Would you believe that four years ago, 6'9" Bill Bunting was only six feet tall?

"I was just barely six feet tall," said Bill recently, "when I started playing ball in high school. I had first started playing basketball in the midget leagues back home (New Bern, N. C.); but I didn't really have a height advantage until I got to high school, and then I really did some growing.

"I just can't believe that I'm playing on a nationally ranked team my sophomore year in college," he continued. "I guess that's why I came to Carolina. I knew that they had some real fine players lined up for the future and felt that with the players they had coming up, plus the ones they already had, that before I graduated there was going to be a nationally ranked team here."

Bill said that the team has real high hopes for the rest of the season. "Our long range goal right now is to get ready for the tournament. The whole team believes that if we can finish with four real good games that this would give us the momentum to get through the tournament.

"The tournament is really going to be tough as proved by the type of ball played night after night by the eight teams in the conference," he added. "The Atlantic Coast Conference has to be one of the toughest basketball conferences in the country. On any given night, any team is capable of beating any other team. I believe that the biggest rivalry in the conference is found in the big four. Anytime any of these teams (Carolina, Duke, N. C. State, or Wake Forest) get together, records are forgotten and the games are always close.

"I get a big kick out of playing in Carmichael Auditorium," Bill added. "I really get charged up when they start screaming and yelling for us to come on. Sometimes I get so excited that I want to run our opponents right off the floor."

Bill said that the transition from freshman to varsity basketball has been a tough one. "In high school," he said, "I seldom ran into anyone who was my size, and even last year, most of the other freshman teams only had one good big man, and I usually still had an advantage over the man guarding me. But, it's really been rough this year. I'm always faced with guarding someone about my size now, and one of their big men is usually on me. It has been real rough so far this year, but it's also been very rewarding as our record shows."

Heels Face Terps

The UNC Tar Heels travel to Maryland's Cole Field House tonight in an attempt to end a four-year losing streak there as well as get back on the winning trail.

It's been four long years since the Tar Heels have been able to beat the Terps on their home court, and after losing to Clemson Saturday night, Coach Dean Smith's warriors are raring to get back on the winning trail.

Coach Bud Millikan's Terps bring the worst offensive record, 65.1 pts. per game, in the conference into the game. But, the Heels, who are leading the conference in offense with a 84.1 average per game, can't take the Terps lightly because they also have the best defensive team in the conference and are giving up only 64.1 points per game.

The Terps are led in scoring by their senior captain Jay McMillan. McMillan is averaging 15.2 points per game and is followed by Julius Johnson at 12.5 and Bill Jones at 11.9.

The Heels tonight will be attempting to get a tighter grasp on first place. They have an 18.3 over-all record and a 10-1 conference mark. They have only to win two of their remaining three conference games to claim the regular season championship and be seated number one at Greensboro in the tournament.

The Heels will undoubtedly have their hands full tonight and will have to play heads-up ball if they hope to win. While the Terps have had more than their share of troubles this year, they always are tough at home. If the Heels take advantage of their height they should be able to come back with a win, but if they slack up for even a few minutes, they may come back having to win all of their remaining conference games to finish on top.

UNC Swim Team Leaves For Championship Meet

By JOE SANDERS

Sixteen UNC swimmers and two divers leave today for the ACC Swimming Championships in Columbia, S.C. The three-day meet begins tomorrow with eight ACC swimming teams competing for the title of Conference Champion.

The Blue Dolphins, rated at 11th place in the national rankings, plan to challenge N.C. State for first place. State won the Champs last year and is currently ranked in the top ten nationally.

The Dolphins ended their dual meet season with a 9-3 record. One of the losses was to the Wolfpack, which has lost only to Yale this year.

The Tar Heel hopes for victory are based on the entry system of the Championships. As many swimmers may be entered in one event by a team as that team wishes. This differs from dual meets where only two swimmers from each team may enter one event.

Carolina's advantage is in her great depth of quality, especially in freestyle. In dual meets, the Heels could not enter all the swimmers capable of scoring points in a single event. In the championships, these swimmers can be entered, picking up points for Carolina that would not be gained under a limited-entry rule.

The other teams in the conference recognize this depth. Willis Casey, coach of N.C. State, said that "Carolina has more depth than anyone in the conference." Bill Campbell, Maryland's coach, said, "Pat Earey's Tar Heels should prove to be the finest swimming team in the history of this school. This squad is the only team in the conference capable of even standing up to the likes of N.C. State."

UNC was the ACC Champion in 1963 and 1964. Last year Carolina took third, with the freshman team walking away with the Freshman Championships.

Baby Dolphs Show Well

Tar Baby swimmers performed well yesterday in the Freshman Invitational Championships in the indoor pool. Frank McElroy led UNC tankmen with two first places and a second and broke a Carolina frosh record in the process.

Brad Langdon and Ted Dunn also copped firsts for the Tar Babies to give Carolina an impressive showing.

McElroy won the 200-yard freestyle in a time of 1:51.6 for openers and then took the 500-yard freestyle in 5:05.5. The UNC yearling was in the most exciting race of the day in the 500.

The best performance came in the 1650-yard freestyle when McElroy broke a freshman record although he placed second. McElroy's 18:10.8 clocking snapped an old UNC mark by almost ten seconds.

Dunn won the 400-yard medley in 4:44.4 and Langdon splashed to a victory in the 50-yard freestyle in :22.2.

Coach Pat Earey said the freshmen "gave some good efforts — especially McElroy, Langdon, and Dunn. We also got good effort from Bill Brown in the butterfly and Will Fulton in the backstroke.

"I was impressed by Colin McNair in the individual medley and also Bill Lindley in the 100-yard freestyle. We expect good things from these boys next year."
