sales have been declining and the redemption of nonmatured bonds has increased because of more attractive interest rates in alternative investments. Treasury officials expressed hope that the new interest rate will reverse this trend.

Banks can pay up to 4 per cent interest on personal savings accounts and some savings and loan associations pay close to 5 per cent.
