SG 'Bull Session' Set For 6:30 P.M.

A Student Government sponsored "Bull Session" will be held at Graham Memorial tonight at 6:30. Problems of Student Government on this and other campuses will be discussed.

All students are welcome to the session to give their views on the function of student government, according to Jed Dietz, Student Body vice president.

During the first 30 minutes of the session, students will be asked to register their addresses for future reference and contact. At 7 o'clock, the group will be divided into five groups for the discussion of (1) Womens Rules, (2) Educational Reform, (3) Honor Systems, (4) Judicial Reform, (5) Honor Systems, (4) Judicial Reform, and (5) Student Government Services.

"We want to use this meeting to give all students the chance to voice their concerns about student government," Dietz said. "We want to see how other campuses deal with the problems that face student government."

Leading the discussion of Women's Rules will be Frances Dayvault and Anita Wilkinson. Women's rules on other campuses, both coed and all-girls, will be discussed. The referendum on women's rules taken on this campus last spring will also be discussed.

David Kiel and Dietz will chair a discussion on educational reform, particularly the directions of the Experimental College. The makeup of experimental colleges on other campuses will be examined.

Hugh Stevens will lead a discussion of Student Services. The question, "what services should Student Government offer students?" will be posed.

In the field of Judicial Reform, David LeBarre and Laura Owens will lead the discussion of problems of judicial administration on this campus and inquire into similar problems on other campuses.

The Campus Code on this and other campuses will be discussed in a session on Honor Systems.

Following the two-hour sessions, there will be a reception on the lawn in front of GM.

Chorus In Concert This Evening At 8

The UNC Summer School Chorus, under the direction of Harold Lowry, will appear in concert this evening at 8 o'clock in Hill Hall's air-conditioned rehearsal hall. The Chorus, made up of students who meet for the pleasure of singing, will present a program during each summer session.

To open the concert, the chorus will sing works by Josquin, Byrd, and Thomas Tomkins. Compositions by Mozart, Arkhangelsky, and Stravinsky will make up the second group. Two larger works will complete the program: Randall Thompson's "Frostiana" and R. Vaughan Williams' "Toward the Unknown Region."

Harold Lowry, director, is a graduate of UNC-CH where he also received his master's degree in 1966. He is an instructor at Woodbury Forest School in Orange, Virginia.

The concert is open to the public without charge.

Dr. Waller In New Davie

A Look At The New Davie Hall

By ABBY KAIGHIN

The new Davie Hall "seems functional... but belongs in another setting," commented a faculty member.

A tour of Davie Hall led by Dr. Marcus Waller, assistant chairman of the Psychology department, proved that the building is functional and not so "out of place" as its critics claim.

"What style would have made the building compatible?" asked Dr. Waller. Architects Holloway and Reeves of Raleigh, designers of the building, had indicated that the buildings surrounding Davie varied from the early 1900 style of Caldwell Hall to neo-Georgian dorms.

"I think the building comes off well in its own right," Waller said.

The $1.6 million building is scheduled for completion August 15. Construction began March 2, 1966. The National Science Foundation granted $714,000 to support lab and graduate training facilities. The remaining $903,000 came from the state.

"Graduate students will benefit most from the building," Waller said. "There are 100 grad student offices in the new building — we didn't have any before."

"In a graduate program we need lots of space and we can offer most of the experimental programs. Now the graduates will be able to interact with other people doing research," Waller explained.

The Psychology department will unite in its new home Sept. 1. It is currently spread out in six buildings over the campus. Most of the teaching will still be done outside the new building, however.

The largest classroom in Davie holds only about 90 students. The building is primarily for research and housing of faculty. Big lectures such as Psych 26 will be held in Carroll Hall.

The new building offers many conveniences for the Psych department. On the ground floor a number of rooms and halls in the animal research area are waterproof so they can be hosed down. An animal isolation quarter provides a place for new animals to be "screened."

Three rooms in Davie are set aside for advising students. This will keep registration rush from circulating into other parts of the building.

A row of two-way mirrors adds intrigue to the observation corridor of infant psychologist Harriet Rheingold's lab. These mirrors aren't the only "different" glass in the building.

The glass corners of the building make a unique interior. "You feel there should be a corner yet there isn't a corner," Dr. Waller pointed out.

All the glass in the new building is tinted. Most of the rooms facing the outside are faculty offices, with the labs occupying the center of the building.

The entire building is air-conditioned. Dr. Waller also emphasized how much brighter the new building is than the present Psychology Department quarters in New West.

The new home of the Social Psychology department will be on the third floor overlooking the arboretum. Also on the third floor is a student and faculty lounge.

The new building was constructed so that another floor could be added, although the additional floor wouldn't be full-sized.
