Uhh... about the cheerleaders.

After spending the weekend in the Queen City of Charlotte watching four basketball teams and occasionally eyeing all the different cheerleaders I have decided that perhaps I was a bit wrong in my opinion of our girls.

It has been said by many Carolina Gentlemen that the cheerleaders add nothing to a ballgame with the exception a little leg here and there.

We were wrong.

During the second half of Saturday night's game against the Gamecocks our cheerleaders were right in front of me. I could have reached out and... It was a bit nerve racking.

At any rate I discovered the girls do know something about the game of basketball and they yell loud and long. In fact they rarely stop yelling.

Two or three times one of them came over and asked how many points one of the players had. One young lady kept yelling for our defense to stop a certain South Carolina player from shooting a long jump-shot.

He hit about three straight before they started guarding him outside. He didn't get any more after that.

Well what I'm trying to say is that the girls do a good job and that they deserve credit instead of abuse.

I can think of a lot of things they could be doing that would be a lot more fun than sitting on a hard floor for two hours.

It's hard to appreciate a cheerleader. So I think every free man on this campus should call the Chi O, Pi Phi or Tri Delta house and ask these young ladies for a date — to show your appreciation, of course.

MAUREEN SHANNON, Judy Fleming and Winborne Shaffer are three of the cheerleaders who deserve recognition for their fine efforts this year.

Optimistic On Speaker Rules, Says Sitterson

Acting Chancellor J. Carlye Sitterson expressed confidence this week that the Consolidated University board of trustees will assign the administration of speaker regulations to University officials.

Sitterson assumed the post of Acting Chancellor Feb. 15. He had served as a Vice Chancellor since September, 1965. Asked whether implementation of the newly adopted speaker policy would be left to the administration when the board of trustees meets here on Feb. 28, Sitterson replied: "I'm hopeful. Until the contrary takes place I believe they will. I'm not going to be pessimistic until the matter is settled in a manner which I'd regard as undesirable."

Regulations and procedures governing visiting speakers on the four campuses were adopted by the trustees' executive committee at a meeting on Feb. 7.

The regulations and amendments formulated by a three-man subcommittee of the executive committee will be submitted to the fall board for approval on Feb. 28.

Sitterson said that he was hopeful the executive committee's regulations would be adopted. He conceded that regulations could be enacted "which constitute censorship."

"But I don't think the trustees are insisting on that," he said.

The Acting Chancellor noted that he was personally disappointed in the failure of the executive committee to allow speaking engagements on the University campuses for persons banned under the speaker ban law, until the new regulations are adopted.

"But we must remember," he said, "that the trustee meeting will be the first full board meeting since the special session which amended the speaker law. The trustee board is the only one authorized to adopt these regulations."

Sitterson declined to discuss the consequences which might result from trustee regulations which either failed to entrust University officials with their implementation or amounted to censorship.

"Of course it would be very discouraging to the faculty, students, administration and

Writer's Program Prompts Criticism

By CAROL GALLANT

"We're trying to break away from the chocolate-chip cookie syndrome," said Armistead Maupin, Chairman of the YMCA Writer-in-Residence Committee.

"The Writer - in - Residence Program should offer something more than insipid receptions at which wide-eyed students share Kool-Aid with a Great Man of Letters."

"There ought to be an opportunity for the interested student to receive professional guidance through personal contact with the writer," Maupin said.

Tonight students will have this opportunity. The first Writer-in-Residence Workshop will be held from 8-10:30 p.m. in 107 Howell Hall. Opening remarks will be made by Betty Smith, author of A Tree Grows in Brooklyn and Joy in the Morning.

The world premier of the movie "Joy in the Morning" was held in Chapel Hill last year.

The writing workshops, were initiated by Maupin and Betty O'Bryan, chairman of the YWCA Writer - in - Residence Committee, at the suggestion of this year's Writer-in-Residence, Leon Rooke.

Rooke was recipient of the 1965 O'Henry Award for his novel, If Lost, Return to the Swiss Arms. He has demonstrated an interest in meeting and working with students.

The workshops will be conducted on an informal basis. Students may come in any time, write as long as they wish, and have the assistance and advice of a professional writer if they desire it. The workshops will be conducted on a weekly basis.

This is the first year for Writer-in-Residence Workshops, but the Writer - in - Residence Program itself is several years old. Past participants include Reynolds Price, author of A Long and Happy Life, and John Knowles, author of A Separate Peace.

Myriad Items Cross Border

An exchange program between Escuela Normal Superior of Mexico and UNC which began in 1957 is continuing this semester with three Mexican students studying here.

The program is sponsored here by Phi Delta Kappa, men's honorary education fraternity, and the Frank Porter Graham chapter of Student National Education Association under the guidance of the American Association of Colleges for Teacher Education.

The program has exchanged more things than just students. For example:

—Letters between students at ENS and UNC.

—Photographs — ranging from small "snapshots" to framed enlargements.

—Tape Recordings—one for prospective visitors to UNC telling about living conditions, food, clothing and other information helpful to them in planning for their trip.

—Slides depicting education in each country with recorded commentary.

—Motion pictures—UNC students produced a 40 minute sound movie showing university life.

—Phonograph records—The Mexicans sent records of their folk music and UNC returned recordings of American folk music, jazz and English language records of poetry.

—Textbooks—UNC set all texts used in basic courses in the School of Education.

—Professional magazines.

—Student newspaper—The School of Education prepared a Spanish edition The Daily Tar Heel. ENS sent copies of English Tidings.

—Art exhibits—ENS sent an outstanding piece of sculpture which was placed on display in Peabody Hall.

—Maps

—Markers—A tree was planted beside Peabody in 1963 by 22 ENS professors. In 1964 a marker was placed at the base of the tree.

Constitutional Amendment Light Turnout Seen In Referendum Vote

By GLENN L. MAYS
DTH Staff Writer

Voter turnout is expected to be very light today as North Carolina students vote on a proposed constitutional amendment which will affect future elections of the student body president and vice president.

John Winborne, temporary elections board chairman, said, "Very little interest has been shown in this election. As a matter of fact there has been less interest in this than in any election I have seen here in the past three years."

He said there was much more interest in the campus radio referendum last fall than has been shown in the constitutional amendment.

The amendment, if passed, will provide for the election of the student body president and vice president on the same ballot rather than on individual tickets as they have been in the past.

Speakers Chosen For CFI Meeting

By STEVE BENNETT
DTH Staff Writer

The Committee for Free Inquiry will sponsor a meeting of the student body, faculty and administration Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in Memorial Hall concerning the speaker policy procedures the trustees will be discussing at their meeting next Monday.

Student body president Paul Dickson, who is also chairman of the CFI, said yesterday that the meeting will feature speeches concerning the speaker policy procedures recommended to the trustees by the executive committee and the CFI.

Speakers will include Dr. David Lapkin, economics professor; Bob Powell, chairman of the UNC state affairs committee; and Richard French, head of the Graduate Students Committee for Free Inquiry.

Dickson will preside at the meeting and will also speak. He is negotiating with a well-known alumnus to secure him as an additional speaker for the meeting.

Dickson said, "Invitations were extended to members of the executive committee. One member contacted personally turned down the invitation and said he thought the other members would turn down the invitations also."

"The meeting will emphasize the aspect of a free university. It will also emphasize academic freedom and integrity and their importance to the University."

Dickson listed the objections that the CFI has to the procedures of the speaker policy proposed by the executive committee of the board of trustees:

"The discriminatory policy will not apply to all speakers but only those in certain categories."

"We consider the policy to be arbitrary. There is no reason why the speakers should not be allowed to speak."

"We consider the policy to be unconstitutional and in violation of the Fourteenth Amendment guaranteeing equal protection of the law.

"The policy allows the Chancellor to violate the First Amendment of the freedom of speech."

"The policy also belittles students, because the executive committee assumes that a student can not evaluate an opposing point of view."

"The policy also shows prior censorship."

SSL Passes Free Speech Resolution

A Resolution in support of free speech at institutions of higher education in North Carolina was passed Saturday by State Student Legislature meeting in Raleigh last week.

The representatives from North Carolina colleges passed the bill by a vote of 90-2. The Resolution was introduced by Salem College at the suggestion of the University of North Carolina. Bob Powell of UNC spoke to the motion.

The Resolution said in part that institutions of higher education must serve as an open forum for different views and opinions, even if they are unpopular or divergent.

"It is through the critical examination of all alternatives that the fullest understanding of significant issues can be achieved," it said.

The Resolution also expressed opposition to Communist doctrines.

A copy of the resolution was sent to the Governor, the President of each institution of higher education represented by the Student Legislature, and each member of the Board of Trustees of the University of North Carolina.

"Most of the objections to the amendment have been mainly political ones," Gordon said. "Some people say the minority party would be hurt in its chances of getting a candidate into office if the president and vice president are elected on the same ballot. Others say the president would have too much power if the two were elected on the same ballot."

Gordon said candidates from the same political party and similar philosophies of government would strengthen the executive branch.

"The proposal was introduced again this spring by SP Majority Leader Don Wilson and Don Carson, legislator from Craig, and carried the necessary two-thirds vote in the legislature."

Britt Gordon, student body vice president, said, "This is something that is definitely needed. Many times when the president and vice president are elected from different parties, some disharmony occurs and the executive branch of student government is weakened."
