Banov And Gebeaux Circulate Petitions

By STEVE BENNETT
DTH Staff Writer

Alan Banov and Howard Gebeaux have started circulating petitions to get their names on the ballot for editor of The Daily Tar Heel, since neither received the endorsement of the Publications Board.

The petitions must contain at least 145 names and be submitted to the Elections Board by March 10.

Hugh Blackwell, chairman of the Publications Board, said that the board would decide at their meeting this Thursday whether to make public or not the reasons why Banov and Gebeaux did not receive endorsement.

"I plan to go to as many times for editor of the DTH," Banov said. "I should have no trouble in securing the required number of signatures on the petition."

Banov said, "I feel the Publications Board, fraternities and sororities as possible in securing names for the petition and support for my campaign. I hope to secure several thousand signatures on the petition."

Gebeaux said that he will be running his campaign by presenting his views of what an editor should be and what would make a good DTH.

Banov is a junior from Charleston, S. C. He has been news editor of the DTH and is now acting press secretary for the student government.

Banov said, "I feel the Publications Board used information in considering me for endorsement that is not relevant to the position for which I have applied."

"I think that my record in journalism and student government would enable me to handle the job as editor."

Howard Gebeaux, a junior from Falls Church, Va., said that he has already begun circulating his petition but he does not plan to try to secure a larger number than required.

He said, "I feel the Publications Board made the only decision they could in not endorsing me according to the criteria they think is most important for the editor of the DTH. My concepts of the duties of an editor are different from those expressed by the Publications Board."

"The Publications Board expresses the view that the editor of the DTH must know every detail concerning the technical procedures involved in putting out a student newspaper."

"I think I could learn the technical processes by next year. I will be at UNC during this summer."

The Publications Board has endorsed Fred Thomas and Ray Linville for editor of the DTH. If the petitions of Banov and Gebeaux are approved, they will appear on the ballot with Thomas and Linville. The election will be held March 22.

GI's Wives Get Anonymous Calls

By CHARLES BARBOUR
Durham Morning Herald

FT. BRAGG (AP) — The night a Ft. Bragg housewife's husband was reported executed by the North Vietnamese, someone telephoned the home and shouted: "I'm going to kill you just as your husband got killed."

About the same time, four other dependents of men fighting the Viet Cong received anonymous calls saying they should be ashamed that their husbands were fighting in a war that is not our business.

Two others were called and told they would be taken to some remote spot and "horse beaten" at an undetermined time.

These terrifying experiences are being relived once, twice, sometimes several times daily here by the women struggling to take care of their families while their husbands are away.

Since last October, the Army has officially recorded 24 wives at this post as receiving one or more such calls — 16 of them obscene in nature, four subversive and three of terror.

Every call followed the same line. The caller knew the first names of the dependents, knew the husbands were overseas, and, most of the time, knew enough to trace the dependents' daily activities.

And, although 24 have been officially noted, many others — possibly hundreds — have not.

The calls take on many shapes and forms at first, apparently, but have the same objective.

One wife related that she received her first call shortly after her husband was reported missing in action.

"It was a long distance call," she said, "and they knew my husband's name. I heard them tell the operator that they had vital information for me about my husband."

The wife refused to talk with the party and immediately notified Ft. Bragg officials.

Shortly thereafter, a deluge of mail began arriving at her address from extremist organizations. They urged her to join at a $100 fee to assist in a march on Washington, join in picketing at the White House or meet with the group in Chicago.

Ray Linville To Run For Tar Heel Editor

Ray P. Linville, a junior from Winston-Salem, has announced his candidacy for editor of The Daily Tar Heel. A journalism major, he received an endorsement by the Publications Board Thursday.

Campaigning on experience in both journalism and student affairs, Linville has been an orientation counselor and has served in the Men's Residence Council.

He was a member of the

he was managing editor of the UNC Journalist, a publication of the School of Journalism. He has been a member of the DTH staff.

A former employee of the Twin City (Winston-Salem) Sentinel, Linville has made the Dean's List and is pursuing the honors program in journalism.

He is a member of the AFROTIC program and the Arnold Air Society.

"The Daily Tar Heel is a student newspaper and is the students' sole means of communication. It should exist for all students, fraternities, residence halls and their activities. The DTH editor should be aware of the role an effective student newspaper can play. He should be interested in student activities and the University as a whole," Linville said in announcing his candidacy.

"The DTH is obligated to the student body for accuracy, objectivity and maintenance of ethical standards, and I feel the paper can and should meet these obligations."

Zoologist To Speak

Dr. Phillip Hildroth, a research zoologist at the Lawrence Radiation Laboratory at the University of California at Berkeley, will be the speaker at Wednesday's UNC Zoology Seminar.

Interfaith Council Still Looking For Participants

Places are still open for participants in four of the discussion-study groups sponsored by the UNC Interfaith Council.

Composed of representatives from all the campus fellowships, the Interfaith Council, for the purpose of "prompting thinking and action in the areas of university concern, social problems and international relations, and aiding the student in attaining an understanding of religious thought and in developing his own personal faith, has organized the following three groups to meet for five weeks on Wednesday evenings beginning Wednesday and running through March 30:

"The Philosophy of Teilhard de Chardin," led by Father William Shurr, S. J., (1942-2114) will examine the controversial work of the Jesuit biologist in incorporating the scientific view of evolution with the Christian faith. Meeting 9 p.m. at the Episcopal Student Center, 304 East Franklin Street. Study books will be The Divine Mosaic and The Phenomenon of Man.

"Conversations on Myth," with Rev. DeWitt Myers of the United Church (942-1740). This group will be a seminar study in preparation for the Carolina Symposium (April 17-21) on "Man, Mind and Myth" and will investigate the use of myth and symbol in religious literature and thought. The text will be Rollo May's collected essays Symbolism in Religion and Literature.

PHARMACIST BEN COURTS advises students not to doctor themselves. But — if you can't resist the urge, this year's big sellers in cold remedies are Coryban D, Coricidin, Contac, Anahist and Dristan. Meanwhile, over in the infirmary — Dr. E. M. Hedgpeth reports things are normal for this time of year.

'New Wine' On Sale Now; Topic: 'Man And Myth'

New Wine, the Christian journal of opinion published by the Westminster Fellowship, goes on sale this week. This issue, "Man and Myth," examines the various ways myth functions in modern life. Writers include John Honigmann, Suzanne MacRae, Bernard Boyd, Virgil Aldrich, Robert Sherer and Lawrence Gruman. Book reviews are by Sue Ross, Waldo Haisley, Jim McCorkle, David McFadden and Clay Stalaker.

It will be on sale at Kemp's, Carolina Coffee Shop, Y-Court, Graham Memorial and Bull's Head Bookstore. It can also be obtained by mail at Box 509, Chapel Hill. Price is 50 cents.

Colloquium Monday

Prof. G. A. Barnard will speak on "Data Analysis in High Energy Physics" at Monday's statistics colloquium in 265 Phillips.

He has held the Chair of Statistics at Imperial College of Science, London, since 1948. He will soon take the same position at the University of Essex.

Yang At Duke

A Nobel Award winner in physics will speak at the Tenth Fritz London Memorial Lecture at Duke Wednesday at 8 p.m. Dr. Chen Ning Yang will speak on the subject of his prize-winning effort — "The Symmetry Laws of Physics."

He is known for his work in statistical mechanics and on the process of sublimation of a solid into gas.

Visits Citadel

Prof. Lawrence M. Slifkin of the Physics Department will be visiting lecturer at The Citadel, Charleston, S. C., on March 10 and 11.

His visit is part of a nationwide program to stimulate interest in physics, sponsored by the American Institute of Physics and the American Association of Physics Teachers.

Slifkin will give lectures, hold informal meetings with students and assist faculty members with curriculum and research problems.

He has been a member of the faculty here since 1955.

SP Meets

There will be a Student Party meeting tomorrow night at 7:30 in Gerrard Hall to nominate candidates for secretary and treasurer of the student body.

Nominations for several legislative offices will also be made, according to SP Chairman Jim Little. The party will also adopt a platform.

A News Analysis

Effects Will Last

By ED FREAKLEY
DTH Staff Writer

A decision that will have deep and lasting effects on this University will be made by the 100-member board of trustees in Raleigh tomorrow. There are many complexities surrounding Monday's decision and many issues involved. But from the standpoint of the University community there is only one issue — freedom of speech. Will it be returned, or will it remain qualified?

On Feb. 8 the executive board of the full trustee committee met and in an 8-3 vote instructed the president and chancellors to "deny the use of university facilities for speaking purposes of Herbert Aptheker and Frank Wilkinson."

A second resolution was unanimously adopted by the committee which said, "The executive committee suspends all invitations to speakers who are under terms of GS 116-199 (the speaker ban law) until action is taken by the board of trustees establishing rates and regulations governing speakers as required by law."

Committee Reports
Trustees Victor Bryant, Wade Barber and Reid Maynard were appointed as a three-man committee to discuss further rules "in order to clarify the registration of groups" on the university campus. The committee will make its report tomorrow when all proposed regulations will be considered.

Its decision will take into consideration the speaker policy set forth by the Committee for Free Inquiry.

This proposal is completely non-restrictive and is the only one students here seem willing to accept. But there are policies to be considered and they are all restrictive in one aspect or another.

There is also the question of Communist Herbert Aptheker's invitation to speak here and the invitation to Frank Wilkinson.

Possibilities
The possibilities that lie ahead are many and their ramifications are even more important.

1. The full board may pass a restrictive speaker policy and at the same time prohibit Aptheker and Wilkinson's alternative it is more than 2. It may pass a restrictive policy and permit Aptheker and Wilkinson to appear providing all the measures under the policy are followed.

3. The board may accept a non-restrictive policy and allow the two controversial speakers to appear.

If the board takes the first alternative it is more than likely that the Committee for Free Inquiry, which has been restrained for the past month by positive and thoughtful leadership, may take to the streets.

Professors

It is also possible that professors will carry through on their threats and leave Chapel Hill for freer pastures. And there is no doubt that the reputation and the high standing of this University will come crashing down.

The same action is likely even if the board does permit Aptheker and Wilkinson to speak. These two men have been removed from the issue, at last for the most part. The students here are interested in free speech in its entirety. They don't want it qualified.

If the committee rules that Aptheker cannot appear he will probably be re-invited. And then there will be the much talked about test case.

If the speaker ban is thrown out, and surely it would be, the legislature and the Governor would have mud in their eyes.

It is highly unlikely that the board will pass the non-restrictive policy for they would be going against the expressed wishes of Gov. Moore. And it is a well known fact that the majority of North Carolina stands behind Gov. Moore on this issue.

In the final analysis no one can win, except, of course, free speech.

The New Love

We printed the first half of a revealing sex survey that was taken on another campus yesterday. Today we return to this vital subject to find even more startling results.

Of the males interviewed regarding marriage almost all of them expressed a desire to get married somewhere between the ages of 55 and 96.

Over 98 per cent of the males said they believed in the "double standard." However, 97 per cent of them said they told their dates they believed in the "single standard."

All females said they believed in the double standard. But it was not valid, they said, if a girl was going steady, engaged, had gone out with someone more than three times or if the male had admitted to being in love with her, regardless of the length of the relationship. Marriage was not mentioned as a reason.

Factors which affected the success or failure of dating were the inability to dance, inability to consume a fifth of liquor at one sitting, lack of a new model car to drive and the presence of morals.

Females said the ideal mate, or date, was one who carried a brief case, knew his way around Philadelphia (which includes every night club and expensive restaurant), is more irritating than she's ever known, who is going to be a doctor or an attorney, maybe an accountant, and who can smile like Steve McQueen.

Males described an ideal date or mate as a female who thinks he, and not Sean Connery, is the "greatest thing going," who will welcome him with open arms after he has not called for three months, who will support and defend him when he is totally wrong, and who won't laugh when he tells her his accumulative average.

Males said they enjoyed dating because they like "playing the role," and "loved to see the fools (females) believe all they are told."

"Women are so glib," was the general consensus. Female said they enjoyed dating because they liked letting their dates think they believed all they were told. They also said they enjoyed "seeing the fools (males) spend their money."

"They're so dumb," was the general consensus.

A surprising result of the survey was that love was not listed as a factor for dating or marriage.

They said one must be cold, independent, cynical, due to losing the one love of his life, calculating, and always bitter as a result of losing that one and only true love.
