School Closes In Oakland After Nighttime Disorders

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Rioting Negro youths assaulted five teachers and forced closure of a high school today in a resumption of last night's disorders in East Oakland.

One teacher's nose was bloodied and his eye blackened in the melee at Castlemont High School. The assaults occurred on the grounds during a gathering of 200 Negroes.

School officials decided on the shutdown shortly after noon.

The disorders began last night in East Oakland and spread downtown after a traffic accident involving a Negro woman's car. Police arrested a young Negro woman passer-by after they said she flew into a rage. Her brother intervened and was arrested. The disorders grew and spread.

Five persons were injured; 19 were arrested; and 47 business firms were damaged.

The start today of a three-day high school boycott, called by a group protesting the quality of education for Negroes, also kept police on the alert.

School officials said a preliminary spot check indicated absenteeism of about 20 percent against a normal 10 percent.

A group calling itself the Ad Hoc Committee had urged both students and teachers to stay away to attend four "freedom schools."

The group claimed about 700 students were in the first classes today held in churches and a night club. A call to the night club brought a gasp, "oh, I forgot to unlock the doors."

District Attorney Frank Coakley issued a warning that any teachers absent from regular classes to take part in such schools might face prosecution on charges of contributing to the delinquency of minors. The office of the superintendent of schools had no word on any teacher absences.

Across the bay in San Francisco, off-duty firemen, together with some representatives of the teamsters and bartenders unions, staged a rally today at city hall stemming from Negro rioting last month in that city's Hunters Point area.

The rally was to protest treatment of policemen and firemen.

Mademoiselle To Sponsor Coed Career Talks Friday

Coeds interested in careers in magazine writing are invited to meet Mrs. Jacqueline Henderson, Mademoiselle's editor of college board competition at an informal open house in Gerrard Hall 10:30-12:30 p.m. Friday.

Mrs. Henderson and Ann Jamieson, campus marketing agent at UNC for Mademoiselle, will talk to women about possible careers with Conde Nast publications and advise coeds planning to enter this fall's Mademoiselle college board competition.

Each year 20 young women are selected from college board competition to edit

Mademoiselle's fall fashion issue. Entrants are judged on talent in writing, editing, art, photography, research layout, fashion display, promotion, merchandising or advertising.

Any work by contestants printed in the magazine is bought at regular rates, and runners-up are considered for permanent jobs with Conde Nast.

According to Miss Jamieson, any undergraduate woman working toward a degree who will not graduate before April 1967 is eligible. She said other contest details will be available at the open house Friday.

South Campus Show Tickets Still Remain For Weekend

The Ojays

Plenty of tickets still remain for South Campus Weekend which is sponsoring the three big-name groups that will appear in Chase Hall Saturday night.

The groups, including Maurice and the Zodiacs, Dr. Feelgood and the Interns, and the O.J.'s will be appearing from 8 p.m. to 1 a.m.

The special entertainment is being sponsored by the South Campus residence halls, Morrison, Craig, Scott and Ehringhaus.

The cost of the entire evening of entertainment is $2 for residents of the sponsoring colleges and $2.50 to all other students. Tickets at the door will be $3 per couple.

The three groups are all being scheduled so that they will appear after the Mama's and Papa's have finished their concert in Carmichael.

Tickets are being sold in Y-Court and Chase Cafeteria. They will also be sold Saturday morning in the lobby of Craig.

Nov. 3 — Chatham County Schools, Pittsboro, 1-4:30.
Prospective teachers who will be available for employment in January especially are invited to sign up now in Room 103, Peabody Hall, Teacher Placement Bureau.

Angel Flight Rushes

The UNC Angel Flight's fall rush will begin today. A tea will be held for all interested coeds in the AFROTC Cadet Lounge in Caldwell Annex from 7-8 p.m.

The Angel Flight is a national organization of coeds who serve as hostesses to the AFROTC cadets and is sponsored by the Arnold Air Society, an honorary AFROTC organization. The Angel Flight is not a military organization. An alternate tea will be given Sunday, Oct. 23, for those who cannot attend today. All coeds are invited.

Poetry Forum Meets

The fourth meeting of the UNC Poetry Forum will be held today in 103 Bingham.

The first three meetings were unqualified successes. The Forum was so crowded last time that people stood in the halls to hear the poets.

Readings at today's meeting will be made by Lucius Shepard, Dave Southern, Marshall Hay, and Ray Kass.

Trustee Switch

By PETER HARRIS
DTH Staff Writer

A proposal which would increase the rotation of the executive committee of the Board of Trustees will be presented at their meeting Monday morning.

The proposal calls for an increase in the number of members of the executive committee from twelve to fifteen. It also proposes that no member may serve for more than two consecutive terms.

The proposal is an attempt to combat the charges that only twelve trustees make the decisions for the entire board. The proposal will be made by Wade Barber, a Pittsboro attorney.

Barber said that this would not affect the University other than increase the rotation of the officers.

The proposal cannot be acted upon until January, because the code governing the trustees states that there must be at least a ten-day period between the time of the proposal and the period of enactment. Since the board does not meet again until January, Barber said, "the proposal will not be acted on until then."

Barber said that the executive committee needs to be increased in size because of the growing jobs it deals with, and because there are more sub-committees today than there were in the past.

If the proposal passes, a member of the executive committee who has served for two consecutive terms will not be eligible for re-election until one year after his second term expires.

Ousting Causes Concern

Instructor Removal Subject Of Meeting

By BILL AMLONG
DTH News Editor

A meeting to discuss graduate instructor Michael Paul's removal from teaching has been called for 8 p.m. tonight in Gerrard Hall.

Paul, however, won't be there, he told the DTH Wednesday.

"I don't plan to go to any meeting at all," he said, declining to comment on whether he objected to the meeting's being held.

The meeting was called by Stu Matthews, a 20-year senior who said he is acting independently of any group.

He said, however, that he expects the meeting to be attended by members of the Committee For Free Inquiry which was active during last year's speaker ban controversy.

"The issue is not only that Mr. Paul has lost his job," Matthews said, "but that people in similar positions are open to the same kind of statewide WRAL pressure."

Among the speakers at no-said, will be Russell Whitaker, a member of Paul's class. "This is the beginning of what I would say is going to be a pretty large - scale discussion of events."

Paul was reassigned from his job as Freshman English instructor Tuesday after a theme assignment he made on the poem "To His Coy Mistress" drew fire.

WRAL - TV reported during its Monday night broadcast that Paul had assigned his students to write a theme detailing a seduction.

Paul said, though, that he had merely assigned the class to paraphrase the poem by the 17th century English poet Andrew Marvell.

Chancellor J. Carlyle Sit Tuesday, saying that an investigation into the matter revealed that "apparently the class misinterpreted the assignment with the results that have developed."

"In our opinion," the statement read, "the normal teacher - student learning relationship has been seriously disturbed by these events, with the result that it appears that a reassignment of Mr. Paul to other departmental duties class would be in the best interests of the educational function of the University."

Dr. Raymond Adams, chairman of the English department, said Wednesday that Paul, a 24-year-old Ph.D. candidate and editor of the Carolina Quarterly, has been given a research assistantship.

Meanwhile, Student Body President Bob Powell said the action by the University "disturbs me a great deal, especially since the official University statement on the matter left many questions unanswered."

"I have not yet had an opportunity to speak with the Chancellor or His Provost about the matter, but I will meet them today," Powell said.

Powell said he will attend the meeting tonight.

Coming For Cotton Maid

Interviews will be held on campus next Wednesday for any coeds interested in being a contestant for the 1967 Maid of Cotton.

If selected as a finalist, the girl and her chaperon will receive a trip to the final contest to be held in Memphis, Tennessee December 27-28.

The girl selected as Maid of Cotton will represent the cotton industry and its products and will travel throughout the United States and around the world to stimulate interest in cotton.

At the end of her six-month tour she will return with a beautiful cotton wardrobe, a new car, a many wonderful memories.

She will be entertained by scores of dignitaries, hold press conferences, appear on radio and television and model in fashion shows.

She will wear a wardrobe of cottons created for her by famous designers.

The interviews next Wednesday will be held in the Grail Room in Graham Memorial between 10 a.m. and 12 p.m.

A few of the requirements are that an entrant be between the ages of 19 and 23, be born in a cotton-producing state, be photogenic, be at least 5 feet, 5 inches tall, and be willing to make an international tour beginning early in January and lasting until August.

Any interested girls can obtain more information from the Office of the Dean of Women.

My Best Friend's Baby Was Me...

By BOB HOPE

There was a great deal of excitement at the little house next door to the Barretts of Wimpole Street. My best friend was having a baby. Me. I was born in London and both London and my father were very foggy that night. I was so foggy I could hardly see the doctor before my face. I looked from one side to the other for a while, not knowing quite what to do. That was the first time I was ever born.

They named me Lester Townes Hope and at the time I didn't care one way or the other. But when I grew up I began to care and it wasn't one way—it was the other. So I changed it.

It was just great performing for the U.S. State Department in Moscow. The Muscovites let me creep under the Iron Curtain by the way of the so-called "Cultural Exchange." Here's how it works—we send over "Porgy and Bess" and they send the Moscow Ballet. I went in exchange for Mike Romanoff and four cans of caviar.

Hope In Action - Steady Jane

The Russian language is very guttural. I cleared my throat in a restaurant one day and the waitress slapped my face. Those Russian bubushkas are really big and strong. One morning the maid made up my bed with me in it. Anyhow, I found it very interesting over there. Before my visit all I knew about Russia was what I read on a Smirnoff label. But I wised up quick, and soon after, I got thrown out of the Kremlin. There was a star on the door and I thought it was my dressing room.

This is my fifteenth year on the network for N.B.C. (nothing but commercials). How well I remember the early days of radio. . . ah, radio—that television without the eye strain.

Of course being a comedian was a lot easier in those days. We weren't getting all that competition from Congress and it was a cinch to get laughs—all you had to do was to call up your sponsor and mention money.

Through the years I have told a lot of jokes on radio. . . really, I don't know exactly how many but I can always check with Milton Berle.

People watching television are very discriminating—they sit there with their fingers on the tuning knob and if they don't like you they simply switch to another channel. I heard of one guy who switched channels so fast he saw Hopalong Cassidy riding a can of Ajax Cleanser. And I suppose you readers know that television has brought a lot of things into the home—sporting events. . . operas. . . plays. . . movies. . . repair men.
