Morehead Awards Hiked

As a result of increases in room rent, book and laundry fees, and food prices at UNC, trustees of the John Motley Morehead Foundation have upped the value of annual Morehead Awards by more than 20 per cent.

The Morehead Awards, previously valued at $5,800 over a four-year period for in-state students, will be worth $7,000 beginning this fall.

According to Roy Armstrong, executive secretary of the Foundation, the increase "reflects the rising costs of college necessities." He explained that Mr. Morehead intended for the annual awards to pay for each recipient's entire academic expenses, including room, books, fees and food. In addition, each student is allowed $50 a month for incidentals.

More than 500 Morehead Awards have been given since the program was instituted at UNC. Armstrong said there will be a record number of 225 Morehead scholars and fellows in residence at Chapel Hill this fall, including 72 new undergraduate scholars. There will be nine graduate and professional fellows.

New Instruments

A quarter of a million dollars worth of new instrumentation will be installed in the Morehead Planetarium with funds granted by the board of trustees of the Morehead Foundation.

Hugh G. Chatham, vice-chairman of the board, announced the gift after the trustees' study of the presentation of the new instrument and additions by A. F. Jenzano, planetarium director.

The order has been placed with the firm of Carl Zeiss in West Germany for the first in a new Model VI series of a highly improved Planetarium Instrument. Nearly $20,000 worth of modern accessory instruments will also be installed.

The new planetarium instrument prototype was demonstrated for the first time to planetarium directors from all over the world at a recent visit to the Zeiss factory in Oberkochen.

Jenzano said that "In decades to come, the new instruments will assure infinitely greater academic and aesthetic benefits to millions of people in all walks of life."

Morrow Speaks

A UNC chemistry professor spoke in Moscow yesterday at the tri-yearly International Congress of Crystallography.

Dr. J. C. Morrow, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, was invited by the Soviet Academy of Science.

He presented a research paper entitled "The Crystal Structure of Trisacetylacetonatorhodium (III)."

Dental Courses

Twenty-five teachers of dental assisting from 13 states began an intensive four-week training institute at the UNC School of Dentistry Monday. The Summer Vocational Training Teacher Institute for Dental Assisting is sponsored by the Office of Education, U. S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare.
