

Moore Takes Firm Stand Against KKK; Orders Investigation Of Raleigh Incident

Gov. Dan Moore revealed Monday night he has ordered an investigation by the State Bureau of Investigation of an incident at a Ku Klux Klan rally Sunday night in Raleigh.

Moore made the statement during the first of a series of weekly news conferences staged by the University's educational television station, WUNC-TV. The chief executive said he had asked for a complete report on Klan guards who removed a white crippled youth from the State Capitol grounds during a rally.

"This indicates very clearly the character of the Klan," Moore said. "The idea of grown men moving a crippled boy is depriving him of the exact rights that they had in staging the rally."

Asked about the report issued by Dr. James Wallace on the low scores by Negro graduates on teacher examinations, Moore said he believed the statistics clearly indicated a neglect and discrimination against the Negro colleges.

"The problem is being given a lot of study," Moore said. He also said that he believed the efforts of the state to upgrade the quality of Negro colleges will ultimately lead to the extinction of the strictly Negro colleges as they now exist.

Moore as asked questions concerning proposed university status for East Carolina College, the dispute raised by municipally owned electrical systems and the changes in the structure of the trustees for the University of North Carolina. He declined comment until studies on all three subjects are completed.

Malcolm Seawell, the Chapel Hillian who recently resigned as head of Moore's Law and Order Committee, will be the next guest on North Carolina New Conference. Seawell's appearance will be broadcast live Monday at 7 p.m. and rebroadcast Tuesday at 11 a.m.

Appointments Announced By Chancellor Sitterson

Chancellor J. Carlyle Sitterson announced two major University appointments this week.

One will move zoology professor Dr. Claiborne S. Jones into the recently created position as assistant to the chancellor. The other will put Kenan Professor of English Dr. C. Hugh Holman into another new post, university provost.

Both will assume their duties immediately.

"Dr. Jones has an exceptionally broad grasp and detailed knowledge of University policies, procedures, and problems," Chancellor Sitterson said, "and I am gratified that this important new position is to be filled by a faculty member with his wide range of qualifications."

Jones joined the UNC faculty in 1944. As associate dean of the general college from 1955 to 1965, he was responsible for administration of freshman and sophomore academic programs. Since July of 1965 he has been assistant vice chancellor for academic affairs.

The zoology professor is a native of Petersburg, Va., where he graduated from high school in 1932. He later received the A. B. degree (summa cum laude) at Hampden-Sydney College.

Holman will have administrative responsibility for policy and operations relating to all academic aspects of the University, except for graduate programs, professional programs in the health sciences.

Chancellor Sitterson said, "I am extremely glad that Dr. Holman has accepted this key position in the University. His scholarship, administrative background, good judgment, academic experience, and human understanding fit him especially for the vital tasks of leadership in this crucial assignment. This appointment makes it necessary for Dr. Holman to postpone the research and writing in American literature which he had planned for next year under a Guggenheim Foundation grant, and, in view of this, I am all the more grateful that he has agreed to accept these important administrative responsibilities at this time."

Holman is former dean of the Graduate School and has served as acting dean of the College of Arts and Sciences and as chairman of the Department of English. A native of Cross Anchor, S. C., Dr. Holman has been a member of the faculty since 1946, received the Ph.D. degree here in 1949, and was elected to membership in Phi Beta Kappa.
