Clark Postponed; 'We Had Feeling' Say Protestors

By TERRY GINGRAS
of The Daily Tar Heel Staff

Pickers showed up in Y Court Monday afternoon to demonstrate against U.S. Attorney General Ramsey Clark and once again found that Clark had cancelled his appearance. About 40 people showed up to demonstrate, but they didn't bother to bring their picket signs because, according to George Vlasis, one of the organizers of the demonstration, "we had a feeling he wouldn't come."

Judith Weinberg, a member of the Southern Students Organizing Committee, said SSOC had learned that Clark was scheduled to speak this weekend from authorities in the UNC and Duke Law Schools.

Clark was forced to cancel his scheduled round of speeches March 4 because of some developments in the civil rights legislation.

According to Dickson Phillips, Dean of the UNC Law School, Clark appearance had "only been tentative since he was forced to cancel it the 300 Tickets Available For Tournament"

Student and university staff tickets for the Eastern Regional tournament in Raleigh March 15-16 can be applied for at the Carmichael Auditorium ticket office before noon Wednesday.

Students may apply for only one ticket. Staff members may also apply for tickets for their spouses who have season's passes for the regular season.

Tickets will be allotted for one night only. Three hundred tickets will be sold separately for both Friday and Saturday.

Names will be drawn at 12:30 p.m. Wednesday at Carmichael for those eligible to buy tickets. The first 300 names drawn will get tickets for Friday and the next 300 will get Saturday's. Students will have no choice of which night they get tickets.

Carolina received 1,000 tickets for the Regionals. The remainder of them went to cheerleaders, pep band members, faculty athletic committee, university administration officials and Rams Club members.

first time." "This is just one of those instances where an important person has found it impossible to meet commitment," said Phillips.

Michael Katz, an instructor in the Law School, said the civil rights legislation was probably forcing Clark to remain in Washington.

"The President gets everyone around to lobby in a situation like this," said Katz. "It's not impossible that the civil rights legislation is what's keeping him. His speech has only been scheduled for some time this week anyhow. It wasn't definitely Monday. He might be down Wednesday or Thursday, but I really don't know."

Vlasis had announced March 4, that the demonstration would be rescheduled for this Monday. According to him Clark was scheduled to speak at this time.

The demonstration was scheduled to coincide with similar rallies at Duke Law school. The rallies were organized by the Southern Student Organizing Committee to protest five major federal policies.

The group is protesting the prosecution of the Boston Five, a group including Dr. Benjamin Spock, for their opposition to the draft; the cooperation between the Justice Department and the selective service in recommending reclassification as punishment for protesters; the "illegal detention of Rap Brown"; the prosecution of young men who refuse to kill and the lack of action in connection with the deaths of three students in Orangeburg, S.C.

R. C. Lyon Appointed Mass. College Dean

Dr. Richard Colton Lyon, formerly associate professor of English and chairman of the American Studies Curriculum at UNC, has become Dean of the College and Professor of Humanities and Arts at newly chartered Hampshire College, Amherst, Mass., effective March 1. Lyon's major responsibilities in the next two and one half years will be in recruiting Hampshire's first faculty and in academic planning and curriculum development.

Spring Hits Campus

By RICK GRAY
Of The DTH Staff

Spring has at last arrived in Chapel Hill. The air hangs heavy with the laziness that comes in with the humid air.

The sounds of a banjo or a guitar drift across campus. Professors voices are heard as a jumble, and the whistles of birds almost drown them out as the students strain their ears—either to hear the birds or the professors one.

Dogs run rampant in Polk Place, and occasionally plant a muddy paw print on a text left open while the owner dozes in the sun.

The tones of the bells in the Bell Tower and South Building are not as mournful as they were two weeks ago.

Three-piece suits are disappearing and are being replaced by lightweight sport coats.

The tables outside the Circus Room are once again being used by someone other than the birds.

The wind still roars about the windows of the dorms, but it sounds inviting rather than threatening as it was a month ago.

Dresses are getting shorter—back to the fall hemlines, and the curve-hiding winter coats are disappearing from the coeds.

Windows are open in the classrooms and the occasional breath of breeze sends papers fluttering from desks.

The trees are beginning to bud, and their progress daily captures the gaze of a student dreaming of the first weekend at the beach.

Short sleeve shirts are coming on strong and socks are rapidly disappearing.

Frisbees are sailing through still bare branches, and dogs are running off with them in their mouths.

The long walk from South Campus doesn't last long enough any more and the walk back to the dorm after classes it slow and easy.

Radiators have been turned off and windows in dorms are being opened to let in light and move the air.

Toilet paper flutters as the wind passes through the branches that caught the rolls as they drifted downward after Saturday's Championship win in Charlotte.

Hair doesn't stay combed long, but it looks better when it's blow by a spring breeze.

The squirrels are posing for the art classes spread out all over campus.

And Silent Sam is beginning to smile.

Orientation Interviews Set

By LOUISE JENNINGS
of The Daily Tar Heel Staff

A goal of 550 orientation counselors has been set for this year, according to Joe Ritok, Men's Co-ordinator.

"More counselors will be needed this year than ever before. More new students are expected, and the orientation groups will be smaller," he explained.

Of the 550 counselors needed 200 freshmen women's counselors have already been chosen, and of the remaining 350, 250 are needed for men and 100 for women.

Interviews will be held for freshmen and transfer men's counselors and transfer women's counselors March 12-15 and March 18-20 between 2 a.m. and 5 p.m. in Roland Parker Lounges.

Interviewees will be asked questions similar to those a new student might ask his orientation counselor, Ritok said.

It is hoped that the Orientation Commission will be more involved with the residence colleges than ever before, according to Ritok. This year the importance of

Preferential Primary To Show UNC Views

By REBEL GOOD
of The Daily Tar Heel Staff

New Hampshire voters and Carolina faculty, staff and students go to the polls today to register their preferences in presidential primaries.

While the New Hampshire primary will determine delegates to national political conventions, Carolina's will merely be an indication of political thinking on campus.

The YM-YWCA is sponsoring the mock presidential and gubernatorial preferential primaries in order to "encourage political thinking on campus," said Elinor Upton, Y Projects Coordinator.

The system used to select candidates placed on the ballot is similar to that of the Oregon primary. All announced candidates, plus those considered to be possible candidates, are included.

The primary is "open." That is, one may vote for a candidate in either party, but must vote in the same party in both the presidential and gubernatorial elections.

The Republican presidential ballot lists six candidates: Richard Nixon, Charles Percy, Ronald Reagan, Nelson Rockefeller, George Romney, and Harold Stassen.

Lyndon Johnson, Robert Kennedy, and Eugene McCarthy are listed on the Democratic presidential ballot.

George Wallace is on the American Independent ticket.

Gubernatorial ballot lists Jim Gardner and John Stickley, while Mel Broughton, Reginald Hawkins and Robert Scott are on the Democratic side.

Write-in votes will be counted.

Students, faculty and staff may vote at Y Court from 8:30 to 4:30, Lenoir from 8:30 to 6:30, or Chase from 5 to 7 p.m.

Students must show identification cards prior to voting, and staff and faculty will be required to sign a list at the polling station.

Students interested in aiding in the tabulation of the votes are asked to come to Y Court at 4:30 p.m. Results should be completed by 8:30 p.m.

The UNC Students for McCarthy have appealed for a large turnout in the primary, "because a big vote in the Democratic primary will mean a big vote for Senator McCarthy," said Charles chairman.

"I would hope... those who wish to express their dissent... would ask for a Democratic ballot and vote McCarthy," Moore added.

SSL Biggest, Best Ever—Mercer

By RICK GRAY
of The Daily Tar Heel Staff

Last week's State Student Legislature was the biggest and best ever, according to the body's president Charlie Mercer.

"I think," Mercer said, "that this State Student Legislature, because of the legislation that was passed, because of the large attendance and because of the great number of state leaders who participated, has made its largest step in becoming a real influence in the state."

"It has begun to reach its full potential and I think is becoming a viable force and an influential voice in the state of North Carolina."

The legislation passed by the group, Mercer said, was the most impressive and progressive legislation that the group has passed in its 31 years.

Bills passed by the body provided for the establishment of regional medical centers, open housing, public kindergartens and the making of birth control pills available to recipients of state welfare funds.

The bill establishing regional medical centers at the sites of universities—Western Carolina at Cullowhee and East Carolina at Greenville—was introduced and sponsored by the UNC delegation which was chaired by Bruce Jolly. It passed with little opposition in either house.

The Carolina delegation banned together late Friday afternoon to defeat a bill introduced by the delegation from N.C. State to move the offices of the Consolidated University from Chapel Hill to the Research Triangle Park.

Dick Levy, who tied State's Bill Shiplay for best speaker awards, spoke out against the bill, asking the members of the UNC delegation to tell the body where the Consolidated University offices were in Chapel Hill. Only three or four of the delegates knew where they were, according to Mercer, and the bill was soundly defeated. The open housing bill was introduced by the delegation from North Carolina A & T State University in Greensboro. The original bill made the sale and rental of housing on a discriminatory basis unlawful. The bill was amended before it was passed. The final bill exempted residences which were a part of private homes.

The public kindergarten bill introduced by UNC-G passed with no serious opposition. The bill on the distribution of oral contraceptives had stiffer going. The Meredith bill was passed in different forms by the two houses, and the conference committee did not resolve the differences until Saturday morning.
