

How BATDEAN Got His Name

Editor's Note: Dean Long is affectionately known to upper classmen at UNC as the Bat Dean, thanks to a column which appeared in the Daily Tar Heel on January 16, 1966. For transfer students and freshmen, the Tar Heel reprints that memorable column by Armistead Maupin Jr.

GROSSEM CITY, U.S.A.

PANIC has broken out in the PLUSH OFFICES of the Consolidated University Building. Commissioner Thursday has received word of a DREADED DEVELOPMENT!

Commissioner: That dastardly villain! He's struck again right under our very noses

Assistant: Who, Commissioner?

C: The Grosser! The fiendish arch-fiend dedicated to GROSSING OUT the entire University!

We thought we had captured him three years ago at the Beat Dook parade, but he turned up this fall disguised as a home movie producer. Now he's on the loose again!

A: GRAT GUNS! Where is he this time?

C: Big Mom Residence Hall! Somehow or other, the devilish monster had persuaded those upstanding, clean-living American boys to publish a pornographic rush booklet! The

A: This sounds like a job for...

C: Yes! BATDEAN! I don't know who he is behind that desk, but we need him. And we need him NOW!

In a matter of seconds, the deathly urgent phone call had reached the Bat Cave of 02 South Building. To the outside world, this seemingly innocent enclosure is the office of wealthy socialite preacher Bruce Long and his bright young ward, Dick Kepner. But we know better!

Within these walls dwells BATDEAN, the caped crusader, and the incredible BOBIN. Together they form a DYNAMIC DUO that strikes fear in the hearts of BROOKS BROTHERS BIGOTS everywhere.

A quick change of clothes and BAM! WHOOSH! they are off in the powerful BATMOBILE — the only car in Grosseme City that bears a B sticker.

Within seconds, the trusty twosome is standing in the awesome lobby of Big Mom. Bobin surveys the incriminating rush booklet.

Bobin: HOLY REPRIMAND! This is serious stuff, Batdean!

BATDEAN: Yes, Bobin, but one day Truth, Justice, and the Campus Code shall prevail over all. Confiscate several hundred copies of that VILE BOOKLET so that we may have sufficient evidence. Wonder Woman will be interested in this!

In a flash, the GROSSER appears from a nearby elevator. A fiendish grin spreads across his distorted face.

GROSSER: Well, &!%(!?$$!) it's Batdean.

BATDEAN: Don't talk like that, you VULGAR VILLIAN. Your time has come!

GROSSER: My time will, never come, Batdean! Even as we stand here, my work is going on. Just wait till you see what the boys of Alexander have planned for the girls of Winston! Hee Hee! Wait till you see the water tower next Tuesday! Wait till the Grill has Happy Hour! (Chuckle) Wait till Jubilee!

BATDEAN: You FIEND!

The Caped Crusader lunges towards the Grosser in a powerful effort to bring the villain to his feet. But the Grosser moves like a REPTILE and springs toward a nearby stairwell. Bobin helps Batdean to his feet.

BATDEAN: Don't let him... I think I'm going to black out... after him, Bobin... (he drops to the floor).

WILL BOBIN CAPTURE THE DASTARDLY CRIMINAL?

WILL BATDEAN GET TO THE WATER TOWER IN TIME?

WILL THE GROSSER FULFILL HIS THREAT TO INSTALL 300 COPIES OF FANNY HILL IN THE RESERVE READING ROOM?

UNC Helps Avoid 'Street Violence'

Work is being done in North Carolina today by the North Carolina Good Neighbor Council, University of North Carolina and Duke University and others in education, business and industry to get jobs for drop-outs and other young people will forestall "violence in the streets" in North Carolina towns and cities in 1974 and 1985.

A plan for matching jobs with young people needing work — a project supported by 45 North Carolina businesses and industrial establishments—was praised here by Robert Goode of the "Plans for Progress" organization in Washington, D. C.

Goode is an executive of the Mellon Bank in Pittsburgh and is on leave to aid in the Plans for Progress efforts to help youths find employment over the nation.

His remarks came at the conclusion of a vocational guidance institute held here, under direction of Prof. William D. Perry. David Coltrane, chairman of the Governor's Good Neighbor Council was one of the speakers at the institute which has been going since July 17.

The 40 school teachers attending the institute will be armed with new information and techniques in assisting young people in getting jobs.

Mr. Goode praised Duke University for its announcement Thursday that it would help with housing needs of Durham's low-income people who need housing. He also commended the University of North Carolina for its leadership in programs such as the occupational and vocational job-acquiring efforts, indicated in the institute concluded here today.

Prof. Perry said support of the institute was guaranteed by contributions from 45 business and industrial firms in North Carolina.
