Daily Tar Heel Unfit For East Berliners

By RICK GRAY
Of The DTH Staff

The Daily Tar Heel is subversive, capitalistic literature, not fit to be seen by the citizens of the glorious Democratic Peoples Republic of East Germany.

At least that's what the East German border guards at Checkpoint Charlie in Berlin told UNC students Richard Rodgers and Andy Halton (DTH assistant business manager) when they went across the border from West to East Berlin during the Christmas holidays.

Rodgers carried an issue of the DTH on the trip to take a picture of someone reading it in sight of the border.

The picture shown here was taken about midnight Dec. 28, before the border guards confiscated the paper. The lights in the background are newly added features of the Berlin wall which has been improved upon

Just over Halton's left shoulder are two East German machine gun posts.

"Somewhere in East Berlin there are about six border guards getting ready to defeat, probably as a result of the lead story on women's rules," said Rodgers.

As for the rest of the town of Berlin, he said that once the wall is out of sight, "It's the swiftest town I've ever seen, and the women are the best looking."

"We went on a guided tour that didn't break up until three in the morning—a guided tour, now."

While posing the picture near the wall, Rodgers also took a few landscape shots. The East German guards got a little curious.

"There's a border guard there somewhere with spots in his eyes from the flash I gave him when he looked over the fence," he claimed.

Elections Board Postpones Honor System Referendum

By WAYNE HURDER
Of The DTH Staff

The Elections Board announced Thursday that it cannot hold the honor system survey on Jan. 9 as planned, and is asking Student Legislature to authorize the board to hold it on Feb. 15.

Elections Board Chairman Norm Zettel said he didn't find out that legislature had approved the survey until it was too late for him to prepare adequately for the campus wide vote.

For the board to go ahead with the survey on Jan. 9 would be "totally impractical" and could lead to "fraud, confusion, and results," Zettel said.

For the board to set up an election, survey or referendum it must be notified at least 10 days ahead of time, he added.

The survey will be held in conjunction with a National Student Association major issues referendum, if the legislature approves Feb. 15 as the date.

Zettel

Travis

Charles Gowen, vice president of the Dialectic-Philanthropic Societies, and originator of the petition calling for the survey, is "disappointed" in the change, he said, but sees some benefits to it.

The added time will give him and the student judiciary more time to publicize the survey and clarify the wording, if necessary, he said.

They will also be able to visit dormitories, sororities, and fraternities to explain the survey now, he added.

Student Body President Bob Travis considers it best to "have a good job done on Feb. 15 rather than a poor job done on Jan. 9" even though he says he prefers having it as soon as possible.

NSA co-ordinator Charles Jeffress, who introduced the bill in legislature asking for the major issues referendum, feels that holding the two on the same day would be better since there would probably be greater participation.

Zettel considers this to be an advantage to changing the date.

One of the reasons stated in legislature for having the survey as soon as possible was a fear that if it were held close to spring elections it might be made into a political issue.

Gowen, however, doubts that "anybody could make it political."

The results of the survey will be compiled by the Elections Board and then turned over to the Ad Hoc Committee on Judicial Reform.

The committee will decide whether to seek any reforms in the system, and if so, what reforms.

The reforms it would want would then be presented to the Faculty Committee on Student Discipline to get their reaction.

After that the proposed reforms would be turned over to Student Legislature for the necessary action.

Zettel explained Thursday that it is "physically impossible" to hold the election on Jan. 9 because of a problem of printing ballots, getting poll tenders, and getting ballot counters.

Zettel said he didn't find out officially that the elections board should hold a survey until three hours before he left for Christmas holidays.

The GM Print Shop, which normally prints ballots, was scheduled to close today, he said, making it impossible to get them printed.

An additional problem would be getting about 360 poll tenders.

New 'C' Lot Approved

By JIM SADLER
Of The DTH Staff

Chancellor J. Carlyle Siterson has approved a proposal to temporarily extend "C" sticker parking to a previously undesignated lot on South Campus.

The lot, located between Ehringhaus and the new baseball field, has been used in the past primarily by the residents of Scott and Ehringhaus colleges who have "G" stickers. These drivers now will be forced to park in the "G" lots of Hinton James, Craige and Morrison.

The proposal, made by Bill Jarman, the only student member of the Chancellor's Advisory Committee on Traffic and Safety, was approved by the chancellor at the committee's Dec. 18 meeting.

The new 100-space lot, destined to become the site of new tennis courts later this year, will temporarily alleviate a "chronic shortage" of "C" parking places according to Jarman.

"These facilities are inadequate to handle the present parking load.

"You have to guarantee 'C' sticker students a place to park," said Jarman, "because these students live so far away from campus that they can't walk."

Most "C" sticker students live in apartments off campus or commute from their homes in Raleigh and Durham.

In other action, the Chancellor's Advisory Committee decided to allow visitor and patient parking on the east side of Memorial Hospital to compensate for the loss of the visitor parking area on the north side due to construction.

The hospital construction will also force faculty members to make more use of the Bell Tower parking lot, resulting in a stricter enforcement of parking rules in that lot.

Talent Search Underway; No Appropriations Spent

By PAMELA HAWKINS
Of The Daily Tar Heel Staff

The controversial Carolina Talent Search appropriation from the Student Legislature Dec. 14 is still in its original bulk of $640 resting in the Student Activities Fund reservoir.

"None of appropriation has been spent yet," said Phil Clay, director of the Talent Search, who originated the Negro recruitment bill.

Letters were sent out, however, to more than 400 North Carolina high school students before the Christmas holidays.

"The letters asked the students to consider application to the University and explained what we had to offer," Clay said.

The mailing list was made up of names supplied by the National Scholarship Service and recommendations from high school guidance counselors.

The response so far, according to Clay, has been return letters asking for additional information about Carolina and responses indicating that several of the selected students have already applied for admission here.

Recruiting teams, which will be sent to both all Negro and integrated high schools, will not be formulated until after the exam period Clay said.

"We will not be going to the schools with the intention of either counseling or insuring admission because we are not qualified to assume either position, but we are hoping to spur interest in Carolina and encourage students to apply who had not yet considered it."

Exp. College Sets Registration Feb. 2

By LARRY ARMSTRONG
Of The DTH Staff

Registration for the third session of UNC's Experimental College will begin Feb. 12.

For this session the college will be seeking both student and community participation.

Members of the Experimental College's coordinating committee will set up a booth on Franklin Street Monday through Friday of next week in order to recruit students interested in starting new experimental courses.

Members of the Chapel Hill-Carrboro communities will also be urged to participate.

The booth will be open from 11 a.m. until 2 p.m. with catalogs and pamphlets available to explain how a student can initiate a course.

Members of the committee also plan to visit Chapel Hill High School to interest both students and faculty members there.

Faculty members and graduate students will receive pamphlets in the mail today concerning Experimental College courses. Other students may pick up the pamphlets at Graham Memorial, Chase Hall, Lenoir Hall and Y-Court.

A prize of $15 is offered to the person who designs best cover for the new Experimental College catalogue.

The cover should be in full color, and entries may be submitted to the Student Government offices or the information desk in Graham Memorial, DeadEnd for the contest is Jan. 17.

The purpose of this session of the college is to see if there is a desire, both from the students and the community, to expand the Experimental College program.

The final day for submitting initiating blanks for new courses is Jan. 31.

Special Meeting

A special meeting of all members of Student Legislature, Student Government committee chairmen and members of the judiciary of Student Government will be held today at 3 p.m. in Roland Parker in GM.

The meeting was called by Student Body President Bob Travis, who will make "an announcement of pretty much importance" at that time, according to student legislator Dave Kiel.

Members of legislature and the judiciary (including all persons on the Attorney General's staff and the Men's Honor Court) are especially urged to attend, Kiel said, because "of some important statement to be made concerning them."

Indonesia Reports Hanoi Offer

SAIGON—Diplomatic sources said Thursday North Vietnam told Indonesia early last month Hanoi would "promptly enter into peace talks with the United States after an unconditional bombing cessation."

These sources said Hanoi stressed the bombing as the main obstacle to negotiations. Other sources said North Vietnam linked a bombing halt and an end to "all other acts of war" by the United States.

Qualified diplomats said Thursday they were mystified by what appeared to be sudden Hanoi peace offensive. They said both the timing of the offer and its scope were puzzling and warned it might be a gimmick to embarrass the United States.

The Communists may mean business because they see no chance of ultimate success any longer in their current fight.

Alternatively, they may want to drag the United States to the conference table, after having secured a halt to the fighting, to present Washington with terms for its speedy withdrawal altogether from Vietnam, the informants said.

Asylum Expected For Deserters

STOCKHOLM—Four American Navy deserters, who asked for political asylum in Sweden to escape the Vietnam war, will be told next Tuesday whether they can stay, the government announced Thursday.

Government sources said it was virtually a foregone conclusion the Aliens Commission would allow the four sailors to stay when it meets next Tuesday to consider the case.

The Aliens Commission recommended they be granted asylum and the commission nearly always follows the committee's recommendations. The Aliens Commission is an advisory panel and the Aliens Commission makes final decisions.

1967 Casualties Highest Of War

Figures for 1967 announced Thursday by the U. S. Command showed 9,353 Americans killed and 62,004 wounded in the year just ended, North Vietnamese and Viet Cong losses were placed at 87,534 killed.

The toll for the last week of 1967 through Dec. 30 was 185 Americans killed and 437 wounded. Communist losses were 623 killed, the report said. Figures were incomplete for the final day of 1967. The losses reflected the intensity of combat despite the Christmas truce.

Envious of those students who take a prolonged vacation not coming back to school until several days after classes have started?

Don't be in Hank Smith's case.

Smith, a junior from Tallahassee, Fla., is taking such a vacation, only he is spending his along with 11 other persons trapped in a snowstorm on the side of Grand Teton Mountain in Wyoming.

Unexpected Vacation?

Blizzard Traps UNC Student

The latest radio reports, according to roommate Charlie Mercer, say the group of mountain climbers are safely lodged in a hut about 500 feet from the top of the 13,000 foot high mountain.

The group can't be rescued because the snow storm has reduced visibility to zero, a Grand Teton National Park ranger was reported as saying.

As soon as the storm blows over they should be able to come down, he said. The blizzard hit the dozen climbers on Sunday when they were about 200 feet from the top and forced them to retreat to a steel hut 500 feet from the top.

The 12, selected from about 50 applicants, started out on Dec. 28 and planned to be back down the mountain by Jan. 4.

Smith called home on the 28th just before starting the ascent and reported that it was then four degrees below zero, according to Mercer.

"That was before the cold wave came in," Mercer says. "The weather will be considerably colder on top, probably 30 or 40 below."

Mercer isn't too worried about his roommate, however.

"There's no danger according to the radio reports," he said.

"They're using the most modern camping equipment," according to Mercer, and all the persons are highly skilled, he added.

Smith, the only climber who isn't from a mountainous area, was one of the first accepted for the climb.

Although the Christmas vacation is over, Franklin Street seemed not to notice. These packages in front of the laundromat seem to say that the spirit remains. At least most students hope so. It would improve exam grades tremendously.
