Frank Graham Says Gag Serves No Useful Purpose

GREENSBORO (AP) — Dr. Frank P. Graham, a former president of the Consolidated University, said Friday speaker censorship on college campuses does not serve a useful educational purpose.

that is will outweigh all other views presented in the university community," Graham said.

Graham, who is now a United Nations mediator, said, "In Chapel Hill for example, the present storm center, there are hundreds of teachers who are both anti-Communist and anti-Fascist, and over 12,000 anti-Communist and anti-Fascist students."

The former U. S. Senator said, "a policy for the censorship of ideas in the American free market of ideas would not serve a real democratic educational purpose."

Graham said those who ask university leaders to accept a policy they believe is wrong "for the sake of gaining the world are asking all out state colleges and universities to sell their souls, and the result in the long run being they lose both their souls and the world."

North Carolina, Graham said, "must not be the only state which prohibits open forums in violation of the Bill of Rights."

Singers, Musicians Chosen For Jubilee

By STEVE BENNETT
DTH Staff Writer
Jubilee this spring will feature the Bitter End Singers; David, Della Rosa and Brooks; Jay and the Americans; Al Hirt; and Charlie Byrd.

The Bitter End Singers, a well-known five-member folk group, will appear April 29 at 7 p.m. They have just finished an engagement at the Americana with Woody Allen.

spotlight being shared by two singing groups. David, Della Rosa and Brooks received a standing ovation at their recent concert at N. C. State. They are "clean-cut" college students who sing every type of music. Jay and the Americans will also appear at the concert that afternoon. The seven-member folk group offers a kind of jubilent entertainment that is always in great demand on college campuses.

1 at 3 p.m. He has been credited with making the Bossa Nova a popular jazz media. Howard D. Henry, head of Graham Memorial, said that the performances at night will begin at 7 p.m. (an hour earlier than last year) so that people will have plenty of time for late dinners or combo parties after the performances. Henry said, "I.D. cards will admit any student and his (her) date. The student will also be able to secure tickets for another couple by signing a statement of responsibility for the actions of the other couple."

The Daily Tar Heel Wins ACP All-American Award

The Daily Tar Heel has won an All-American Honor Rating, the highest award given by the Associated Collegiate Press newspaper critical service. The award was based on analysis of each issue of the DTH published last semester. Judges were professional newsmen or persons with extensive backgrounds in publications work.

of news sources, news feature balance, editorials and photography. Copyreading, editorial page features and make-up and sports coverage received the lowest ratings, although they were all in the "good" or "very good" category. All college newspapers judged by the critical service are rated All-American, first class, second class, third class or fourth class. Figures on the number of papers which received All-American awards will be available after the judging is finished, probably next month.

It is expected that Carolina coeds will receive late permission for Jubilee activities as in the past years. The weekend will include outside combo parties to be held immediately after the performances in the Carr Dormitory parking lot beside Bynum Hall.

Vote Is Slated On Amendment

UNC students will vote Tuesday on a proposed constitutional amendment to elect the student body president and vice president on a single ticket, rather than on individual tickets as in the past.

The present controversy over the law—its first test since it was amended—arose two weeks ago when the trustees executive committee of the University denied Herbert Aptheker and Frank Wilkinson permission to speak on the Chapel Hill campus. "It is not a wise policy to build up the idea . . . that the Communist view is so powerful feel that his appearance would serve an educational purpose. But these students would be the first to attack Aptheker with questions if he were allowed to speak. Concerning Gov. Moore's intervention into the Aptheker invitation Dickson said, "To a certain extent it is political interference with the education process. But we must keep in mind that Gov. Moore is chairman of the board of trustees. We, of course, have a difference of opinion with Gov. Moore on this issue but his position certainly entitles him to speak out in this matter."

Chapel Hill." The program will be shown on WUNC-TV at 4:30 p.m. Sunday and 9 p.m. Monday. It is also scheduled to be shown on television stations in Charlotte, Asheville, Greensboro, Wilmington and Elizabeth City within the next few days.

Galbraith Will Keynote Symposium

John Kenneth Galbraith, author of "The Affluent Society," will be the keynote speaker for this year's Carolina Symposium. George Butler, chairman of the Symposium, said Thursday Galbraith will speak at Memorial Hall April 17.

will explore "Myth and Science," "Mind and Myth," "Myth and Politics," "Myth and the South" and "Myth and Literature." Other speakers will be announced later.

Galbraith appeared on campus last year sponsored by the Carolina Forum. The statesman, scholar, educator and writer spoke on "A Modern Foreign Policy."

There Is A Difference

It is not very often that an aspiring journalist sits back and takes a couple of pot shots at the rest of the news media. However, this is one of those times when someone needs to point out a serious error.

When asked what the student government plans to do if Aptheker is not allowed to speak by the trustees, he said, "Until the trustees approve specific speaker regulations, it's impossible for us to make any definite plans. We have a great deal of faith that they will do what is in the best interest of the University. I hope we are not disappointed."

Dickson was asked if he thought college students will be misled by a communist speaker if one does speak on campus. "Absolutely not," Dickson said. "I have the utmost confidence in the maturity and intellectual perception of today's college students. And I can speak for them when I say we are not afraid to hear anyone."

Delegation To Introduce Resolution

The UNC delegation to the Student State Legislature plans to propose a resolution at tomorrow's session asking for "total student support affirming the right of Aptheker to speak at UNC." SSL delegate Bob Powell announced today.

Over 1,000 students heard his speech here last year. He said, "Is it possible to get rid of poverty? It certainly is, but you can't do it unless you try."

The Carolina Symposium began in 1927 as the Institute of Human Relations. It was changed in 1957 from a quadrennial to a biennial schedule. In 1956 the Institute of Human Relations was changed to the Carolina Symposium on Public Affairs. Since its beginning it has won acclaim both in North Carolina and throughout the nation.

contributions and the Student Government. Dr. Daniel Patterson is faculty advisor for the Symposium.

But the most grievous error surrounding the matter is the lack of any coverage of the Carolina Blood Drive. Here were all types of students giving their blood, and in a way showing their loyalty to this country and our beliefs. The Red Cross people said the only place they have seen as much enthusiasm was at Fort Bragg, home of the Green Berets.

Powell said the student body politically could be classified as "moderately conservative." A newsman commented that if the students are relatively conservative, then why is not a great deal of opposition to letting Aptheker speak here.

Powell said he felt the interview was very thorough and adequately covered the controversy and its effects. "Because there was no conclusion reached in the program we think that people will take a more objective look at the situation and better understand our position here in

Banov To Run For Editor

Alan Banov yesterday became the first person to announce his candidacy for editor of The Daily Tar Heel. In a statement issued to the DTH, Banov, Assistant Press Secretary of Student Government, asserted, "The first purpose of The Daily Tar Heel is to inform students primarily of campus news, then of state, national and world news."

Neither Is Viet Nam

The DTH ran a story Thursday about things to do in Chapel Hill. The story missed a few places that should not be neglected.

"Secondly, the newspaper must challenge its readers to think about the important issues on campus and around the world. Thirdly, it must provide interesting and entertaining reading to whet students' imagination."

The Daily Tar Heel in the past has been not only the foremost college newspaper in the South, but also a respected molder of campus opinion. If elected editor, I plan to return the paper to its old position of prestige and prominence."
