

Mag Dedicated To Jessie Rehder

A story and five poems by William Faulkner are featured in the second issue of LILLABULERO, the new literary magazine being published by students here.

This issue of the quarterly publication is dedicated to the late Jessie Clifford Rehder, a Wilmington native and former head of the UNC Creative Writing Department, who died Feb. 3. Miss Rehder contributed to the first issue of LILLABULERO, which was published in December.

Included in the spring issue is a short story, "Wind Sprints," by Ralph Dennis, a Sumter, S. C., native and member of the Radio, TV and Motion Pictures faculty.

There is a portfolio of selected Shaker music and Shaker inspirational drawings with explanatory notes by English Prof. Daniel W. Patterson, a Greensboro native.

Also included in the latest issue of LILLABULERO is a selection from the BINZWANGERTALES by Rubin Barker entitled "The King of the Tuppurs Fair." There are poems by Lucius Shepherd of Detroit, Dabney Stuart of the Washington and Lee English faculty, Matt Hughes, Edmund Skellings of the University of Alaska, Ed Leimbacher of the University of Washington at Seattle, and John C.

Hoy, dean of admissions at Wesleyan University.

The issue also contains reviews of new poetry and fiction.

Russell Banks of Concord, N. H., a senior English major, is editor of the quarterly magazine. Associate editors are David W. Mallison of Greensboro, William P. Matthews III of Chapel Hill and Newton Smith of Winston-Salem.

Steve Hawthorne of Laplata, Md., is fiction editor and Edward Ellis of Greensboro is poetry editor. Other staff members are Joseph C. Sitterson Jr. of Chapel Hill, Jefferson Davis and Susan Zaro of Charlotte, Betty Benbow of Greensboro, Catherine Smith of Anderson, S. C., Richard Gatling of Memphis, Tenn., Joanne Altieri of Upton, Mass., and Susan Willey of Pittsburgh, Pa.

The publication sells for 75 cents a copy or $2.75 for a four-issue subscription. Staff offices are located in the YMCA Building on the UNC campus.

Marcus Gives Speech

Dr. Rudolph A. Marcus, professor of physical chemistry at the University of Illinois, will visit the campus Thursday, March 23, to deliver the Venable Lecture in Chemistry.

His lecture, entitled "Electron Transfer Reactions in Chemistry," is set for 8 p.m. in 207 Venable Hall.

The Venable Lecture series is named in honor of Francis P. Venable, who organized the UNC Chemistry Department and served as president of the University.

Prof. Marcus, 53, completed his undergraduate and graduate work at McGill University, where he earned the Ph.D. in 1946.

Before joining the faculty of the Polytechnic Institute of Brooklyn in 1951, he did post-doctoral research at the National Research Council of Canada with Prof. E. W. R. Steacie and at UNC with Prof. O. K. Rice.

Dr. Marcus became a professor at the University of Illinois in 1964.

Prof. Marcus, past chairman of the American Chemical Society's Division of Physical Chemistry, currently serves on the editorial board of Annual Reviews of Physical Chemistry.

His recent research has been in the field of theoretical chemical kinetics.

UNC Chorus Sings

The University of North Carolina Chorus will present its spring semester concert at 8 p.m. Tuesday in Hill Music Hall on the UNC campus.

Composed of UNC students from the freshmen through graduate levels and directed by Wayne Zarr since 1963, the Chorus performs both on and off campus. It was recently at Hollins College, Roanoke, Va.

Zarr, familiar to Research Triangle audiences as a tenor soloist, also directs the Chapel Hill Choral Club. Last year he initiated a third group—a small ensemble derived from the University Chorus and devoted to chamber vocal works such as madrigals by English composers which will be heard Tuesday night. The ensemble will also sing the Bach motet, "Jesu Priceless Treasure."

The University Chorus will perform Ravel's "Trois Chansons," and "Missa Brevis" by the late Zoltan Kodaly, eminent Hungarian composer. Organist for this work will be Dr. Rudolph Kremer, also of the music faculty.

The Tuesday Evening Series concert, sponsored by the Music Department, is open to the public without charge.

WILLIAM DEWITT SNODGRASS

Poet Snodgrass Will Recite Here

Pulitzer Prize-winning poet William DeWitt Snodgrass will participate in the University of North Carolina's 1967 Fine Arts Festival.

Festival Chairman Travis Abbott announced publicly today that Snodgrass, currently Associate Professor of English at Wayne State University, will read and discuss some of his recent poems on the night of April 9.

Snodgrass, born in Wilkesburg, Pa., 41 years ago, won

Honor Council Convicts Five

Men's Honor Council has tried five cases this month. All of the defendants were found guilty, two were given one semester's probation, and one was suspended for a semester.

At the March 2 meeting, a junior was found guilty of violating the Campus Code by using profanity towards three physical education instructors who asked him to leave the gym for interrupting their classes. He pleaded guilty, and was given one semester's probation.

At the March 9 meeting a junior was charged with violating the Honor Code by stealing $207 from several rooms in Craige and lying to a resident advisor. His plea was guilty, and he was sentenced to one semester's suspension.

A sophomore was also charged with a violation of the Honor Code, plagiarism, in using material from an assigned text without direct quotations for a history paper. His plea was indefinite, but he was found guilty and put on probation for one semester.

Two freshmen were charged with a breach of the Honor Code, for stealing a street sign, but returning it voluntarily. They pleaded indefinite, but were found guilty and given an official reprimand.

the Pulitzer Prize for poetry in 1960 for his book of poems, Heart's Needle. In reviewing the title poem, M. L. Rosenthal in The Nation said this:

"Snodgrass has built a moving poem out of something we treat far too casually: early divorce, in which it is the love between children and their parents that receives the deepest wounds."

Hayden Carruth in Poetry wrote: "I think it is only fair to say that Snodgrass seems to me by far the best poet to have appeared so far in this decade and probably one of the best of any age now practicing in America."

Snodgrass attended Geneva College in Pennsylvania for several years and received his B.A., M.A. and M.F.A. at the State University of Iowa. He has taught at Cornell and the University of Rochester and has participated in several writers' conferences.

He first attracted the attention of the literary world in the early 1950's, when his poems, translations of German poetry and reviews began appearing in journals and quarterlies.

Snodgrass received the Ingram Merrill Foundation Award and the Hudson Review Fellowship in 1958, the Longview Foundation Literary Award in 1959, a National Institute of Arts and Letters grant in 1960, the Guinness Poetry Award in 1961 and a Ford Foundation study grant in 1963.

"His poems reach beyond and are chiefly lyrical and sophisticated in tone, meditative and moral in import," Carruth asserted. Reviewing the poems in Heart's Needle, he calls them "superb" and "brilliantly written."

-Basketball-

(Continued from Page 1) implied that Duke, before the ACC tournament last weekend in Greensboro, was the best team in the ACC. But last night he left the court convinced that he was wrong.

Neither North Carolina nor Princeton played as well as they had in Carmichael Auditorium earlier in the season.

Both teams played tight, nervous basketball throughout. North Carolina pulled a way from Princeton late in the second half. They led 59-53 with 3:55 remaining in regulation time.

Smith's stall, which won the game for him in overtime, ironically caused them to slip away. The Tar Heels lost their momentum in the final three and one-half minutes of the second half.

For the first time in the game they were out-rebounded and forced into numerous offensive errors. Joe Heiser scored from the top of the circle, then Lawyer hit a jump shot from the left corner. Heiser, Brown, and Heiser again, and with just 34 seconds remaining, Princeton was within reach, 63-61.

After a wild scramble for the basketball, the ref called for a jump. Princeton controlled the tap and it was Heiser who tied the score 63-63 with 14 seconds remaining.

Carolina came down court and Dick Grubar took a jump shot which, if made, would have given them a dramatic win. The ball hung on the rim but never fell.

It seemed like the dozzenth time that the Tar Heels had dealt themselves the lead, then lost their momentum and let Princeton remain in the game.

Both teams traded the lead in the final minutes of the first half. Carolina, thanks largely to the rebounding and seven points of sophomore Bill Bunting, led at the half, 29-28.

The team opened the second half looking more relaxed. It took advantage of the Tigers' foul situation and controlled both offensive and defensive backboards.

Joe Brown and Larry Miller together gave their team a 43-35 lead with 13:38 remaining. Then with Princeton on the hook, Smith and Co. suddenly lost their killer instincts.

Once again, the game's momentum shifted hands. The game's big men, Rusty Clark and Princeton's Chris Thomoforde, were forced out of the game with five fouls and sat through the overtime on their benches.

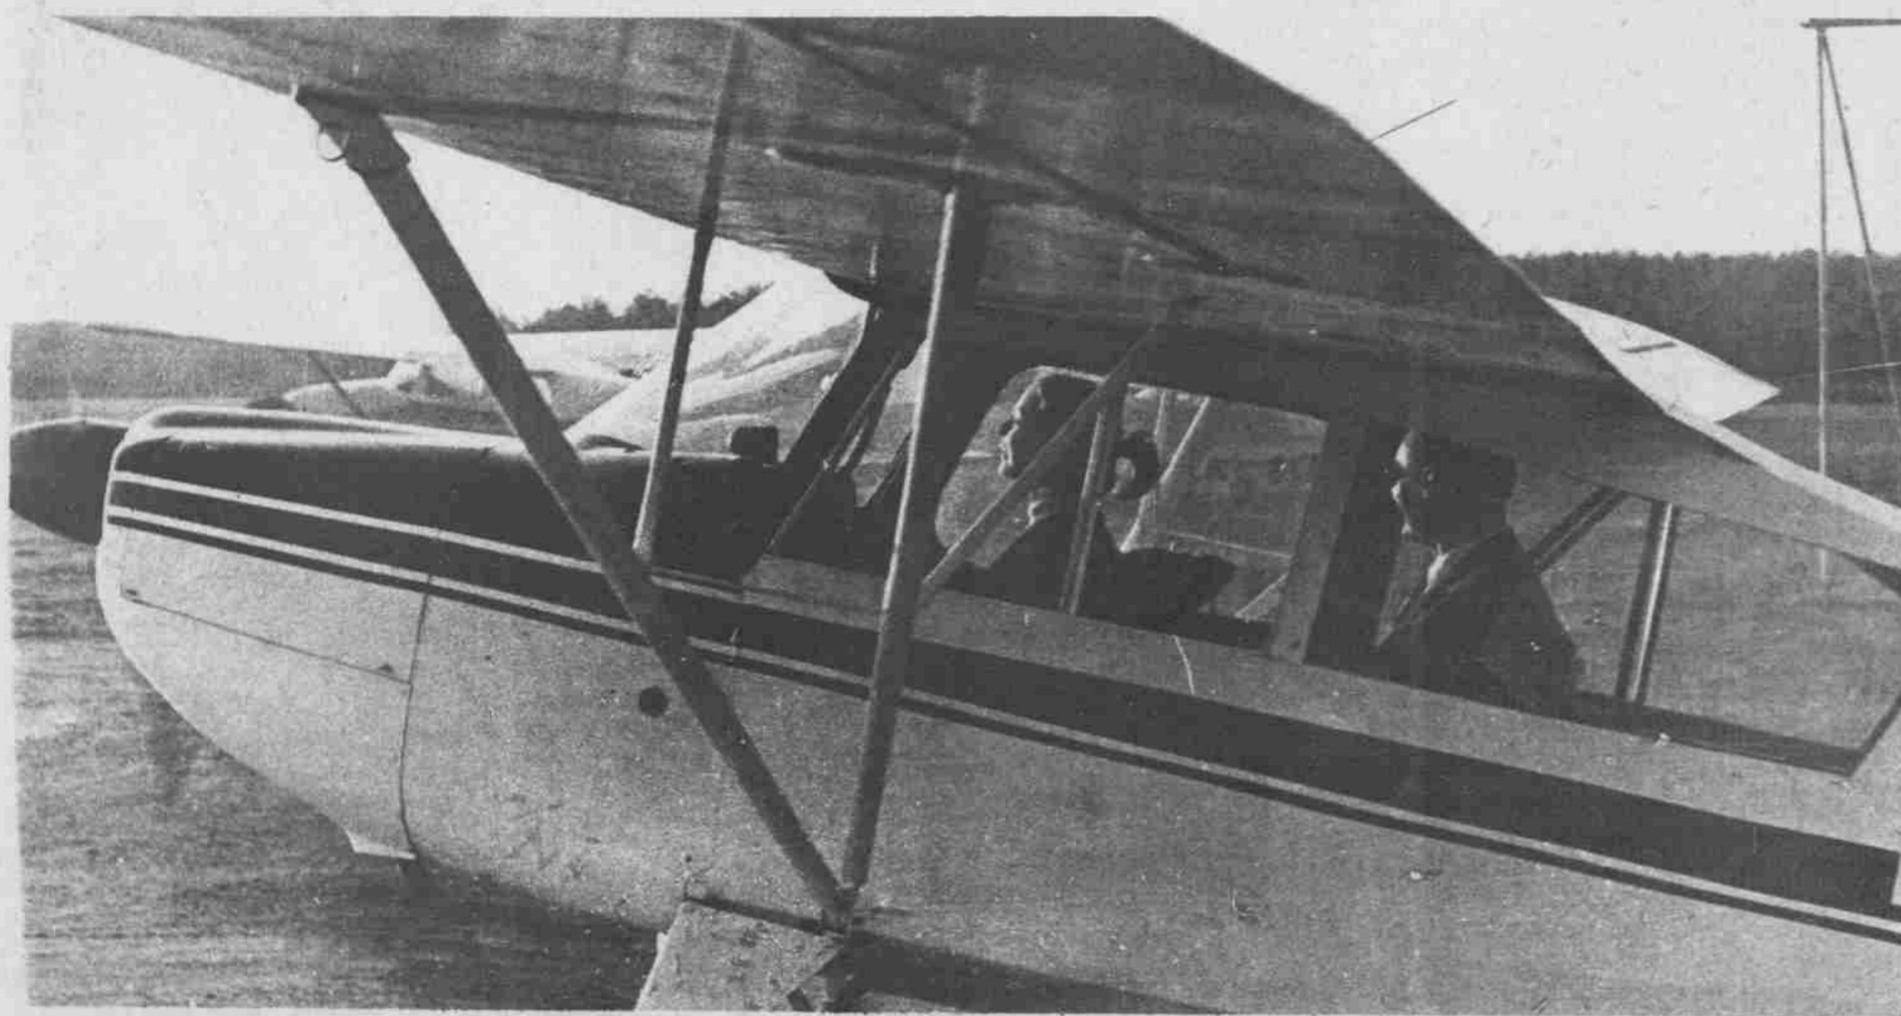

After the game Dean Smith faced a group of reporters. "The team showed great courage tonight," he said. "It took a lot of courage to come back and win with our delay-type of game."

"We went into our delay because Princeton's defense denied us good shots. We use the four corner to draw the team out, and then we sent Miller and Lewis driving towards the basket."

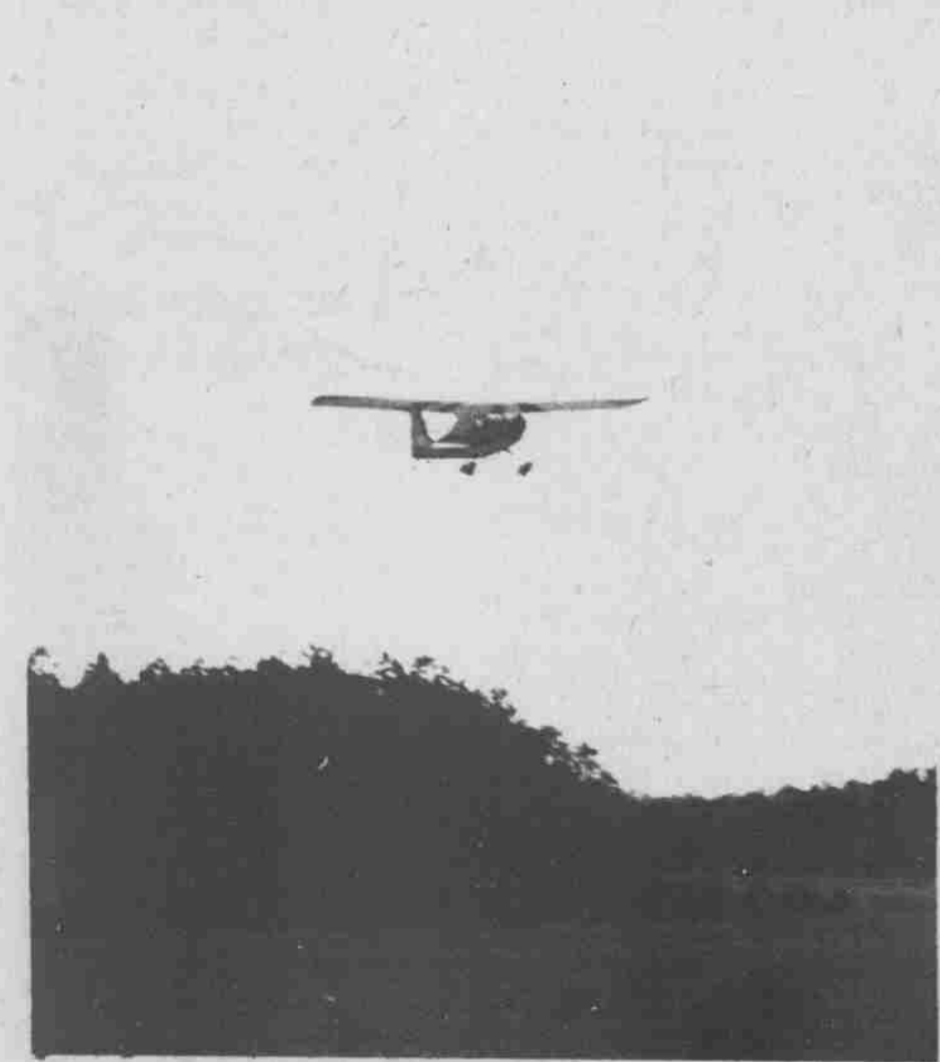

Smith's strategy advanced the Tar Heels one step further towards their goal of the national championship.
