

It Was Like Last Year

Saturday Was Ward's Day

Maryland's victory over the Tar Heels on Saturday was reminiscent of a year gone by.

On October 12, 1967, the Terapins visited North Carolina, and on that day the tables were very much reversed.

The Tar Heels had lost 12 straight and vowed on that Saturday to end the "dirty dozen."

The Heels defeated the Terps, giving rookie coach Bill Dooley his first victory.

Before Saturday's game, Maryland had lost not 12, but 16 games in a row, and their fans were even hungrier than the throng that was on hand in Chapel Hill when the Tar Heels ended their streak.

Maryland coach Bob Ward, in his second year, was still looking for his first victory. His Terps went 0-9 last season.

"I know how happy Bob Ward is today," a dejected Bill

Dooley said after the game. "I got my first win against him and now he gets his first against me."

How Bob Ward felt after the game was reflected in the screams and chants of the 25,000 Maryland fans that swarmed onto the field at the gun.

Dooley tried to meet Ward at midfield to congratulate him, but he couldn't find the Terp coach in the sea of people.

Ward was riding the shoulders of the ecstatic fans that were asking for his head just the week before.

In front of the field house at the south end of Byrd Stadium Ward raised his fist and shouted to the crowd. Fans near by tried to rip his shirt off. Hundreds of people still on the playing field were busy disposing of both goal posts.

It was only a victory—and over lowly North Carolina—but in College Park it was 1953 all over again, the year the Terps won the National championship.

The ironic part of the whole day was that Maryland should not have won the game.

The Tar Heels aren't that good, granted, but they are still better than the Terps. If they were to play again, it probably would be a different story.

But it was the untangible combination of the roar of the home crowd and the search for a victory that inspired the Terps to play over their heads.

Maryland has several outstanding players. Alan Pastrana showed that he is truly one of the nation's finest collegiate quarterbacks. Billy Lovett proved his worth as a runner, although he lacks the speed a great back should have. Junior college transfer John King displayed great some moves and flanker Rick Carlson made three sensational grabs.

But other than that, Maryland showed nothing. The Terps defense was terrible and if Gayle Bomar hadn't lost his footing on that crucial fourth down play, the Tar Heels would have driven to a decisive and probably winning touchdown.

The Maryland offense was all Pastrana and Lovett and just simply proved how inconsistent the Tar Heel defensive unit is.

"I don't think our defense did the kind of job today that it did against Vanderbilt last week," Dooley said. He was right, it didn't.

But Carolina had many bright spots. Gayle Bomar played a sensational game rolling up 271 yards of total offense. Don McCauley ran like he will for the next two years. And Ev Cowan had another tremendous performance, including downing a punt on the one yard line that was a beauty.

In short, it was just another step in the long climb for the Tar Heels. Saturday was Bob Ward's day, but Bill Dooley will have another of his own soon. Just wait and see.

Strong Florida Is Heavy Favorite

Unbeaten Florida, one of the nation's top football powers, rules a heavy favorite to beat North Carolina here Saturday in the first meeting of the teams since 1947.

The Tar Heels thrashed the Gators, 35-7, in that 1947 meeting and went on to sweep six straight games. Carolina leads the overall series with Florida with four wins against one loss and a tie.

But there's no question who's supposed to win the renewal this week. Coach Ray Graves' Gators are rated a Southeastern Conference title threat and have one of their strongest teams in years.

"It's quite a challenge to us to play a great team like Florida," says Carolina Coach Bill Dooley. "I'm sure that our coaching staff and our players will have extra incentive in this one."

Despite the loss to Maryland, Dooley said he was impressed with the play of many of his players. "We did some good things at Maryland," he says.

Dooley also praised the play of the offensive line. Most of these linemen scored well in grading of the films.

Cagers Open Drills; Face Big Challenge

North Carolina, kingpin of Eastern basketball the past two years, open practice today for a new season, facing the greatest challenge of any Tar Heel team in history.

Coach Dean Smith's Tar Heels have swept two consecutive Atlantic Coast Conference championships and captured national acclaim by advancing into the NCAA semifinals in 1967 and into the finals against UCLA last season.

"The results of the past two seasons have been extraordinary," says Smith. "And because of this, our team this year faces a tremendous challenge. We lost an All-America player in Larry Miller. It is impossible to replace a player of his caliber."

The Carolina goal this year, as usual, will be to win the ACC championship. But in order to do it, the Tar Heels will have to buck the law of averages and some awesome hexes.

No ACC team has won three crowns in a row since North Carolina State did it in 1954-55-56. "That was before the other teams in the league built their programs to catch up with State," says Smith. "The ACC is so well-balanced now it's extremely difficult for any team to dominate the picture."

Carolina certainly has dominated the scene the past two years. Here are some of the things the Tar Heels have accomplished since the start of the 1966-67 campaign:

1. UNC has compiled a record of 30-4 against ACC competition in the past two years.

2. Carolina has beaten Big Four rivals (Duke, Wake Forest and North Carolina State) 16 times in the past 17 games. The Tar Heels had an unprecedented 14-game
