WUNC HIGHLIGHTS
PHOTOGRAPHY — THE INCISIVE ART — 7 p.m. — "Points of View" Noting that "Photography is a language, capable of expressing many things in many ways," the famous photographer Ansel Adams photographs an old house and its inhabitants from many different perspectives and with many different purposes in mind . . . showing how that particular house might be reflected in the lenses of a tax assessor, a real estate agent, a decorator, a sociologist, an historian, a reporter or a salon photographer.

THE LOWER DEPTHS — 8 p.m. — This critically acclaimed production by the American repertory company, the Association of Producing Artists, presents the best known of Gorky's plays—a powerful account of desperate hunger, poverty, and misery in the bottom level of society in Czarist Russia at the turn of the century.

Her Hair Keeps Changing Color

Will The Real Patti Stand Up?

By PEYTIE FEARRINGTON
 DTH Staff Writer

Those who know Patti Fields have been having a hard time recognizing her lately. Miss Fields, better known as Miss Orange County, has been a brunette, a blonde, a red-head and now a brunette again.

What gives?

Patti, a junior from Chapel Hill, has been working as a model for Georgia Rogers of the Aesthetic Beauty Salon in downtown Chapel Hill.

Last week she and Miss Rogers entered the International Cosmotologist Convention's hair styling competition at the New York Hilton in New York City.

were second runner-up for the Bronze Venus award for style and cut. This prize included a trophy and $150 which was split by them.

What was the winning style? Patti stated, "Two different styles won. For day, a short upsweep that is asymmetrical; for evening, wigslets and false curls. Also red hair was a big thing."

This comment brought up the obvious question of Patti's own hair color. She answered, "Yes, it is really brown, but no it was never meant to be blond. My hair had to be stripped of all color or before it could be rinsed red. I will be very happy when I'm a brunette again."

In preparation for the contest," Patti explained, "the designer spends weeks reading magazines to learn new trends, then made sketches of a new style within the current trend. After this hard work came practice and more practice on my head until the time for combing out was cut to a minimum." Patti was chosen as a model because of her oval face and slightly naturally curly hair.

Patti was first interested in this field when she was a receptionist at the Aesthetic. Miss Rogers was the only winning female entry in the New York contest.

When asked what all the dyeing did to her hair, Patti said, "A lot of girls think this kind of thing really kills your hair, but it doesn't. You have to be more careful how it's treated, but dyed hair can actually be more healthy."

Study Guide

A new correspondence study guide with courses in 35 different fields has just rolled off the press.

The courses listed are available from 62 colleges and universities in the United States.

Among those listed are more than 100 courses from the UNC Extension Division. State lists some 70 courses.

The new guide was edited by Mary E. Henry, head of correspondence instruction here and the University of Mississippi director of correspondence study Vasser Bishop.

Single copies of the booklet are 50 cents each and can be ordered from the National University Extension Association, 122 Social Science Building, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn., 55455.

The entries in this unusual contest come from all over the world. Each state was represented, along with delegates from Italy, France, Austria and Australia.

Patti replied, when asked how she felt as a model, "It's just like racing cars or any other kind of competition; it gets into your blood, and you're gone."
