

Hemophilia Drug Obtained From Blood Plasma Here

A new high-potency preparation for treating hemophilia has been obtained from human blood plasma, it was disclosed Monday by a UNC pathologist.

Dr. Kenneth M. Brinkhous, chairman of the Department of Pathology at the School of Medicine, reported at the annual meeting of the American Society of Hematology (meeting in Toronto, Canada) that the new preparation of antihemophilic factor (AHF) is 100 times more concentrated than in blood plasma.

About two years ago, a clotting fraction about eight times more concentrated than in blood plasma was developed in the UNC pathology laboratories.

The major advantage of the new concentrate is that it can be given to patients in small volume. Small doses of AHF are needed especially for severe bleeders requiring prolonged treatment and certain hemophiliacs who build up an inhibitor which destroys the clotting activity of AHF injections.

The convenience of the new concentrated blood plasma extract can be illustrated with the case of a 100-pound hemophilic patient. To bring this patient's clotting activity up to the level of a normal person would require an injection of about 22 ounces of the concentrate developed at UNC two years ago. With the new concentrate, the patient would require an injection of less than two ounces.

Dr. Brinkhous said that the first 17 hemophilic patients treated with the new product had histories of allergic reactions to the injection of plasma products.

No adverse effects were observed with the new concentrate, however.

New York

Former President Dwight D. Eisenhower, in a national television interview, said the United States should consider temporary forays by its forces into North Vietnam and if necessary into Cambodia and Laos in pursuit of the Viet Cong. He said he would not consider such operations an invasion.

UN May Act Soon On Vietnam Issue

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The possibility of an American move to secure United Nations action on Vietnam has increased in recent days, U.S. officials said Monday.

State Department press officer Carl Bartsch said in response to a question that he had "no announcement to make" on the subject.

Other officials said, however, that the likelihood the United States would press the U.N. Security Council to try to find a way to peace was greater than before because of two factors.

One was the unanimous adoption by the Senate last week of a resolution urging President Johnson to make every reasonable effort to get U.N. action on the conflict.

The other was disclosure that representatives of the National Liberation Front (NLF), the political arm of the Viet Cong, had sounded out U.N.

ARTHUR J. GOLDBERG

Secretary General U Thant on the possibility of coming to New York to try to propagandize in behalf of their position.

The United States has reaffirmed its willingness, first stated by Ambassador Arthur J. Goldberg Nov. 2, to permit NLF representatives to attend the Security Council if it takes up the Vietnam case.

The department has not officially acknowledged that it told Thant it would not grant visas to NLF agents simply to come to New York to "lobby," although official sources privately admit that this is correct.

The United States position is that if the Viet Cong or Hanoi wish to come to the United Nations, they must do so as parties to the dispute appearing in an official forum where they are accountable for their actions and words and where the United States can present its case against them.

The United States contends that the NLF is simply a "puppet" of the North Vietnamese government, which is guilty of "aggression" against South Vietnam.

It has tried unsuccessfully in the past to get Hanoi hauled into the council. The North Vietnamese have contended the Vietnam conflict is no concern of the U.N. and have been supported in this position by the Soviet Union.

Prof To Lecture In South America

The U.S. State Department Monday announced the appointment of a UNC historian as a visiting lecturer at the Universities of Buenos Aires and El Salvador, South America, for the fall, 1968.

Dr. Ralph Lee Woodward Jr., associate professor of history at the University, will be doing research on the economic development of Argentina in the 19th century while on his semester long Fulbright-Hays Award.

Woodward will be lecturing in U.S. History.

A native of New London, Conn., Woodward joined the University faculty here in 1963. He holds the A.B. from Central College, Mo., and the M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from Tulane University.

In addition he attended the Universidad Michoacana de San Nicolas Hidalgo in 1954.

His teaching specialties are economic history of Latin America, Central America, Argentina, Brazil and Chile. He has done research on the economic history of Latin America and on 18th and 19th century Central America and Argentina and Chile.

Woodward held a Henry L. and Grace Doherty Foundation Fellowship in 1960-61 and a Fulbright-Hays grant to Chile in 1965-66.

His latest publication is "Class Privilege and Economic Development: The Consulado de Comercio de Guatemala" (UNC Press, 1966). In addition he has published numerous articles.

Under the Fulbright-Hays Act, grants are made annually to about 2,500 U.S. citizens to go abroad and to about 6,000 foreign nationals to come here. Since adoption of the original Fulbright Act in 1946, over 28,500 Americans and more than 70,000 foreign nationals have participated in the program.

SBI Begins Homosexual Crackdown

RALEIGH (UPI)—State Bureau of Investigation agents rounded up several Raleigh area men Monday in a crackdown on alleged homosexual activities.

SBI Director Myron McBryde, while declining to identify the suspects or how many, said the arrests were the result of a two weeks' investigation.

"Our investigation shows that a number of men of the Raleigh area are in violation of Section 14-177 (crime against nature)," McBryde said, "and are being arrested at this time."

By early Monday evening, McBryde said two men had been arrested "and their names, as well as all the others, will be made available at their preliminary hearings."

The SBI Director said Section 14-177 "holds that if any person shall commit a crime against nature, with mankind or beast, he shall be guilty of a felony, and shall be fined or imprisoned at the discretion of the court."

The Dream Came True For Butch

courage than any young man I've ever seen."

Coach Smith said he had never seen any young man so proud of a Tar Heel uniform.

"He said he wanted to take his uniform home for the Thanksgiving holiday. He wanted to work out in his high school gym and show off the Carolina uniform," Smith said.

But Butch never got home for Thanksgiving.

He wrote a letter home to his father about Nov. 11 saying, "If I was just a little stronger."

He checked into Memorial Hospital Nov. 12.

And he died Saturday.

A few hours later, his teammates — wearing his precious Carolina blue — played their opening game against Louisburg College.

The team won.

And in a way so did Butch.

A dream that a little boy of 11 had reamed had come true.

He got his blue uniform.

Ervin Asks Cancer Study

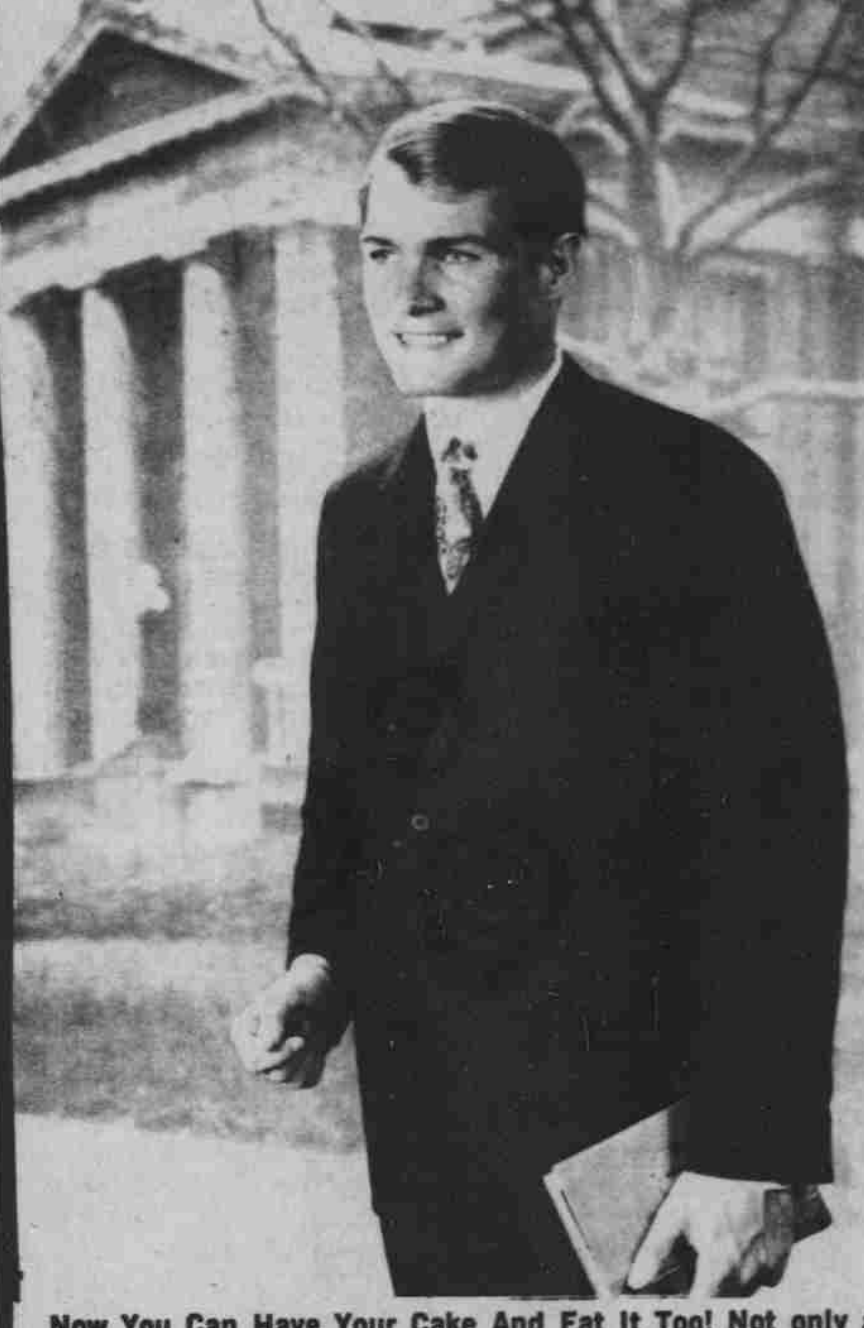

WASHINGTON—Sen. Sam J. Ervin Jr., calling for a massive cancer research center in his own tobacco growing state, said Monday that nobody, including Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, D-N.Y., knows what causes lung cancer.

He cited testimony before the Senate Commerce Committee and his own documentation prepared for the Congressional Record as proof that no one knows the cause of lung cancer, or any kind of cancer, including Kennedy and the U.S. Surgeon General.

Ervin said he, Sen. Everett Jordan, D-N.C., and Rep. Nick Galifianakis, D-N.C., will draft possible legislation to set up a cancer research center in North Carolina's Research Triangle Park bordered by the University of North Carolina, North Carolina State University and Duke University.
