COLUMBIA (AP) — Maryland, paced by double winners Ed Marks, James Lee and Bruce Carson, captured its 12th Atlantic Coast Conference track title with relative ease yesterday.

The defending champions won 10 of the 17 events for 103 team points, 3 1-2 points short of the ACC record. Host South Carolina won five events for runnerup honors with 54 points. North Carolina had 23 points, followed by Duke with 19, North Carolina State with 17, Clemson with 15, Wake Forest with 14 and Virginia with 10.

Bob Taylor, South Carolina's all-purpose runner, was voted the meet's top individual performer. He won the 800-yard run, came in second in the mile and was anchor man on South Carolina's victorious mile relay team.

Three records were broken and two tied.

Rod Stewart of Duke heaved the shot 58 feet, 3 inches to break the old mark of 57-9 1-4 he set last year. Marks' leap of 49 feet, 1 1-4 inches in the triple jump beat the old record of 46-7 1-4, set by Avery Nelson of Clemson in 1964.

Marks also won the broad jump.

Lee's time of 21 seconds for the 220-yard dash was considered a new record for the race run on a curve. The old mark was 21.5, held by several sprinters. The ACC record for the 220 on a straightaway track is 20.1 by Dave Sims of Duke.

Lee also won the 100-yard dash. Running as anchor man on Maryland's 440-yard relay team Lee lost to Fulton Dukes of South Carolina in a photo finish.

However, the slightly built Maryland sprinter was the top individual scorer in the meet with 12 points.

Frank Costello of Maryland tied his own high jump record with a leap of 6 feet, 10 inches.

South Carolina's 440-yard relay team, composed of Duke, Bob Harris, James Wingo and Eddie Sonnenfeld, equalled the meet record of 41.8.

Maryland's Carson won a new event, the 440-yard intermediate hurdles, in a time of 54.3. This was also a track record. Carson also captured the 120 high hurdles.

The summaries: 440 relay — 1. South Carolina Sonnenfeld, Wingo, Harris, and Dukes, 2. Maryland, 3. Virginia, 4. Clemson, 5. North Carolina, 41.8 ties record.

Hamilton Falls In Finals Of Conference Tennis Play

From The Associated Press

Carolina's Gene Hamilton was defeated in the finals of the ACC tennis tournament yesterday by Clemson's Zulfu Rahim, 7-5, 3-6, 6-4. The Tar Heels thus gave up the No. 1 singles crown won by O. H. Parrish last year.

Rain caused postponement of several matches Friday. These contests had to be played yesterday, causing a slowdown in the tournament.

Here are some of the results:

No. 1 Singles
For first place: Zulfu Rahim, Clemson, defeated Gene Hamilton, UNC, 7-5, 3-6, 6-4.

For third place: Jim Stephens, Virginia, defeated Ed Parker, Wake Forest, 6-0, 6-0.

No. 2 Singles
For third place: Tom Long, Clemson, defeated Len Modelzeski, Maryland, 6-1, 4-6, 6-4.

No. 4 Singles
For first place: To Chewing, UNC, defeated Bikran Ornekian, Clemson, 6-2, 6-0.

No. 5 Singles
For first place: Nat West, UNC, defeated Cary Reynolds, Clemson, 6-3, 6-3.

For third place: Tom Merryweather, Maryland, defeated Warwick Butler, Duke, 6-0, 6-2.

No. 1 Doubles
Semifinal championship — Andy Goddard - Bronson Van Wyck, UNC, defeated Jim Stephens - Ranny Wellford, Virginia, 6-2, 6-3.

Semifinals, consolation: Frank Munn - Kay Howard, USC, defeated Bob Wickham - Ed McLean, N. C. State, won by default over Fred Turner - Doug Jones, Duke.

No. 2 Doubles
Semifinal consolation — Steve Parsons - Tom Albert, Wake Forest, defeated Ken Tourman - Jim Fisher, N. C. State, 4-6, 6-4, 6-4. Ned Burke - Al Cox, USC, defeated Richard Harrington - Frank Kready, Maryland, 6-4, 6-3.

Baldwin, Carolina Defend ACC Golf Crowns Today

SOUTHERN PINES, N. C. (AP) — John Baldwin of North Carolina defends his individual title and he and his Tar Heel mates seek to retain the team crown in the Atlantic Coast Conference Golf Tournament opening tomorrow.

The 36-hole, two-day competition will be over the Country Club of North Carolina course, a demanding 7,000-yard, par 72 layout.

Each of the eight ACC schools will be represented by seven players. The low five scores are figured in team competition.

Duke, Wake Forest & Maryland are rated North Carolina's top challengers in the team competition.

George McRae: Carolina's Bullpen Ace

By BILL ROLLINS
DTH Sports Writer

It was early in the spring, Carolina had played four baseball games, and Coach Walter Rabb was still experimenting with his pitching staff.

But George McRae, a strapping 6-3, 205-pound sophomore right-hander, had pitched to nary a batter in game competition.

It was a pretty dismal time for George, but he could still smile and crack a joke.

One day he was kicking around with Danny Talbott, and when the talk got around to pitching, George cracked, "Danny, if he (Rabb) ever puts me in a game, I want you to show me where the mound is."

Around to pitching, George cracked, "Danny, if he (Rabb) ever puts me in a game, I want you to show me where the mound is."

They both laughed. But three weeks later, after McRae had made his fifth relief appearance and blanked Maryland on two hits over eight innings for his second win, Talbott shook George's hand and said:

"Hey, it looks like you've found that mound pretty good now!"

And this time they both smiled.

Because by then, the whole team knew that if a starting pitcher ever faltered, George would be there to pick them up.

And when Rabb has needed relief for his starters, his cry of "let George do it," has not been one of dismay, but one of confidence, and all has gone well.

Except once. That was when McRae worked two innings against Connecticut during spring break and was pounded for a home run, double and single while yielding three earned runs.

But that bleak day against the Uconn marked the start of something big for George and the Tar Heels. Because since then, this big, ruddy, complexioned guy they call "Swamp Fox" has simply stopped letting opponents score when he's in the game.

Almost. N. C. State did manage to score once against him, but it took the help of two UNC errors. And that unarmored run is the only one McRae has allowed since Connecticut.

Seven games, 23 innings, no earned runs.

Another interesting statistic is the .157 batting average to which he has limited opposing batters. The UNC staff's mark is a sparkling .204.

Figured in Rabb's Plans At the beginning of the season, George didn't figure that he'd be very prominent in the pitching picture, but Coach Rabb had a different view.

"George had shown a lot of promise as a freshman, and we were fairly certain he could help us win some ball games. Yes, we had planned to give him a very good look."

Rabb looked closely, liked what he saw, and this is what he said of his relief ace one day last week:

"George has a good, sinking fast ball and just an average curve. But what makes him impressive is that he can come into a game in any situation and throw strikes, with plenty on the ball."

"He has a lot of poise, even more 'guts,' and he stands his ground and challenges every batter — keeps 'em loose and usually makes them hit his pitch."

McRae, who averaged 15-18 strikeouts per game for Riegelwood's Acme-DeLo High (near Wilmington), credits UNC graduate assistant coach Bill Haywood with developing what is now his best pitch.

"Haywood showed me how to grip the ball to make it sink," George revealed, "and Since developing a virtual mastery of the opposition, George has lowered his earned-run-average to an ACC-leading 1.00 and upped his record to 4-0, good enough to tie for the conference lead in winning percentage.

It is no coincidence that Carolina won 10 straight games and annexed the ACC championship during McRae's stretch of brilliance. Rather, as one observer noted, the big soph has been the "soul and heart's inspiration" of the pennant drive.

Heart of Drive That winning string started April 19, when George finished Danny Walker's 8-1 conquest of Duke with three innings of one-hit pitching. And the conference crown was clinched when he worked three perfect innings in relief of Beattie Leonard to get the 2-1 win over Virginia.

In between those two performances was his eight-inning, two-hit stint against Maryland, which George insists is "the best pitching I've ever done."

He has worked in seven of the 10 games in the win skein, gotten credit for the victory in three, and recorded the equivalent of a major league "save" when he stopped a Clemson rally when the tying run at the plate in the 5-3 UNC win at Death Valley.

within a week or so I gained control of the pitch. It was the first time anyone had ever tried to show me something new, and now the sinking fast ball is my most effective pitch.

Shaw Provides Assist "Really," he continued, "I guess John Shaw (catcher) has been about as big a factor in my success this year as I have been myself. John lets you know he has complete confidence in your ability, and when he calls a pitch, you know he feels that you can throw it for a strike — and he expects it. I never shake off a sign any more, and if I put the ball where John places his mitt, we'll stay out of trouble."

Likes Pressure How does George feel about his non-starting status? "I like to work under pressure," he says, "because it makes me bear down more. It's good to relieve as long as I can see action pretty regularly. I almost wasted away about a month ago when we got five straight complete games from our starters, but when the team's going good like that, it makes 'just warming up' a lot easier. Like any other pitcher, I want all the work I can get."
