Lab Checks Knife In Evans Murder

By ERNEST H. ROBL
DTH News Editor

Chapel Hill Police were waiting Monday for a laboratory analysis of stains on a cheap butcher knife found by a student, hoping they would provide a new lead in the still unsolved fatal stabbing of a 21-year-old coed one year ago.

On July 30, 1965, Suellen Evans who had been attending the second summer session at the University was walking through the Coker Arboretum. About half way through the botanical garden, someone plunged a "sharp-bladed instrument" into her heart.

Neither the killer nor the murder weapon were found in an intense search that followed the daylight stabbing.

Outlook Bleak

Until last week police had all but given up hope of ever solving the murder. It was then that a student home for the summer found a knife under the spare tire of his car.

The knife, about half of its 10-inch blade appearing to be stained with blood, turned up in Bethesda, Md., and was immediately forwarded to Chapel Hill.

The student, whom police declined to identify, said that his car had been parked near the Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity house on Franklin Street on the day of the murder one year ago.

He said that he had not had occasion to take out the spare tire since that time.

The State Bureau of Investigation Crime Lab in Raleigh began examining the knife Monday morning, attempting to determine if the stains on the knife were human blood and if this blood matched the type of the murdered coed.

Hair on Knife

According to Chapel Hill Police Chief W. D. Blake, the knife also had some hair adhering to it, which the lab will attempt to match with the coed's.

Should both tests give positive results, the SBI will attempt to get fingerprints from the suspected weapon. Blake said that "under ideal conditions" latent fingerprints could be detected even after a period of more than one year.

The discovery of the suspected knife is only the latest that town police and SBI agents have investigated.

Blake said that police have been working on the assumption that the motive for the murder was rape.

The attack took place about 12:30 p.m. on a hot, clear day. Before an ambulance could arrive at the scene, Miss Evans collapsed and died.

"He tried to rape me I believe I'm going to faint." were the only words she could mutter before collapsing in the arms of two coeds and two nuns who had rushed to the scene in response to screams.

No Witnesses

There had been no witness to the stabbing, though one of those arriving on the scene seconds later reported seeing "a dark arm" disappear behind some bushes.

"She put up quite a fight and probably pulled some of the hair we found out of the attacker's head," Blake reported. Lab reports indicated that the hair found at the scene was Negroid.

The arboretum path which had been raked only an hour before showed signs of a fierce struggle and gave police the impression of one large and distinct footprint.

A foot-by-foot search of the arboretum by about 200 student volunteers working under the supervision of police failed to yield any trace of the murder weapon or other clues.

Chapel Hill police continued to work on the case, questioning suspects, tracing leads, but always running into dead ends.

100 Questioned

Some 100 persons were questioned in connection with the case, and Chapel Hill Police have put more than 900 hours of overtime into the case.

Blake says the case "will not be closed until it's solved." If tests eliminate the knife, the police will continue looking for other leads.

Dedication Urged For New Students

By STEVE BENNETT
DTH Staff Writer

J. Carlyle Sitterson, in his first address to entering students since he became chancellor last spring, said Saturday night, "Dedication and perseverance without unusual academic ability are far more important to you, the university and society than is unusual academic ability without dedication and perseverance."

Speaking before a crowd of 3,000 freshmen men and women and orientation counselors in Carmichael Auditorium, Sitterson departed from a prepared text and themes of freedom and responsibility for entering students.

"In the academic world you will be required to study certain things, but even in this area you will have more freedom than you have ever had before," Sitterson said. He told them their "first responsibility is to meet the academic demands of the University and then to live up to the expectations of their parents."

Sitterson pointed out that last year's freshman class had only five per cent that were academically ineligible to return at the end of the year compared with 14 per cent that were not eligible in the class that entered in 1962. "I challenge you to surpass the academic record set last year by the freshman class by reducing the percentage of ineligible students to less than the present low of five per cent," Sitterson said.

Blazer Fittings Start Today

Fittings for the traditional UNC Blazer are scheduled today at Chase Cafeteria and tomorrow in Graham Memorial.

This year there is a new addition to the family of blazers which is available through the Society of Janus.

It is a tropical blazer—a light-weight blazer in navy. Blazers are made by the Robert Rollins Co. and feature the Carolina crest inlaid on the pocket. An extra pocket is provided for after college wear.

The blazer is 100 per cent virgin wool and the fabric is pre-shrunk, except tropicals. The lining is of rayon twill. Sizes are "proportioned to fit" in shorts, mediums and longs.

A $5 deposit is required with each blazer ordered.

Any student may be fitted, regardless of whether he mailed a deposit to the blazer committee in the summer or not. Chairman is Dwight Thomas Jr.

Sitterson said that the attitude of today's freshman determines what he derives from his association with the University.

He said, "You will make a grave mistake if you do not take the advantages to develop outside the classroom, lab, and library in addition to your academic development."

Also speaking to the freshmen was the Dean of Student Affairs C. O. Cathey who said, "The University is dynamic and always on the move offering you a new type of freedom that will instill responsibility in you."

He told them that while they are students here they must ask themselves why they are here and what they are going to do with their lives.

"If you are here only to get credentials to aid in securing a job in later years, you are going to miss out on much of the valuable education that is offered here," Cathey said.

"There are almost 3,000 of you—more than the entire student body of the University when I entered, Cathey said. "Here you will come into contact with students of every class, race, color and creed and will combine with them to become part of a great heterogeneous student body."

Enrollment Reaches 13,250 As Academic Year Begins

A record number of students, new administrators and new faculty will begin the academic year Thursday, Sept. 15, at the University of North Carolina.

Freshmen and transfer students arrived on campus Friday, Sept. 9, for a week-long orientation program. A total of 13,250 students are enrolled for fall semester classes.

Beginning his first academic year in the top administrative post on campus will be Chancellor J. Carlyle Sitterson, a native of Kinston. Dr. Sitterson was named to the post in May, succeeding Dr. Paul F. Sharp.

Also assuming new administrative roles will be the recently named provost, Dr. D. Hugh Holman, along with the assistant to the chancellor, Dr. Claiborne S. Jones.

A chemist, and a Kansas pediatrician, will also step into administrative posts this fall. Dr. John Charles Morrow, a specialist in physical chemistry, will take over a "dual deanship" as Dean of the General College and Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences. Dr. C. Arden Miller, former dean of the Medical School at the University of Kansas, will become Vice Chancellor for Health Sciences.

There will be from 75 to 100 new faculty members this fall—the largest number of recruits in the history of UNC. With the aid of Kenan funds, including the recent five million dollar bequest from the William Kenan Charitable Trust Fund, the University will seek additional outstanding faculty members during the year.

Last fall, UNC opened its doors to women students for four years of undergraduate study for the first time. This policy has led to some increase in coed enrollment. Around 3,000 women, including those enrolled in graduate and professional programs, are expected this fall.

There will be a noticeable rise in graduate and professional enrollments this fall. For example, there will be a record number of 500 law students.

A record number of 216 Morehead Scholars will be studying on campus this year, including 72 new freshmen scholars. In addition, for the first time, there will be nine Morehead Fellows—three each in graduate school, in law and in medicine.

A new program in mathematical statistics for undergraduates will be instituted this fall. The University's MBA (Masters in Business Administration) program has been expanded into a two-year course of study, with 50 students scheduled to enter the program this fall.

Three faculty members will begin their first full year as deans in the University. They are Dr. Carl Wilson Anderson, School of Social Work; Dr. Norton Lewis Beach, School of Education; and Dr. James W. Bawden, School of Dentistry.

Approximately a dozen departments in the University will have new chairmen, several of whom will be returning from leaves of absence for the past year.

Three major construction projects are scheduled for completion next year. These include alterations and addi-

Freshman Class Smarter With Greater Capabilities

By STEVE BENNETT
DTH Staff Writer

This year's freshman class of approximately 2,300 students is the most intelligent class ever to enter the University according to Director of Admissions Charles Bernard.

The average College Board score is 1160, which is 20 points higher than the average score of last year's freshman class. The secondary school record of the new freshmen is also better than last year's record of 52 per cent from the top fourth of the graduating classes and 90 per cent from the top half.

No freshmen were admitted this year with a predicted grade average of below 1.6. The average is determined through a compiling of the high school or prep school record and the College Board score with more emphasis placed on the record.

The 15 per cent of the freshmen that were admitted from out of state come mostly from Florida, Georgia, Maryland, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, and Virginia.

Bernard said, "Our Department of Admissions processed more than 8,500 applications for admission this year and accepted 3,825 students to fill the 2,300 vacancies in the freshman class."

The ratio of the number of women to men in the freshman class has increased this year due to the raising of the number of freshman women from 336 to 500 and lowering the number of freshman men from 1969 to 1800.

The limit for transfer students this year was set at 500 with most of them being junior transfers. Only a few sophomore transfers were admitted and many of them are entering the four-year course in the School of Pharmacy.

The increase in the number of freshman women has brought about the administration decision to allow undergraduate women to room in Granville Hall this year.

Dean of Women Katherine Carmichael said that this year marks the first time in the history of the University that undergraduate women have been allowed to live in privately-owned housing off campus.

"The owners and operators of Granville Hall have been most cooperative with us in fulfilling every request possible that we have made of them," Dean Carmichael said.

The owners of the residence hall are employing advisors for the girls that have been approved by the office of the dean of women. The women are being grouped on different floors according to their class and will be subject to the same rules as all the other coeds. No one other than fully-enrolled students are permitted to live there.

Every year for the past six years the caliber of the students in the freshman class has improved to the point that the University compares with the ratings of the top schools in the country.

No Frosh 'Cycles Among New Rules

By STEVE BENNETT
DTH Staff Writer

Campus parking regulations for this year outlaw the use of motor scooters for freshmen, limit C parking to the Bell Tower and Ram's Head Cots, and outlaw back-up parking in angle or 90 degree spaces.

Even though freshmen now are not allowed to operate any motor vehicle in or around Chapel Hill, the restrictions on parking for upper-classmen has remained the same. Sophomores, juniors and seniors must have a C-grade average.

Students who live more than 20-minute walking distance from the campus may obtain last year, they will not be able to park in all student parking spaces.

Bob Kepner, assistant to the dean of men, said, "This year cars may not back into

GM Opens New Season With Serendipity Singers

The Serendipity Singers—with two good-looking babes and seven not-so-handsome gentlemen—will get this year's Graham Memorial Concert series off to a big start tomorrow night in Carmichael Auditorium.

The performances is the first of 13 which Graham Memorial has already contracted, and GM Director Howard Henry says negotiations are in progress for several additional shows.

In addition, there is the Spring Weekend Extravaganza called Jubilee. Set this year for April 28, 29 and 30, it will feature concerts and parties for the entire campus. Performers are not usually announced until the beginning of the spring semester.

Tomorrow night's concert by the Serendipity Singers is free to Carolina students. All that is necessary to be admitted is to show up at Carmichael for the 8 p.m. beginning.

For the Serendipity Singers, it will be the third appearance on the Carolina campus. They were here for the 1964 Jubilee and returned for a Memorial Hall show in April, 1965.

However, this is not exactly the same group which appeared earlier. They still sing and play, but the singers and players have changed.

GM already has scheduled 12 other groups to follow the Serendipity Singers.

On Oct. 1, The Four Trops will perform in Carmichael. Then, the scene of the action will move to Memorial Hall for a Nov. 10 performance of the Robert Joffe Ballet.

Next, back in Carmichael, The Four Seasons present a concert on Nov. 18.

Following that show, the schedule now calls for three Memorial Hall concerts. They are Fiesta Mexicana on Nov. 28, Ustad Ali Akbar Khan, N. Indian Music, on Nov. 30 and the Paris Chamber Orchestra on Feb. 1.

On Feb. 9, the Dukes of Dixieland play in Carmichael. The National Ballet is set for Feb. 18 in Memorial. Fred Waring is scheduled for Feb. 27, but where he will perform is to be decided later.

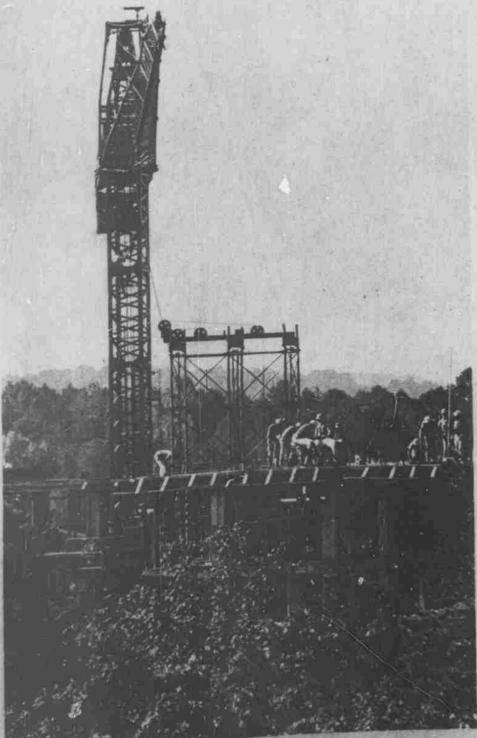

The final two performances before Jubilee are both in Memorial. They are Beverly Wolff on March 8 and Buffalo Philharmonic Orchestra on April 13.

The date for a show by The Uncalled For Three is still being negotiated.

Other performances will be announced as contracts are completed.
