

Chansky's Choices...

By Art Chansky

Two Southwest Conference foes meet on Saturday to renew a rivalry that has long been one of the fiercest in the country.

Texas and Arkansas collide in Austin and, although both have sputtered over the last two years, this game is still as ferocious as an old Hatfield-McCoy feud.

Neither the Longhorns or the Razorbacks have won the conference title they used to share exclusively since 1965, but it makes no difference. Both teams could be winless and the game would still draw a rowdy and hysterical capacity crowd.

To every Arkansan the Texas game is the "only" game, and to every Texan, a loss to Arkansas is worse than the worst cattle thief.

In many Texas-Arkansas battles, the big fireworks haven't taken place on the field but in the stands or in the parking lot outside the stadium.

There is hardly a hog or steer in Texas and Arkansas that doesn't know when the two schools will meet.

A Fayetteville, Ark. church once displayed this sign on the morning of the game several years back: THOU SHALL LOVE THY NEIGHBOR AS THYSELF—REGARDLESS, BEAT HELL OUT OF TEXAS.

Texas, through tradition, has always been synonymous with grind-out, ball control football. Up until two years ago if the Longhorns threw five passes in a game it was a wide open affair.

Sensational linemen were always the trademark of coach Darrel Royal. "Your backs are only as good as your linemen," Royal says, and his backs ran three holes opened by the likes of Scott Appelton, Pat Culpepper and Tommy Nobis.

The typical Texas quarterback was Duke Carlisle, a good runner and adequate passer that led the Longhorns to three bowl games in his three years at Austin. But who remembers Duke Carlisle? He never made it as a pro, and now he's probably punching cattle in the Texas Panhandle.

Two years ago, Texas came up with a quarterback that forced Royal to alter his offense.

Bill Bradley is now a senior and is hoping to play his first season that won't be interrupted by injuries.

Unlike Carlisle, Bradley is an adequate runner but better passer, and because of this Royal was compelled to open up his game.

But Bradley was injured throughout the last two seasons and as a result, Texas sputtered. So Royal has gone back to a ball control offense. He has brought his wide receivers in tight and has returned to the wing-T that made Texas so feared in the early and middle 60's.

But the Longhorns have had their troubles so far this season. Picked as the favorite in the Southwest Conference, Texas tied Houston and was upset by Texas Tech before beating Oklahoma State and Oklahoma the past two weeks. The victory over the Sooners indicated the 'Horns are ready for the undefeated Razorbacks this Saturday.

Coach Frank Broyles had his first losing season last year since coming to Arkansas in 1958.

This season Broyles copied Royal and opened up his offense to suit sophomore slinger Bill Montgomery.

Montgomery has obliged by leading the Razorbacks to four straight victories, including conference wins over TCU and Baylor.

Splendid tailback David Dickey has picked up where he left off left season when he was the nation's second leading scorer. Dickey threw two touchdown passes and scored another in Arkansas' 56-13 romp over Tulsa.

But the Razorbacks have yet to face formidable Southwest Conference competition. When they leave Austin Saturday night, they'll know just how good they really are.

It may be Texas in the stands and out in the parking lot, but on the field it's the Razorbacks by a close shave.

Heels Must Be Supermen Says Dooley

By OWEN DAVIS
DTH Sports Editor

It will take a "super-human effort" for Carolina to beat Florida at Kenan Stadium Saturday, said Coach Bill Dooley.

"Anything less than an ultimate effort won't do it," Dooley told a weekly news conference Tuesday.

"Florida is one of the top teams in the nation," he said, "and they certainly have an outstanding team."

"They are ranked seventh in the nation this week, and they deserve their rating."

The Fighting Gators, undefeated in four games, are leading contenders for the Southeastern Conference championship.

They have defeated Air Force 23-20, Mississippi State 31-7, Florida State 9-6 and Tulane 24-3 so far.

Florida has a consensus all-American in fullback Larry Smith, a 6-3, 220 line-buster.

"Smith can do everything," said Dooley. "He can run over you, around you and can throw and catch passes."

"He's a tremendous football player."

"Florida pursues very well. They are typical of Southeastern Conference teams—they play good defense."

Dooley also hinted that several changes may be made in the Carolina offense and defense, but would not reveal his plans.

Last week's Maryland loss was mainly due to a "defensive letdown," said Dooley.

"We didn't play good defense," he said, "and we couldn't come up with the big play."

"If you don't play respectable defense, you don't win."

Dooley said the offense, which scored 24 points, "played well for the most part but again couldn't make the big play on fourth down and short yardage."

The UNC coach praised quarterback Gayle Bomar, halfback Don McCauley and tight end Tony Blanchard for their Maryland performances.

Smith is joined in the backfield by halfback Tom Christian, who averages over six yards a carry.

Dooley noted that Larry

GUY DENNIS

JIM YARBOROUGH

LARRY RENTZ

TOM CHRISTIAN

Rentz, the Gators' starting quarterback early in the season, has been shifted to flanker and southpaw Jackie Ekdahl has taken over as signal caller.

"Rentz has great speed and moves," he said. "He's a versatile athlete and at flanker gives them a balanced offense."

Carolina's coach was particularly high on tight end Jim Yarborough and offensive guard Guy Dennis.

"Yarborough weighs 258," said Dooley, "and they like to throw it to him as well as run behind him. Dennis was a pre-season all-America pick, and he's big too at 6-4, 240."

"Florida is explosive. They can hit you—bam—and it's two or three touchdowns."

The Gator defensive is led by "an outstanding secondary" according to Dooley.

"They have great speed in the secondary," he said. "All their backs can run the 100 in 10 flat. They held Tulane to 1 completion out of 14 passes last week."

3 Fourth Period Goals Cinch 4-3 Win

Booters Edge Clemson

CLEMSON, S.C. — Carolina, outshot for the first time all season, scored three goals in the final quarter to beat Clemson here Tuesday, 4-3.

Tar Heel goalie Tim Haigh made 14 saves, but his three game shutout streak was broken by the Tigers.

Carolina now has a 4-0 season record.

UNC was outshot 24-15 by Clemson. The Tigers kept it close until the end when Bill Kohler kicked a late goal after an assist from John Kuchmay for the decisive point.

Kuchmay gave UNC an early lead when he scored an unassisted goal in the opening period. Kuchmay went from the right side to the left corner and booted a 25-yarder with 12:15 gone.

That advantage held up through the first half, but Clemson tied it in the third quarter.

The Tigers' Frank Schimdt kicked a late period goal with 20:40 gone, and the Tar Heels had to scramble in the closing minutes.

Mark Packard put UNC ahead with just 1:01 gone in the last quarter when he scored after an assist from David Feffer.

But Clemson's Mark

Rubick, who scored twice in the last period, evened the game at 2-2 with just over four minutes played in the quarter.

Neither team could get close for over 10 minutes until Carolina mixed it up in front of the Tiger goalie box to score its final two points.

McKay McKinnon got the first goal with an assist from Packard, and after Rubick tied it up again with 18:30 gone, Kohler booted the game-winning point.

Culver Called Great Asset

The greatest asset to Carolina football next year may well be Bert Culver, this year's freshman fullback.

According to Coach Ron DeMelfi, "Culver has as good a chance as anybody to be next year's starting varsity fullback."

The 6-3, 210 lb. Tar Baby carried the ball 18 times for 78 yards against N.C. State in the fresh opener. An injury held him out of the Virginia game.

Though he only played offense in the State game, the freshman coach may also use him as a linebacker in upcoming contests.

"He definitely has the ability to go both ways," said DeMelfi. "He's big enough and can move."

The former Delaware high school all-American was the most sought after football player on the East coast last year.

When asked why he chose Chapel Hill over his other offers Culver replied, "Carolina is now engaged in a massive rebuilding program. This program provides me with an opportunity for participation which I would not have had if I had chosen to attend a school that was already a football power."

DeMelfi is most impressed by Culver's "authoritative ball carrying" and strong blocking. This ability to both block and run makes Culver one of the most versatile backfield men Carolina has had in many years.

His only weakness at this point seems to be inexperience. The coach added, however, that this inexperience stems from the fact that the freshman football team at Carolina is used primarily as a sparring team for the varsity.

"This makes it very difficult for the freshman to get in any practice as a unit," he said. Discussing the transition from high school to college football, Culver stated, "Of course the competition is a lot tougher, but the main thing is that the coaching is much more professional. The combination of the two cannot help but improve a football player."

And the addition of Bert Culver to the Carolina backfield cannot help but improve their chances in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

Virginia Halfback Frank Quayle

... Leads Conference Rushers, Scorers

Quayle And Virginia Lead Conference In Scoring And Offensive Statistics

By CHRIS COBBS

Virginia makes its bid for the Atlantic Coast Conference lead Saturday, and statistics indicate that the Cavaliers will be successful.

This week's figures are dominated by Virginia and Virginians. The team ranks first in four of eight categories, and Cavalier tailback Frank Quayle paces individual performers.

The Cavaliers, who play N.C. State in the ACC's feature game Saturday, rest their hopes on an offense that easily outranks all others in the league.

Virginia is at the top of the list in rushing offense, total offense and scoring offense.

All candidates for the freshman swimming team should report to the Bowman Gray Pool on Monday at 3:30.

State follows the Cavs in advancing the ball on the ground. Stats reveal a Virginia edge of 355 to 220 average yards per game.

In total offense UVA. leads Duke by a decisive margin, averaging 497 yards a game to the Blue Devil's 364.

Indicative of Virginia's firepower is its scoring average of 36 points per outing. State and Maryland trail with 22 markers a game and Carolina is even further back at 16.3.

Wake Forest is the defensive leader. It has yielded the fewest yards in total and pass defense and has given up the fewest points.

As in previous weeks, UNC looks impressive in the defensive listings until the scoring averages are examined. The Tar Heels are second in the ACC in pass defense and third in total defense, but only Duke has a worse mark than Carolina's average yield of 27.5 points a game.

Virginia's Quayle solidified his position as the ACC's top rusher. He now has 592 yards and an average pick-up of 9.9 yards a carry.

Billy Lovett of Maryland is second among the runners. Anderson, only 14 yards behind Lovett in rushing, is tied with teammate Quayle for the scoring lead.

The pendulum swung back the way of Duke's Leo Hart in his fight with Wake's Freddie Summers for the total offense lead.

Hart recaptured the advantage with 819 yards compared to Summers' 779.

The Duke sophomore also retained his lead in passing with 56 completions and 816 yards.
