With The Woman's Touch

Since The Daily Tar Heel has no woman's page I thought it would be appropriate to pass along the following article which was written by the women's editor of the paper at the University of Georgia.

Every girl dreams the man she will someday fall in love with will be Prince Charming — romantic, brave, loyal, ambitious and sexy.

And what does she actually fall in love with? Someone more like this:

— He's married, divorced, an alcoholic, a Don Juan, a homosexual, already has a girl, or doesn't like you.

— His best friend tells you that you're wasting your time. You tell him what his best friend said, and he says, "You know, he may have a point there."

— He won't tell you anything about his past.

— He tells you everything about his past.

— He thinks all your girl friends are stupid.

— He thinks you are stupid (and he's right).

— You ask him whether or not he thinks your relationship should come to an end, and he says, "What relationship?"

— He hates weddings.

— He's forever saying what a fine person you are and that you should get married and have children like other girls.

— Everybody worries about him. So does he. Incessantly.

— He's all that people say he is. But you defend him anyway.

— He always calls you by your last name.

— When you've worked on yourself for hours to look particularly fetching, he tells you that you've got on too much make-up.

— He forgets birthdays. And anniversaries. In fact, he forgets everything.

— You spend a fortune having the hair stylist create your "new image," and he says, "What happened to your hair?"

— You start to cry if he hurts your feelings and he turns up the TV.

— He never understands your jokes.

— He knits.

— He thinks your mother is a kook.

— He goes away for weekends without you, comes back raving about the wonderful time he has had, but won't tell you what happened.

— After a lovely evening together just when you think you've really turned him on, he wanders away muttering something about playing hearts with the guys.

— He has marvelous timing. Just when you've decided you're through with him, he does something wonderful and you're hooked for another month.

Wouldn't you like to meet this young lady's boy friend?

Worthless Check Problem Growing In Chapel Hill

By STEVE LACKEY

Students writing worthless checks are just trying "to negotiate a short-term loan," according to the manager of Varsity Men's Wear.

On the other side of the fence, the Dairy Bar manager says "students do it on purpose, knowing they don't have money, or planning to make a deposit then forgetting to do so."

Exactly what is a "worthless check" and how serious is the problem in Chapel Hill? The problem is growing here. It may be from sheer carelessness on the students' part or from purposeful writing of worthless checks, but it is a growing problem.

On the average, nine checks are turned over the Chapel Hill's two justices of the peace every other business day. Exactly how many of these are written by students is unknown, but it is a sizeable number.

There are countless other checks which "bounce" but are never sent to the "JP" for collection. Most Chapel Hill merchants claim to send notices to students whose checks have bounced. The majority of those notified come to the store and "buy their check."

There are two legal definitions of a worthless check. One law reads:

"Every person who, with intent to cheat and defraud another, shall obtain money, credit, goods, wares or any other thing of value by means of a check, draft or order of any kind upon any bank, person, firm or corporation, not indebted to the drawer, or where he has not provided for the payment or acceptance of the same, and the same be not paid upon presentation, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor."

The other law defining bad checks says:

"It shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to draw . . . and deliver to another any check or draft on any bank or depository, for the payment of money or its equivalent, knowing at the time of the making . . . that the maker or drawer thereof has not sufficient funds on deposit in or credit with such bank or depository with which to pay the same upon presentation."

Several students at North Carolina have admitted to writing a bad check. Of the six interviewed, five had written the check with NO intent to cheat and defraud and NOT knowing that their money had not been deposited. Yet these students were called before a justice of the peace and convicted of the criminal offense of "writing a worthless check."

Counter checks were the cause of four of these checks being bad. The students simply forgot to record either the name of their bank or their hometown on the check.

Morgan Nixes Red Speakers At University

By STEVE BENNETT
DTH Staff Writer

"A Communist has no right to speak at the University because his audience would include immature students incapable of detecting his deceptions."

Senator Robert Morgan said this Monday night in a speech to the American Association of University Professors (AAUP) on the topic of academic freedom for the responsible teachers.

Morgan is a representative to the state senate from Harnett County. He was one of the strongest backers of the speaker ban.

Dr. Joseph W. Straley, a UNC physics professor, introduced Morgan at the meeting of the AAUP. Straley is the president of the Chapel Hill chapter of the AAUP.

Senator Morgan said, "College professors have the greatest influence on the American public. They should observe special restraints in the instruction of the immature students."

Senator Morgan said, "College professors have the greatest influence on the American public. They should observe special restraints in the instruction of the immature students."

He said, "My ideas and opinions were not the same as yours then and I feel that they may not be the same as yours now."

Morgan emphasized his opinion that Aptheker should not be allowed to speak on the UNC campus by giving a quotation from Justice Jackson of the Supreme Court which said:

"Every member of the Communist Party is an agent to promote the objectives of the party."

Morgan said, "In the Aptheker case we are not talking merely of a controversial speaker who is loyal to the democratic way of life. We are talking about letting a member of the Communist party, which advocates the overthrow of our government, come here and speak to an audience which would undoubtedly include immature students."

Bare - Busted Waitresses: Coming Here?

By BOB HARRIS
DTH Staff Writer

In June 1964 fashion designer Rudi Gernreich introduced "ladies' topless swimsuits to the American public. Since then another topless development has taken place — bare-busted waitresses.

Is this a trend? Will it come to Chapel Hill?

To answer this question The Daily Tar Heel polled a number of area restaurant owners, waitresses and students. Here are some of their comments:

John Sauls, sophomore, Lakeland, Fla. — "I think the number of bare-chested women will remain in the minority because most women's chests do not look good enough when compared to the bare-chested models who have made the topless wear seem so desirable."

Candy Keener, junior, Charlotte — "I don't approve or disapprove. However, if I were dating in such a club, I think the distraction would offer too much competition. The nudity might cause undesirable consequences later on in the evening."

Robin Broadwell, waitress, Eastgate Restaurant —

"I don't approve of the topless wear. People tend to look down on waitresses already. This job is only a way to make a living and it depends upon yourself what you make of it."

Alan Rodgers, owner and manager of Balan Lounge — "Bare-busted girls have been working in bars and clubs for many years so I don't exactly see a new trend. I imagine it will continue and my own personal approval would depend upon the type of girl."

Sarah-Helen Pierce, senior, Raleigh — "I think the trend will continue in the night clubs of large cities, but the failure of Gernreich's topless suits to sell in the United States seems to indicate the American public is not ready to accept this on public beaches.

As far as North Carolina goes this exposure could possibly be introduced into night clubs, but I don't think it will be successful in public restaurants. I personally wouldn't want to eat in a place with nude waitresses running around."

Wayne Burgess, junior, Sanford — "Someone will come up with a better idea or this nudity business will be outlawed."

Amendment Gets Approval

Referendum Carries 2-To-1, Results May Be Challenged

By GLENN L. MAYS
DTH Staff Writer

UNC students yesterday voted overwhelmingly in favor of a constitutional amendment concerning the future elections of student body presidents and vice presidents. Although the majority was large, there was an extremely light voter turnout for the referendum.

The final margin was 1,283 for the amendment to 657 against, almost a two-to-one majority.

John Winborne, temporary elections board chairman, said the light turnout

Speculation High On Party Tickets

By JOHN GREENBACKER
Special to the DTH

It has often been said that the spring season brings out the madness in men, and Wilson didn't want the job. He was hearing the call of graduate school and feeling the urge to get married.

Investigation of this rumor proved it to be correct, but there are counter rumors circulating about Wilson's motives in making this announcement.

If Wilson is serious, the nomination could go to any of a number of persons. Mentioned by Wilson himself is the name of Bob Powell, a North Carolina debater, Student Government administrator and State Student Legislature delegate.

The University Party, regardless of the rumors, is operating under the theory that Bob Wilson is the man to beat. UP leaders have been seeking a candidate for months now, and the issue is still up in the air.

The front runners are Sonny Pepper and Teddy O'Toole. Pepper, a master politician, is the president of the Men's Residence Council.

O'Toole, active in Student Government as a class officer and member of Student Legislature, is a likable fellow.

Student Government.

He was almost a "shoo-in."

About two weeks ago the word started to filter out that Wilson didn't want the job.

Investigation of this rumor proved it to be correct, but there are counter rumors circulating about Wilson's motives in making this announcement.

was evident in all the polling places on campus. But he added, "The turnout was about what I expected."

He said there was very little interest shown by students in the amendment change. Most poll tenders said students would ask, "What are we voting for?" when they went to the polling places.

The election may be challenged, according to reports. There were reports that ballot boxes at Y-Court were left untended at times.

Winborne said a mixup among some of the poll tenders as to where they were to be caused the situation.

The chairman said the constitutional committee of the elections board will rule on the referendum if it is challenged. "But as far as I'm concerned, it is valid," he said.

If the election is not challenged the amendment will apply in the student body elections March 22.

The amendment provides that the student body president and vice president shall be elected on the same ballot rather than on individual ones as they have in the past.

All the present student leaders from both the SP and UP have strongly endorsed the proposal which was passed in the student legislature earlier this month. The bill which has been introduced several times in the past few years has been supported by all the recent student body administrations. Three of the past five have been made up with the president and vice president have been from opposite political parties.

Yesterday was the first time students have had the opportunity to voice their opinions on the constitutional change.

Student political leaders said the amendment would provide a stronger executive branch for the student government and it would be more effective.

Winborne said he did not know when the constitutional committee will meet to decide on the election's validity.

Won't Run, Says Dickson

"I'm not running!"

That was the comment by Student Body President Paul Dickson yesterday when asked whether he was planning to seek the editorship of the Daily Tar Heel.

"I had considered it," he said. "Many people have come to me and asked me if I would run. But I gave it a lot of consideration and I don't think it would be worth coming back another year. It would actually be a step down in position for me."

"I think there has been enough controversy aroused while I was here," Dickson said.

Thus far, Alan Banov is the only candidate to announce that he is running for editor of the Daily Tar Heel.

Persons who plan to run for any of the offices handled by the GM Publications Board have to be interviewed by the board members Thursday. The appointments may be made for the meeting at the information desk in GM.

Clark Egeler and Banov are the only persons who have signed up for appointments. Egeler is seeking the editorship of the Yack.

Freeman Elected Head Of IFC

Lindsay Freeman was elected president of the Inter-Fraternity Council by acclamation Monday night.

Other officers elected were Mac Thompson, vice president; Randy Meyer, secretary; Joe McGirt, treasurer; and Sterling Phillips, Rush chairman.

Elected to the IFC Court were Nelson Schwab, Tom Higgins, Steve Fox, Jimmy Barber, Terry Robinson and Trey Obenshain.

A resolution calling for an annual faculty-administration-fraternity conference was introduced by John Greenbacker.

Stolen Cloth

Chapel Hill Police have recovered clothes stolen from James A. Gunter last week-end. They were found Monday, hidden under a staircase in Battle Residence Hall.

Gunter reported the clothes missing Sunday afternoon. Recovered were an overcoat, two wool suits, two wool sports coats, a summer sports coat and a military field jacket.

Three wallets, one belonging to Gunter, were found. One was a girl's wallet with a '61-'62 ID card in it.

Gunter said his watch was still missing.

Honors Commission

The Honor Systems Commission will hold a meeting tomorrow from 4:30 to 6 in Roland Parker 2 in Graham Memorial. Anyone having questions should contact the Student Government offices in GM.

Computer Seminar

Application of digital computers to literary and social-scientific research will be discussed at two UNC seminars Thursday and Friday at 3:30 p.m.

The Thursday seminar on "The Computer in Literature Research" will feature as speaker Dr. Salley Y. Sedelow of St. Louis University.

Seminar topic for Friday will be "The Computer in Social-Scientific Research" with Dr. Walter A. Sedelow, Jr., of St. Louis University. Both seminars will be conducted in room 265 Phillips Hall and will be open to the public.

Lecture At Queens

John E. Keller, professor of Romance Languages at UNC, will lecture at Queens College in Charlotte Friday, Feb. 25. He will spend the day on the Queens campus, meet with students and faculty, and discuss medieval Spanish literature, which is his specialty. Dr. Keller will give his lecture on the Cantigas de Santa Maria, illustrated by color slides.

Fordham Will Speak

Student body President Paul Dickson announced yesterday that Jefferson B. Fordham, Dean of the University of Pennsylvania (Philadelphia) Law School has agreed to speak at the Thursday meeting of the Committee for Free Inquiry.
