UCLA Wins It All, Downs Heels 78-55

By LARRY KEITH
of The Daily Tar Heel Staff

LOS ANGELES, Calif.—North Carolina got a first hand look at one of the great teams in Collegiate basketball history here Saturday night, and it was left with a 78-55 affirmative impression.

UCLA, the superior in every respect, captured its second straight NCAA championship and fourth in five years.

The Tar Heels, who spent the first half in their four corners offense but played the second half straight, offered little opposition to Lew Alcindor, whose 7-2 presence dominates as no other college player ever has, was enough by himself. He scored 34 points and gathered in 16 rebounds, both game highs.

North Carolina entered the contest with a 28-3 record and fourth national ranking. Despite the loss the Tar Heels can lay a valid claim to an end of season notch just behind the Bruins.

Both UCLA, now 29-1, and Ohio State defeated formerly unbeaten Houston in this tournament, with the Cougars' second loss coming in the night's consolation game, 89-85.

After the first twenty minutes of championship play the Tar Heels were behind by ten, 32-22.

They came out for the second half in the more orthodox style which had carried them through both the Atlantic Coast and Eastern Regional tournaments.

As of the first two minutes and twelve seconds of the period it worked. The Tar Heels sliced the deficit to seven, 34-27, by attacking the middle offensively and pressing defensively.

UCLA, however, caught on and pulled ahead.

Ahead 38-29 with five minutes gone the Bruins got baskets from Lucius Allen, reserve Kenny Heitz, Mike Warren and Alcindor that increased the margin to 44-29.

Matters got worse and worse as the Bruins flashed some of the form which had destroyed Houston the night before, 101-69.

UCLA began to work more frequently to Alcindor, setting the giant up for easy lay-ins with high arch passes over defender Rusty Clark's head.

The 6-11 Clark's play was affected more than anyone else's by Alcindor.

He had several shots blocked, including two in a row when UCLA pulled ahead for good early in the last half.

Clark finished with a team high eight rebounds, but only nine points.

All-American Larry Miller, at the end of a brilliant three-year career, scored 14 points before coming out with 2:41 to play.

UCLA Coach John Wooden began pulling his starters at the five minute mark when superlative guards Allen and Warren took their seats.

Allen left with 11 points to make him the only other Bruin in double figures.

Alcindor was removed with 3:07 to play and UCLA leading 70-48.

The margin got as far as 25 points when both starting teams were in, and had reached 78-48, with 1:03 remaining.

Alcindor and the Bruin defense had been the outstanding features of UCLA's attack all season, and the first half showed why.

Bruins controlled the tap and sixteen seconds later Allen's 15-footer opened the scoring. Carolina came down court and immediately set up in its four corner attack, indicating that the Tar Heels, if nothing else, had originally planned to keep the score low and the margin close.

The Bruins had difficulty adjusting to the strategy at first. They fell behind 5-3 when Scott drove all the way in off a turnover.

The rest of the game belonged to UCLA. Allen hit a free throw to bring the Bruins within one and then Lynn Shackelford, shooting from in close, gave UCLA a permanent lead at 6-5 with 15:02 remaining.

Carolina managed to keep the margin reasonable however, despite 12 turnovers and even after Alcindor got behind Clark for eight straight points that sent UCLA in control by nine, 23-14.

Miller, who scored 11 points in the period, took charge next to score six consecutive points. The last two came on a fast break that brought the Heels within five, 23-18 with 4:45 showing on the clock

The Bruins extended their lead to as much as 12 before the period ended

Led by Alcindor who made seven of ten shots and scored 16 points, UCLA shot 61 per cent for the half, but 52 per cent for the game.

North Carolina's accuracy both from the floor and at the foul line was way off. The Tar Heels were 22 for 63 and 11 for 19.

Drug Charge Arrest Made

A 19-year-old UNC freshman, Lewis Byers Jackson, was arrested at his dormitory, Hinton James, at 1:40 a.m. Friday and charged with illegal possession of marijuana.

The warrant for his arrest was drawn up in Durham and served by Chapel Hill Detective Howard Pendergraph at the request of Durham Detective Wallace Upchurch.

Jackson lives in Durham, at 2634 Pickett Rd.

He was taken to Durham and released after posting $1000 bond pending a hearing in District Court scheduled for April 3.

The arrest here makes him the fourth Durham resident in two days arrested by the city's police for illegal possession of the drug.

Detective Upchurch directed an investigation which led to the arrest of three Durham men Thursday night under the charge.

The large scale investigation is continuing, Durham Detective Capt. Ed Atkins said, and more arrests may follow in the police's attempt to curb marijuana possession among school students.

"We're playing it by ear, as we come to it," he said of the crackdown. Marijuana is the primary concern of the investigation, he added.

Howard Miller, Chairman of the Men's Honor Court, said that under the present drug policy no action will be taken by the student court for drug convictions.

"A case will first be referred to the Infirmary for its medical implications, if any," Miller remarked.

If the University decides to bring any charges they will be heard by a student-faculty-administrative board.

This is in accord with the policy statement concerning the illicit possession and use of certain drugs that was put into effect last December. The policy was passed by the Student Legislature and approved by the University administration and students.

"The fundamental concern and responsibility relative to the use of drugs is constructive rehabilitation," the policy states. This entails "a program of educational and medical consultation" which operates "within the limits of" drug laws.

Miller described this policy as one which treats drug abuse as "somewhat of a psychiatric case." In this respect the Student Health Service is employed for "ongoing medical consultation."

The judiciary board which review University charges in drug cases is composed of two students, two faculty members and the Dean of Students.

45 Undergo SLDC Training

Forty-five students go to Rocky Mount on a retreat this weekend to tackle the problem of how to relate meaningfully individuals or to groups.

The retreat is sponsored by the Student Leadership Development Commission of Student Government.

SLDC is attacking the problem by use of sensitivity training programs in which the 5 potential leaders "become more aware of his own feelings and the problems or others so he can relate meaningfully on a person to person and person to group bases," according to Noel Duvivant, chairman of SLDC.

SLDC held a retreat similar to the one they are having this weekend on March 8 to 10. After the sensitivity training workshop on leadership styles is tentatively scheduled for March 28 and April 4. The workshop will consist of a three hour session each day led by Dr. Douglas Sessoms.

After workshop will be held in the future which will concentrate on styles in leadership. Dr. Eugene Watson will lead the workshop.

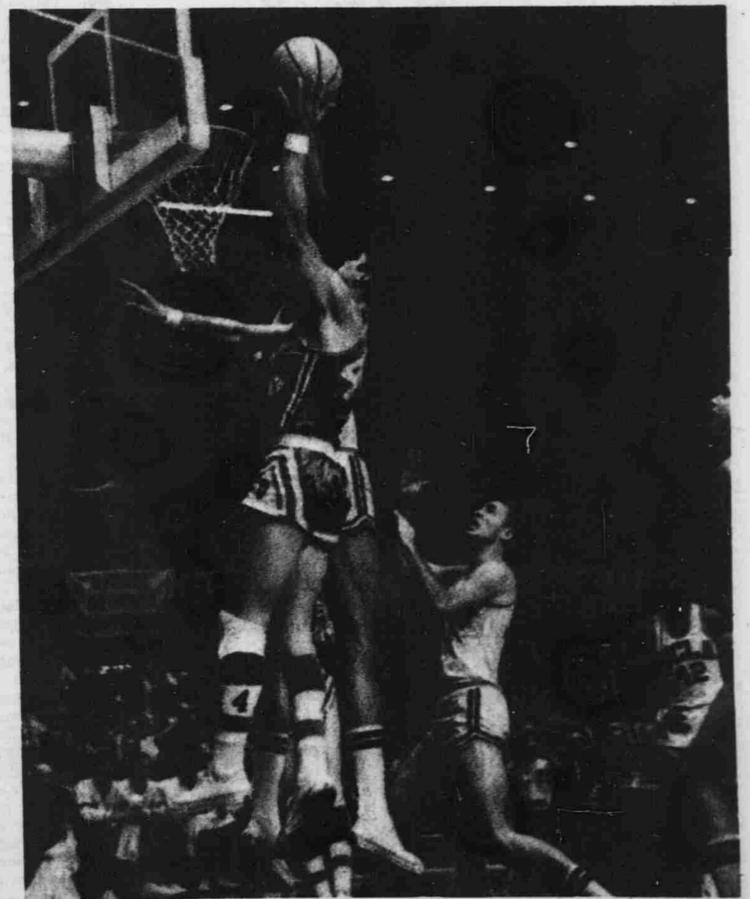

The idea of sensitivity training on a college campus is a revolutionary idea according to Duvivant. Only seven students in the program had undergone any kind of such training. The training of these seven had been in either Bethel, Me., Atlanta, Ga., in national programs which emphasized sensitivity training in connection with managerial positions.

The Student Leadership Training Commission (SLDC) came into being last fall when a group of concerned students and faculty met to discuss the need for leadership development on campus.

The group decided the best way to approach the problem was to hold planning sessions. Four public meetings were held during November and December which were attended by 100 students from all areas of campus activities.

In the public meetings, the group decided to submit a proposal to Sears-Roebuck Foundation for a $2500 grant to finance a sensitivity training program (commonly known as T-grouping) and to hold
