'Cats Victors Over Columbia

RALEIGH (UPI) — On the brink of defeat with two seconds left, Davidson got a second chance in overtime Friday night and defeated Columbia 61-59 in the opening round of the Eastern Regional NCAA Basketball Tournament.

With the score tied 55-55 and two seconds remaining, Columbia's Bruce Metz missed a free throw that would have won the game. Davidson's Mike Maloy grabbed the rebound away from Columbia's seven-foot Dave Newmark and the game went into overtime.

Maloy, who did not score a single point in the second half or the overtime, got the first rebound of the extra period, blocked a Newmark shot and grabbed the ball on a center jump to set up Davidson's first field goal. Rodney Knowles hit the field goal to make it 57-55, but Newmark matched that a few seconds later.

two points ahead on foul shots and the Wildcats went into a four-corner stall. Columbia had to foul to get the ball and Davidson sank two more foul shots.

It looked like Columbia was the winner when Williams Ames went to the foul line with less than a minute left, but missed. Davidson's Mike O'Neill made the tying field goal on a jump shot with 25 seconds left. O'Neill then fouled Metz who missed his charity shot.

Maloy got 11 points in the first half guarded by Newmark. Columbia put Jim McMillian on Maloy in the second half, however, and the sophomore didn't make another point. McMillian played most of the second half with four fouls. Newmark was high scorer for Columbia with 19 points. Dotson had 15.

Knowles led the Wildcats with 14. Maloy's 11 was second high.

Duke Trounces Oklahoma City; Challenges St. Peter's Monday

By RICK BREWER of The Daily Tar Heel Staff

Duke's nationally tenth-ranked Blue Devils advanced into the quarter-finals of the National Invitation Tournament in New York City by blasting Oklahoma City 97-81 Thursday night.

Duke will meet St. Peter's College of Jersey City in the quarter-finals Monday night.

WTVD (Channel 11) will carry the game.

Vic Bubas' Devils broke away to a 49-28 halftime lead over the Oklahomans and were never headed. Duke led by as much as 30 points in the second half and subs played the last 11 minutes of the game.

Mike Lewis topped the Devil attack with 22 points. The 6-7, 230 pound center also grabbed 16 rebounds as Duke dominated the boards 62-44.

Trailing Lewis in the Duke scoring were Steve Vandenburg with 18, Joe Kennedy with 16, and Dave Golden with 12. Guard Rich Travis, the nation's number four scorer with a 30 point average, paced the Chiefs with 28. Most of Travis' points, however, came after the issue was already decided.

Actually the highlight of the game came at intermission. Oklahoma City coach Abe Lemons kept his club on the floor at the half. The head Chief obviously felt his team had not played up to its full capabilities since OC trailed by 21.

Lemons had his first team scrimmage the second team during the half. The extra workout didn't help much as Duke continued to scalp the Chiefs in the second period.

St. Peter's ranks second to UCLA in offensive average in the country. St. Peter's advanced to the quarterfinals by outlasting Marshall College 102-93 in double overtime.

The win raised St. Peter's season record to 23-2. Elnardo

Webster topped the St. Peter attack with 51 points. The 6-5 junior also pulled down 17 rebounds.

Auburn Inks Negro Star

Henry Harris, called "the best high school guard in the South" by Auburn University Coach Bill Lynn, is the first Negro ever awarded an athletic scholarship at Auburn.

Harris, 6-2, 180 pounds, averaged 34.5 points per game last season at Greene County Training School in the small west Alabama town of Boligee.

He scored a total of 3,220 points in his four years at the school. In his senior year alone, he pumped in 1,117 points and averaged 17 rebounds a game.

Harris, an all around athlete, was also offered football scholarships at a number of colleges, according to Auburn officials. He quarterbacked Greene County to the district championship and also played third base on the schools baseball team.

Lefty Lemonds Top Soph Pros Drool Over Pitcher

By OWEN DAVIS of The Daily Tar Heel Staff

David Lemonds is one of those young baseball pitchers that always brings out a crew of eagle-eyed professional scouts when he takes the mound.

The scouts sit behind the batting screen in their portable chairs and write down five-figured numbers which they hope will entice Lemonds to sign with their club.

But Lemonds belongs to Carolina for now, and the Tar Heels expect him to fill the large shoes left by Garry Hill, who couldn't resist the professionals' offers and signed for $50,000 after his sophomore season last summer.

Lemons is a sophomore lefthander who was drafted by the San Francisco Giants two years ago. Since then he has established himself further as one of the top teenage hurlers in the nation.

Last summer he pitched in the fast Basin League in Pierre, S.C., against other college players and recorded a 10-2 won-loss mark, striking out 140 batters in 105 innings.

Then he joined a semi-pro team in Boulder, Colo., and won once and saved the final game as the Boulder club won the national semi-pro championship.

Even so, Lemonds couldn't make his high school starting rotation at Charlotte's Garriinger High until his senior season.

"We had Hill on that team and it was hard to get in," he said. "But I pitched a lot in the summers in American Legion and Colt Leagues."

Lemons joins a pitching staff which lost two top starters to the pros.

"It's hard to say you're going to come in and take over," he said. "We have a lot of good guys who have college experience."

"Everybody will have to carry the load. We won't have a stronghorse like Hill was last year."

Lemons likes to pitch every four days.

"My control is better if I can go out every fourth day," he said. "Since we will be playing a lot of seven inning doubleheaders, I can depend more on throwing hard for those seven innings instead of going to my curve."

"My ball naturally moves. It tails down and in on a left-handed batter and away from a righthander."

Lemons has been a teammate of UNC catcher Skip Hull for several years.

"I've pitched to Skip since I was 14," he said. "When you pitch to someone so long, you get to know them and begin to think like them."

You can compare a catcher to a quarterback. He calls the game and he's kind of in charge of everything."

Lemons doesn't shy away from the fact that he may sign a professional contract in the coming year.

"I have to think of the money," he said. "That sounds bad, but you only get to play so long. Every kid growing up wants to play pro ball and I want to give it a try if I get the opportunity."

"It all depends on what kind of year I have and the offer."

His experience last summer gave him a view of the life of a professional.

"We played almost every day all summer and traveled a good bit," Lemonds said. "It was like a close-knit minor league system."

"We had to have jobs so we wouldn't be classified as professionals. I had a job with the highway department but I only worked when I had the time. It wasn't a real trying job."

Lemons' boyhood idol was Willie Mays, who plays for the same Giant team that drafted him.

"I always dreamed about playing against Mays," he said. "It was coincidental that I was drafted by the Giants."

But by more than coincidence, it could be that Lemonds will be Mays' teammate before the Say-Hey Kid hangs up his spikes.
