Wins And Losses By Barry Jacobs

Phillies Want That Pennant...

The Philadelphia Phillies have served notice that this is the year they intend to win the National League pennant. Sacrificing the future for the present, the Phils traded John Hernstein, 28, Adolfo Philips, 23, and Ferguson Jenkins, 22, to the Chicago Cubs for Larry Jackson, 35, and Bob Buhl, 37. By careful addition, you can see that the total ages of the two players acquired is exactly one year less than the total age of the three that they let go. Youth is apparently not going to be served in Phila'delphia

What Gene Mauch's team got from the trade was two experienced pitchers, a valuable commodity in the heat of a September pennant race. Mauch has not forgotten 1964, when the Phils tried and failed to protect a six-game lead in the final two weeks with basically two pitchers. In Jackson and Buhl, the Phils pick up pitchers who won, at their peaks, 24 recorded his second vicand 18 games respectively.

Neither is likely to win that many again, but they can win a lot less and still help raise the National League flag in the City of Brotherly Love. They join Jim Bunning, Chris Short and Ray Culp to give the Phillies a solid staff of starting pitchers. The trade may come back to haunt Mauch in future of a hitting slump, getting years, especially if Herrnstein ever becomes the solid hitter he has shown signs of being; but if the Phils win this year, it will be worth it.

The National League has started off like its going to be another one of these years. Pittsburgh and San Francisco are playing like they don't plan to lose very many, but nobody is going to play .800 ball forever. When they come back to the league, they'll find the Phillies, Braves, Dodgers and, eventually, the Reds waiting for them. No team has the combination of deep pitching and strong hitting necessary to dominate the league. (Of the Giants' first seven wins, Juan Marichal recorded three, a pace he likely cannot mantain.)

One interesting note: Through Thursday's games, the Dodgers were 6-3. Two of those losses were to Houston in games started by Sandy Koufax and Don Drysdale. The $1 million holdouts are acting like the "before" half of an advertisement for spring training. Had the Dodgers won those two gamesand Koufax virtually owns the Astros - they would have gone into Friday's game tied with the Pirates. Come September, and Walt Alston may need those two victories.

I'm still sticking with the Braves to win the pennant. After slow start, they're starting to play ball. Just wait till Hank Aaron starts hitting!

And So Do The Pirates

Speaking of the Pittsburgh Pirates, Buc owner John Galbreath has already won a National League pennant with the Pirates in 1960 and a Kentucky Derby with Chateaugay in 1963. This year he'd like to win them both again. In addition to having the Pirates on top of the league, Galbreath has the strongest future-book favorite for the Derby in years.

Graustark, an undefeated colt which races for Galbreath's Darby Dan Farm, is currently even money to win the big race. The winner of seven straight, Graustark gets his first distance test in Thursday's Blue Grass Stakes at Keeneland. If he wins that race, he stands to go to the post at Churchill Downs as the shortest-priced favorite in Derby history.

Remember that line to get tickets to the Duke basketball game? A suggestion has been made for a way for some students to avoid such long waits in the future. For a fee of about one dollar a game, a student could purchase a season ticket, guaranteeing him a seat at each game. The tickets would be sold before the season starts for all games in the first semester. A second ticket would be sold after semester break to cover games for the second semester.

Students buying these tickets would not have to stand in line before each game to get a ticket. He would have a guaranteed seat, but he would be paying for the privilege. If you have any feelings about this plan, one way or the other, drop a line either to me at the DTH office or to Business Manager Vernon B. Crook in the Athletic Department in Carmich-

Miss Preuss, who lost to Mrs. Syms in the 1963 finals, then came back to win the tournament the following year, had taken the lead on the fourth hole. She held it until Mrs. Syms squared the match on the 14th hole with a three foot birdie putt after her opponent had followed four bad shots with a 15 foot putt to salvage a par.

relief of starter Bud Cohoon and pitched eight innings of shutout ball, allowing only two hits. He tory against no losses. He lowered his earned run average to a brilliant 1.6.

McLaughlin broke out three hits and four RBI, including the big blow of the game, a three-run homer in the second. McLaughlin's blast, which cleared the fence about 350 feet away in leftcenter, put the Tar Heels in the lead. Maryland never caught up. The homer was the key hit in a four-run rally which overcame a 3-0 Terp

Charlie Thomas and Danny Talbott were other big stickmen for Carolina. Thomas collected a double and two singles, scoring two runs and driving in one. Talbott, whose playing status had been doubtful because of a bad back, lashed a triple and a single, knocking in one run.

Talbott, the second-leading hitter in the ACC, lost one point off his average, but is still hitting a healthy .411. Left fielder Bob Hume also collected two hits for the Tar Heels, a pair of singles. Larry Davis led Maryland nitters with a single and a double. The Terrapin first baseman showed Tar Heel fans that his .341 batting average was for real. Dan Kerns, Maryland's .429 hitter, did not

The Terrapins started the game off as if they intended to extend their winning streak to five games at the expense of Carolina. They rocked Cahoon for three runs and four hits in the first inning. It was clear that the Carolina lefty didn't have his stuff, and Coach Walter Rabb brought in McRae to start the second.

Maryland shortstop Jerry Kremer hit Cahoon's first pitch for a triple to left-center. Mike Long singled Kremer home. Paul Breslow walked, and Davis singled to score Long and send Breslow to third. Tom Bichy drove a fly ball to left to score Breslow and complete the scoring for the inning. As it turned out, that was all the Terrapin scoring for the afternoon. Carolina got all the runs necessary in the bottom of the second. After Charlie Carr and Rodney Thompson grounded out, Thomas drilled a double to left-center. McRae reached first on Kremer's error, Thomas coming in to score. It proved to be a costly miscue, and the Tar Heel took advantage of it to score four unearned runs. Hume singled to center, mov-

Lacrosse Squad Takes On Virginia

By DRUMMOND BELL

DTH Sportswriter Carolina's lacrosse team fresh from a 6-5 win over Washington and Lee, begins its quest for the ACC lacrosse crown on Navy Field at 2:30 today against the Cavaliers of Virginia.

Last year the stickmen lost to Virginia 12-9 at Charlottesits toll on Virginia, and for the first time in many years, the Cavaliers are faced with an unseasoned squad which has yet to win a game.

However, if one goes by comparative scores, the game appears evenly matched since both Carolina and Virginia lost to Yale by three goals.

The offensive punch will be provided by midfielders Dan Howe, Bob Morrison and Pete Williams. Against Washington and Lee Williams led the scoring with three goals and is presently the high scorer on the squad.

At attack will be Tim Balch, ville. However, graduation took | who had two goals in Carolina's first win, Sandy Reider, and Jake Hubbard, who has replaced the injured Jeff Parker.

Others who will most likely see action are mid-fielders Loring Swasey and Clee Edgar and attackman Dick Frank.

Carolina is physically sound and mentally ready to play good lacrosse. Many of the players are seniors who really want to beat Virginia, something a Carolina lacrosse team never has done. This year may be the one since both teams are evenly matched, and the Tar Heels have the advantage of the home field.
