A TH Interview

Candidate's Views

By JODY BAKER
Tar Heel Staff Writer

(An exclusive interview for WAAA Radio News Staff by Mike Almond, a UNC student.)

Senator Eugene McCarthy said that he would be glad to clear up any misunderstandings concerning important issues last Thursday, July 18th.

McCarthy was pleased with his reception in Raleigh. When asked whether he felt he had gained the support of Gov. Dan Moore and the convention delegation, McCarthy replied, "I came merely to meet them, not to solicit support."

Concerning the tobacco issue, which is important to many industries and livelihoods in North Carolina, McCarthy said, "The public has a right to know the risks involved."

However, he felt that caution must be taken not to overstate the case or cause panic. "The choice of whether to heed or disregard the risks involved in smoking must be left up to the individual," he said.

The Senator felt that the most vital ingredients for a McCarthy victory were the intensity of his support and the quantitative support he received.

"I don't think you can predict politics that precisely, at least not the Democratic Party this year," replied McCarthy when asked if he could predict the number of roll calls the Democratic Convention will go through. He doesn't feel that there will be more than two ballots, however.

McCarthy feels that Wallace and his American Independence Party are likely to hurt the Republicans in the South and the Democrats to a more serious degree in the North. He doesn't feel that the split will throw the final decision into the House of Representatives.

"The popular vote difference may be small, but the electoral vote will be such that one or the other candidate will clearly win," said McCarthy.

What should we do in Viet Nam is the question most people have been asking, McCarthy said. "I think we're doing all the wrong things in Viet Nam. The question is what to do about it."

"We are not negotiating on anything that is realistic. We have to be prepared to accept a new government in Viet Nam to bring the war to an end and to reconcile the various factions."

"Then, with some kind of international control for five or ten years, we must strive to bring peace to that part of the world."
