

Sylvia Wilkinson To Teach Writing Here

Sylvia Wilkinson, voted by Mademoiselle Magazine last December "one of the four most exciting women in the US," will join the English department next year to teach classes in creative writing.

Miss Wilkinson, 27, who won wide critical acclaim for her first novel, Moss on the North Side, is a native of Durham, N. C.

UNC writer-in-residence Max Stelle describes her as a "tennis champion, painter, professional car racer (she does all the work on her cars herself) and mod clothes enthusiast."

Her second novel, A Killing Frost, will be published in September, 1967.

A UNC-G grad, Miss Wilkinson has also studied at Hillins College and Stanford University. She has taught creative writing at Asheville-Biltmore and William and Mary Colleges.

In December 1966, Mademoiselle gave her one of their four annual Merit Awards which were established to recognize young women on the threshold of outstanding achievement.

Senate Signs Sniffing Bill

RALEIGH (AP) — A Senate committee Tuesday approved a bill signed by all 50 senators aimed at stifling the problem of glue sniffing in North Carolina.

James Durham, supervisor of the State Bureau of Investigation's laboratory, told the Senate Proposals and Grievances Committee "we've had a little problem" with glue sniffing "on military bases and in penal institutions."

"I think we need legislation on this," he said.

The committee agreed as it gave unanimous approval to the measure introduced by Sen. Albert Ellis, D-Onslow.

"I don't know whether we will get any convictions," Ellis said, "but the bill will certainly act as a deterrent."

William S. Best, SBI chemist, explained that glue sniffers "take a brown bag, squeeze glue into it and then inhale it." He said the glue, which contains benzene, produces hallucination.

"How long will the jag last?" asked Sen. Bailey Ruffin, D-Wake.

"I don't know," best replied. "We have had two cases to come to the laboratory from military bases. They were common types of glue."

The bill would make it unlawful to use, possess or sell glues and other substances containing toxic vapors capable of inducing intoxication.

The committee also approved a bill which would make it unlawful to transport beer and wine in a motor vehicle if the seal or cap has been broken.

Four committee members voted against the measure sponsored by Sens. John R. Boger Jr., D-Cabarrus, and Frank Griffin, D-Union. Sen. Vinson Bridgers, D-Edgecombe, told the committee "a lot of people in my area like to drive along and drink beer."

Sen. Leroy Simmons, D-Duplin, said, "the only time I ever drink any beer is in an automobile."

"The bill might scare some of the teen-agers," said Sen. Harry Buchanan, D-Henderson.

"I don't think it will scare anybody," commented Sen. John J. Burney Jr., D-New Hanover.

In other action, the committee approved bills authorizing referendums on the establishment of ABC liquor stores in Pittsboro, Siler City, Sylva and the incorporated towns of Robeson County.

EMPHATIC EMMA

HUESCA, Spain (UPI) — Some barmaids are willin', some are not.

Emma Largo Santiago, 27, is a barmaid in the "no" category. When six male customers decided they wanted to sample her charms she:

Conked one on the head with a half-empty wine bottle, broke the ribs of another by swiping him in the chest with a chair, chased the rest with the same chair.

The two injured men went to the hospital; the other four may still be running.
