Elephant Grass And Profs

Some poor soul really got stuck in the jugular vein. Here is a letter this anonymous bleeder wrote to the faculty.

Dear Faculty,

Congratulations on your ingenious efforts to send me to Viet Nam. With luck you just might succeed. In fact there is very little doubt, I've been . . .

Here it is March 3 and I haven't had a major test. But that will soon come to an end — and how.

YOU SEE this professor in the English department decided some time ago that we would have our first test on Thursday, March 10. That's not too bad. I've kept up fairly well, and with a little time for preparation I might have been able to do well.

But then the German department head heard that the English department was giving a test on Thursday, so they had to give their first test on Wednesday, March 9. Of course they wanted to twist the knife, so we'll have an oral test the same night.

Two tests and an oral all in two days . . . it could have been worse . . . and it was.

There's this nut in the geography department. Well, he figured with all the activity going on that Friday the eleventh would be ideal for our first major geography test about winds, clouds and all that good stuff. He's definitely out to get me — he will.

So, for the past few days I've made feverish preparations in a futile effort to get ready for my "now" three consecutive days of major tests and my oral.

BUT! The political science department, always good for a laugh, figured that next week should bring a lull in free speech rallies. So they decided to try and catch all the "polisci" students who haven't kept up with their reading with a major test on Tuesday the eighth — and they have.

So, it looks like a big weekend and an even bigger week ahead. It's either that or elephant grass and live ammunition. Those professors ought to be sent "over there." They shoot you full of holes better than anyone I know.

Just one request for those dear people who have my number — draft board number that is — please make those tests easy.

It's Nauseating

It's bad enough when Charlotte College has to steal our name and become part of the University of North Carolina.

That was a ridiculous move. But the most nauseating thing that has ever happened involved their new student newspaper The Carolina Journal.

In their edition of Feb. 23 they had the gall to steal our Trivia! They just took questions right out of the DTH and used them without giving the DTH credit. It's preposterous.

State's 'Brain' Not Best

Is Strong wrong? Is the central records chief mistaken when he says NC State's computer has more "brains" than UNC's?

Yep, Ray Strong's wrong, said William Fisher, a programmer in UNC's computation department, in a concerned phone call to The Daily Tar Heel yesterday.

"Our computer," continues Fisher, is 100 times faster than State's. It also has a 15 times greater memory."

"In fact, our Univac 1105 completed the biggest data processing job ever attempted by anyone — the 1960 U.S. census report."

"I don't know why Strong gave you that information. The only thing we do for him on the Univac is the payroll."

Fisher was replying to Strong's statement Tuesday that UNC student's quality point averages broken down into residence groups were not available as soon as State's because they have a better computer.

Contempt Charges Brought Against Seven Klansmen

WASHINGTON (AP)—Seven Southern Klansmen identified as Ku Klux Klan officers were indicted yesterday on charges of contempt of court for refusing to submit Klan records subpoenaed by a House committee.

The seven, including Robert M. Shelton, imperial wizard of the United Klans of America, are expected to be arraigned soon. Prior to trailing U. S. District Court each is charged on one count of contempt and, if convicted, would be subject to a maximum sentence of one year in prison and a $1,000 fine.

The indictments trace to a recently concluded investigation by the House Committee on Un-American Activities during which the seven did not produce subpoenaed Klan records. Some declined to produce them, others said they had none.

They refused also to answer questions most Klan action invoking their constitutional guarantees against self-incrimination but they were not indicted for these refusals to talk.

The contempt citations were shaped by the committee, approved by the House and submitted to the Justice Department which presented the case to the federal grand jury which returned yesterday's indictments.

Charged by the Grand Jury are Shelton, 36, a former tire salesman from Tuscaloosa, Ala.; James R. Jones, 36, Granite Quarry, N. C.; Robert E. Scoggin, 43, Spartanburg, S. C.; Calvin Fred Craig, 37, Atlanta; Marshall R. Kornegoy, 37, Raleigh, N. C.; and George Franklin Dorsett, 48, Greensboro, N. C. In Tuscaloosa, Shelton said the indictment is "just further harassment of the federal bureaucracy" and came as no surprise. He added "when we get into court I'm sure the issues will be quite different."

The indictments are the only concrete legal result thus far of hearings started last autumn and concluded last week. The committee now is considering possible legislation to restrict Klan activities.

With nearly all of the scores of Klansmen — witnesses refusing to answer questions, the investigation record was built largely on reports of committee investigators who dug into Klan activities for months before the hearings began.

But Rep. Joe Pool, D-Tex., said that the inquiry ended that the hearings established that the Klan is made up largely of "sneaky, cowardly men" filled with hatred and bigotry and given to violence.

South Building Target

CFI Begins Picket; Sit-Ins Threatened

By ED FREAKLEY
DTH Staff Writer

Members of the Committee For Free Inquiry will picket South Building today from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. protesting Acting Chancellor J. Carlyle Sitterson's decision denying Frank Wilkinson and Paul Dickson speaking privileges in Carroll Hall Wednesday night. Less than 80 people attended the hour and a half session.

Meeting in the absence of Dickson, who was in Greensboro conferring with lawyers about a prospective court case, the committee voted to picket South Building daily until Communist Herbert Aptheker's scheduled appearance next Wednesday.

The body also voted to stage a sit-in beginning the afternoon Aptheker is to speak, and enter the room before it can be locked. They will sit until they are asked to leave, which they will do without protest.

This action is being taken in hopes of strengthening a possible court case.

The meeting was controlled by the left wing after Bob Keiser a member of the steering committee, took the chair from Richard French who has acted as a moderating influence since the committee was formed.

Dickson who is chairman of the committee and president of the student body, is on record as being opposed to picketing.

After returning from Greensboro, Dickson said "Demonstrations are applicable only when all else fails."

Dickson said he talked with several lawyers yesterday and that their reaction was favorable.

Gary Waller, former vice chairman of SDS, said the picketing and signs should be directed toward Sitterson.

"He has already decided Aptheker cannot speak. By denying Dickson his right to speak the other night Sitterson went beyond what was necessary, purposely," Waller said.

Dean's List Additions

The following students have been added to the Dean's List for the Fall Semester:

Susan Ferebee from Newbern, Ernest Groman from Richmond, Va., Maria Hamilton from Kingston, Spencer McCallie from Chattanooga, Tenn., Sue Nottingham from Norfolk, Va. and Kenneth Sheple from Hyattsville, Md. They are all mathematics majors.

Dave Gullette, one of the founders of CFI, suggested five slogans for the picketers to carry:

1. "Why can't Aptheker come here?"
2. "Why were students locked out of Carroll Hall?"
3. "Why was Paul Dickson, neither a Communist nor a Fifth Amendment pleader, banned from speaking?"
4. "Why are we being treated like children?"
5. "Why is this unconstitutional law being perpetuated

in Chapel Hill?"

About 35 people volunteered to picket. They met after the meeting to discuss picketing plans. Booths will also be set up around South Building to explain the purpose of the picketing.

French said that as of now a possible suit would be based on the inequality of speaking facilities, students being locked out of Carroll Hall, and people being unable to get into the main hall to hear Wilkinson speak Wednesday night.

Letter Says Dickson Refuses Moderation

The following letter was pinned on the bulletin board in the social room of Manning Hall yesterday. A total of 93 signatures had been collected at that time.

At least one law student felt that it was put there by what he termed "a vocal minority."

To The Daily Tar Heel:

"We, the undersigned, wish to express our resentment at the immature and ill-considered actions of the student body President and those other so-called leaders who refuse to exercise the moderation and understanding that is indispensable to effective leadership.

"We deplore the dramatic little incidents which are conceived solely to inject new life into an irrational and emotional controversy. We feel that they serve only to solidify positions and prevent the implementation of a much needed compromise.

"We recognize and fully endorse the right to free speech; we differ however with the means being utilized in an effort to protect this fundamental right. We feel that under the present circumstances the only solution is restraint on the part of those who are in a position of respect. We earnestly request that these so-called leaders consider the fact that they occupy temporary positions at the University, but that the University must exist in a political climate which they in a large part will determine.

"We sincerely hope that those students who feel that the only solution is a "cooling off" period, with restraint and understanding on both sides, will use their influence upon those who would risk the destruction of this University."

Hey Buddy, Want To See A Coed Become A Bunny?

By BOB HARRIS
DTH Staff Writer

What has beauty, bare skin, and sometime sprouts long ears and a fuzzy tail?

A Playboy Playmate, of course. And how can a UNC coed become a Playmate?

First, says a Playmate qualification sheet, she must have beauty, figure, and background in this order of importance.

To prove she has beauty, figure and background, the young hopeful must submit several good photographs of herself in a bathing suit.

These pictures must be in sharp focus and must show her in full length and in close up.

If, after close inspection of the photos, Playmate decides the nymph has beauty, figure and background, she will be required to undergo further photographic sessions for the Playmate calendar and review and for a picture story and lead color review.

Payment upon completion of all photography is $1,500. Additional payment upon publication of the Playmate story is $1,000.

A minimum of $2,500 is additionally guaranteed if the girl is deemed eligible for the Playmate promotion contract, as over 90% of previous Playmates were.

Merchandise gifts are also presented to the Playmate on publication.

"So," says Playboy's assistant picture editor, Bonnie Bovik, "get those photos in."

Several members of The Daily Tar Heel staff have offered to help any interested coed decide which pictures to send. In fact, Ed Freakley has offered to take the photographs. You can't beat that.

Friday To Speak On Freedom

Dr. William C. Friday, President of the Consolidated University, will speak to the Student Forum at the University Baptist Church at 6:45 p.m. Sunday March 6.

Friday's topic will be "Freedom and the University." The University Baptist Church is located on S. Columbia St.

morial Hall 8 p.m. Sunday. Admission will be free and no tickets will be needed.

The cast will make a USO tour of Europe with "Li'l Abner" in one month.

Debaters At Duke

Student debaters from 18 Southeastern colleges and universities, including UNC, will meet today at Duke for two days of arguments concerning effective law enforcement measures.

The debaters will explore the topic "Resolved: That law enforcement agencies in the United States should have greater freedom in the investigation and prosecution of crime."

Theatre Symposium

The Carolina Dramatic Association will be host to a Theatre Arts Symposium for teachers, directors and administrators in North Carolina institutions of higher learning tomorrow.

The Symposium will be held in the faculty lounge of the Morehead Building. It will be divided into a morning session, beginning at 10 a.m., and an afternoon session beginning at 2 p.m.

Mad Hatter's Party

Morehead Residence College and Cobb Residence College are sponsoring a "Mad Hatter's Party" Saturday.

The dance, featuring the Shadows, will be held 8-12 p.m. in the Faculty Club above the Monogram Dining Room. Admission and refreshments will be free. The dance will be open to couples only.

Cobb held a "Mad Hatter's Rendezvous" reception for residents of Morehead Feb. 24 to arrange dates for the dance.

Sports Car Rally

The Piedmont Sports Car Club will hold a "Hare and Hound Rally", Sunday starting at noon at Lakewood Shopping Center on Chapel Hill Road in Durham.

The first first cars will leave the starting point at 1 p.m. Entrance fees will be $3.00 non-members and $2 for PSCC members.

Lederle Faculty Award

Dr. Harold R. Roberts, assistant professor of pathology and medicine at the Carolina School of Medicine, has been selected a recipient of a Lederle Medical Faculty Award.

Lederle awards, valued at up to $10,000 for each of three years, are to promote the abilities of young physicians in the U. S. and Canada.

Planetarium Program

This will be the last weekend presentation of the current program, "Zodiac," at the Morehead Planetarium.
