Dr. Wright Receives First Teaching Excellence Award

Dr. Charles D. Wright, assistant professor of English, has been named the first recipient of the Excellence in Teaching Award.

The award, established this year to be presented annually as the highest honor a faculty member can receive from the student body, carries with it a check for $1,000.

Dr. Wright was selected from a list of nominees by the six-member Excellence in Teaching Commission of Student Government because, in their opinion, he best demonstrated "excellence in teaching and a willingness in assisting individual students in the academic and intellectual search outside the classroom."

Charles McFadden, chairman of the commission, said

Dr. Charles D. Wright this award is a way of "showing our appreciation to those men who are both competent teachers and are interested in students, their problems and activities."

Dr. Wright, who teaches Victorian literature, modern English and American poetry and creative writing received his A.B. degree in English from Wayne University, Detroit, Mich., in 1953. He was awarded his M.A. degree from the University of Wisconsin in 1954 and his Ph.D. from the University of Iowa in 1961.

Between 1954 to 1960 he served in the U. S. Army in Alaska and studied German literature and political science at Tubingen University in Germany.

His poetry has been published in Harpers, Saturday Review, Kenyon Review.
