Markle Scholar Selected

Dr. Frank C. Wilson Jr., assistant professor of orthopedic surgery at the School of Medicine, has been appointed a Markle Scholar in Academic Medicine.

He is one of 25 young medical scientists in the U.S. and Canada selected for the honor by the John and Mary R. Markle Foundation of New York City.

The sum of $30,000 will be paid-$6,000 a year for five years-to the medical school at which the Scholars are faculty

The Markle Foundation funds are used to supplement salaries, to assist in research or to otherwise help the scholar develop as a teacher or investigator.

Wilson's major research interests are in the use of antibiotics for bone and joint infections. He has been successful with a unique orthopedic procedure known as knee arthroplasty, in which a patient's diseased knee joints are complete removed and replaced with artificial metal knee joints.

The Marke Foundation now has selected 11 medical faculty members at UNC as Scholars. Its grants have been made annually since 1948 "to relieve the faculty shortage in medical schools by giving support to young teachers and investigators early in their careers."

"Her room often becomes her means of fighting the impersonality of college life. Kensington residents feel that their entire dorm is a means of destroying this impersonality."

The community spirit abounds at Kensington - each girls seems to feel that she is responsible not only for herself but for her friends who also live in the dorm.

Dean of Women Nora Chaffin said the girls have taken the responsibility that was previously held by floor counselors and house mothers. She said the girls "like the fact that they are running the dorm themselves. The coeds have taken the initiative."

The few rules that do exist are for the benefit and protection of the residents.

Each girl has her own key to the dorm. This is not to keep people in, but to keep people out, according to Dean Chaffin. Guests must leave the dorm by 12 each night, for the con-

School Accepts 70 Out Of 600

The 70 students who will enter the School of Medicine next fall were selected from more than 600 applications.

In his annual report to the UNC Medical Alumni Association here, Dean Isaac M. Taylor said that competition for admission to the medical school increases as the babies born during the post-World War II boom reach medical school

He said that plans are being made to increase the number of new students entering medicine here from 70 to 75 in the fall of 1967.

The UNC medical school now has 279 students, one under a full complement of 280 and probably the largest student body in its history.

2. Any organization with a

"discriminatory clause" in its by-laws or constitution should not be eligible for Student Government funds.

Dickson told the DTH that two Negro students, whom he refused to name, had told him they would protest to the Office of Education in Washington if fraternities and sororities practicing discrimination were permitted to receive Student Government funds.

Dickson said he based his decision refusing Student Government funds to organizations practicing discrimination on the following statement from the U. S. Office of Education,

United States Commissioner of Education Francis Keppel wrote on June 17, 1965:

. . It is apparent that an institution which maintains a fraternity system as a part of its activities and overall program is responsible under the Civil Rights Act requirements for assuring that discrimination is not practiced by the fraternities in the system."

It has been suggested that Congress later overruled this action. Dickson said he is investigating this now.
